15,000 BRITISH WOMEN PARADE, OPPOSING STRIKES

Society Matrons on Horseback Lead Great Demonstration, Undaunted by Boos of Idle.

THREATS OF VIOLENCE FAIL TO MATERIALIZE

Resolution Adopted at Albert Hall Demands Resources of Nation Be Pledged to End Disputes.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 17.—Fourteen bobbed-haired young women of the aristocracy and the wives of many of Great Britain's wage earners launched a movement today designed to ease the industrial situation, and gave London a new thrill in a four-mile street demonstration culminating in a anti-strike meeting in Albert Hall, where the leaders vented their feelings.

There were hatless women, women with shawls over their heads, women in furs, good, bad and indifferent, women wearing the colorful costumes of Scotland and Wales and other parts of the country, but that part of the picture which attracted most attention was composed of mounted members of the fashionable Waddon Hunt Club in riding habits who headed the procession. Most of them appeared to look up on the event as a great adventure, and even looked smilingly upon the handfuls of unemployed at various points along the line of march who booed them.

About the only fun the unemployed had was hurling questions and exclamations over the heads of the crowd, such as "what do you know about work?" "There go the won't works, the never-works;" "I say, look at the blighters in the tailormade riding habits," and "you don't know what a kitchen looks like."

Little Opposition.

The threats of the unemployed to break up the parade, which the women's guild of the empire had been planning for months, did not materialize. Excepting flurries along the edge of Hyde Park, where little crowds carrying red flags attempted to interrupt the marchers, there was not enough trouble to make the policemen cease smiling.

The action of the women was in the way of a protest against strikes and lockouts, on the ground that additional economic difficulties for the country should be avoided. Banners were carried bearing such inscriptions, as "The Only Cure for Unemployment is Work," "No More Politics in Industry."

So far as police reports show there was not a hat smashed anywhere, and only a few pieces of millinery and some ribbons and shawls ruffled by the curious onlookers and April showers and gusts of wind. Scotland Yard, however, took no chances, in view of the rumors that trouble would surely develop.

15,000 Women March.

About 15,000 women marching four and five abreast participated, and on this basis it is estimated there was one bobbie for every 10 women.

As regards sympathizers, a better route could hardly have been selected as it led through Trafalgar Square, Pall Mall and St. James street, where the windows of the best known men's and women's clubs were filled, and these spectators shouted success to the marchers in their endeavors to reform the industrial world. It thence proceeded to the West End, the fashionable residential district.

Some of the most characteristic banners read:

"Strikes mean starvation; peace brings plenty," "Hard work and no nonsense, "Trust the people and defy the cranks." "The strike is a two-edged sword."

"Gen." Flora Drummond presided over the huge meeting in Albert Hall, which unanimously adopted a resolution demanding that the resources of the nation shall no longer be wasted in strikes and lockouts, but that all industrial disputes shall be settled by negotiation and arbitration.

400 Men Walk Out, but Later Agree to Arbitration.

While the woman's demonstration against strikes and lockouts was in progress today, several hundred men employed by the London, Midland and Scottish railways, staged a sudden strike. The men struck over a dispute concerning the railway company's decision to shorten hours with consequent lower wages. About 400 strikers paraded to railway headquarters at Euston, where they presented their grievances. Later they returned to work pending discussion by their leaders with the railway heads.

Population of St. Louis Estimated at 842,614

Total Arrived at by Local Agencies Employing a Detailed Survey Method for First Time.

St. Louis now has an estimated population of 842,614, it is shown by a careful study just completed.

This makes a better showing for the city than the 1925 estimate of the Census Bureau, which was 821,543. The bureau's figure was arrived at by calculations based on the rate of growth between the 1910 and 1920 censuses, while the new local estimate was reached by St. Louis agencies employing a detailed method for the first time.

The latter estimate was made by representatives of the research department of the Post-Dispatch, the commercial engineering department of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and the City Plan Commission, functioning as a committee of the Community Council. This group was occupied for several months.

In going about its work the committee divided St. Louis in a new way, creating 26 homogeneous districts, each of which was regarded as constituting a neighborhood community of kindred interest and type of population. Then each district was studied, utilizing data of various sorts in possession of the committee members and gathered from public and other sources.

Representatives of each of the three organizations on the committee then made independent calculations of the population of each district, and where these estimates showed much variation they were reconciled by further study. Thus the total was reached.

The 1920 census gave St. Louis a population of 772,897. The 1925 Census Bureau estimate for the metropolitan area, or greater St. Louis, which includes St. Louis, St. Louis County, East St. Louis and the Tri-Cities, was 1,026,715. That included 106,073 for St. Louis County, where there has been much growth in recent years in the residential suburbs close to the city. Lately frequent unofficial estimates of the county population have ranged from 135,000 to 150,000.

CHARGE AT DOG SHOW THAT BOSTON TERRIER WAS DYED

Animal Withdrawn by Owner When Chemical Analysis of Hair Is Demanded.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—Gold Top, a Boston terrier, entered in the exhibition of the Kennel Club of Philadelphia, was taken to his New York home today because a rival exhibitor said he was not what he was described to be.

A charge was made that he was dyed and should not have been entered in the class for mahogany brindle Boston terries. The charge came before committee today, and when it was proposed that some of the hair be shaved from Gold Top's head and back for the purpose of having it chemically analyzed, there was a vigorous protest. Evan Ramsey, representing Mrs. F. S. Wadman, New York, called her on the telephone and she ordered the dog sent home at once. She defied the charges, challenging anyone to submit proofs.

QUEEN MARY REFUSES TO SANCTION SHORT SKIRTS

Shopkeepers Object, but Women Presented at Court Must Obey Her Edict.

LONDON, April 17.—The Lord Chamberlain's office and fashionable modistes of the West End of London and in Paris are at great variance as to how long the skirt of a fashionable gown should be.

"Four or five inches from the ground," is the edict of Queen Mary which has remained unchanged for several years in spite of the exposed knees which Paris designers have been favoring.

Women presented at the Court of St. James have been compelled to listen to the dress regulations set forth by the Lord Chamberlain's office and there is no indication that there will be any modification in the rules about skirt lengths.

STATE PROPERTY TAX RATE RAISED ONE CENT

Increase Due to Boost in Soldier Bonus Bond Levy From 2 to 3 Cents.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 17.—The State property tax rate for 1926 will be 12 cents on the $100 assessed valuation, one cent more than the 1925 rate, as the result of an order by State Auditor Thompson increasing the levy for State soldier bonus bonds from two cents to three, to meet increased requirements for bond retirement and interest.

This change in the State rate will mean an increase of slightly less than $500,000 in direct property taxes to be paid the State this year. The order for the increase has just been certified by Thompson to County collectors. It is probable the bond levy again will be increased in 1927, to four cents, to take care of the increasing sinking fund requirements.

Bonus warrants for approximately $18,300,000 have been paid to Missourians who served in the World War, from the proceeds of two State bond issues aggregating $18,600,000. Several thousand disputed claims for bonus awards still are pending. The last of the bonds to pay the bonus claims will not be retired until 1944.

The tax levy for the soldier bonus bonds is not fixed in the soldier bonus law. It merely directs the state auditor each year to determine the sinking fund requirements and fix a levy that will meet those requirements.

Other Items.

Other items in the 12 cent direct property levy are five cents for the State general revenue fund, three cents for State blind pensions, and one cent for interest on certificates of indebtedness of the State to the public school and seminary funds. These rates are fixed by the Legislature.

Thus far only $115,000 of the $18,600,000 outstanding soldier bonus bonds have been retired, and the heavy retirements will begin in 1928, at an annual rate varying from $1,630,000 upward. However, the interest on the bonds, since they were issued, has totaled $912,000 a year.

Twelve hundred and fifty cars were used daily in the same periods last year, when the number of passengers was less by 269,167. In the last quarter of 1925 the railways carried 2,312,000 more passengers than in the first quarter of 1926, with 140 fewer cars in operation daily.

Balconies and Windows Black With Cheering Thousands — Fascisti Lined Up Along Route.

TRIUMPHAL GREETING FROM HARBOR CRAFT

Flowers Thrown From Roofs of Houses—Series of Ovations From Gaeta to the Eternal City.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 17.—Premier Mussolini returned to Rome this evening. He came back from Tripoli, where he had spent nearly a week, with mind filled to overflowing with the possibilities of Italy's great colony and with joyous memories of the welcome that had been accorded him there. He seemed hardly prepared for the great reception extended to him by the Eternal City. Although unofficial, it was tremendous.

The vast square around the station was crowded with people shouting "Viva Mussolini," "Viva Duce," while all the balconies and windows of the buildings, decorated with flags and lights, were black with cheering thousands.

All the Fascisti in the capital wore black shirts and the most prominent among their number were lined up along the route, where the premier passed, saluting him in ancient Roman fashion, uttering their war cries. Mussolini responded in his usual rigid and austere manner.

Walks in Crowd.

When he passed through the Via Nazionale, the main thoroughfare, he walked amid scores of thousands, clapping and shouting so loudly that the sound reverberated like thunder, to the Capitoline Hill, where the national flag was hoisted while the historic bell of the municipality pealed forth.

The dreadnaught Conte Di Cavour carried Mussolini from Tripoli to Gaeta, a little more than 100 miles down the coast from Rome, where it arrived this morning. Mussolini stood on the bridge and received a triumphal greeting from all the craft in the harbor, and from thousands of persons not only residing at that port, but surrounding towns and villages. Salvos were fired from the guns and the sailors lining the decks and rigging of ships saluted vociferously.

Series of Ovations.

The Premier landed and was met by the civil and military authorities of the entire province. He reviewed the guard of honor and took an automobile for the station. Although large contingents of Fascist militia were concentrated at Gaeta, the multitude broke through all cordons in a delirious effort to approach the Duce and see him at close quarters. Those on the roofs of houses threw flowers, waved handkerchiefs, parasols and fans, while others shouted from their points of vantage.

Mussolini was evidently pleased with the warmth of the demonstration and raised his right arm gravely while passing under the several floral arches which bore the inscription, "Viva Mussolini." As his special train started for Rome there were further cheers and frantic applause.

From Gaeta to Rome was a series of ovations. The inhabitants descended from the mountains, came in from the plains and flocked from the seashore. They met him at every one of the small stations and at each he was greeted by the authorities and presented with flowers by women and children and fruit by the peasants.

FRANCE ACCEPTS TENTATIVE TERMS TO PAY U. S. DEBT

Ambassador Berenger Authorized to Sign Agreement on Basis Agreed to by Secretary Mellon.

AWAITS APPROVAL OF FUNDING BODY

Annual Installments of Slightly More Than $25,000,000 Are Contemplated by Paris Cabinet.

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, April 17.—When Ambassador Berenger of France goes before the American Debt-Funding Commission he will have full power to sign an agreement. He is the whole French debt commission in himself.

If the American commission accepts the tentative understanding between Berenger and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the French debt issue can be disposed of forthwith.

Berenger went to Washington on a 6-month mandate to arrive at some basis of accord which former Finance Minister Caillaux failed to reach, and it was considered unnecessary then to give him wider powers. Last week the French Government received from Berenger a detailed account of his conversations with Secretary Mellon and the possibility of acceptance of this tentative agreement by the American debt commission. After studying the plan as outlined by Berenger the Cabinet agreed to settle on this basis.

More Than $25,000,000 a Year.

Some details have been cabled to Paris newspapers from Washington and it is admtited in government circles that they are approximately correct. It is stated, however, that they have nothing but a tentative value, because the whole matter rests with the American Debt Commission. In fact, the French Government has been very careful about letting out information so as not to embarrass Berenger.

It has been intimated that the figure of $25,000,000 a year annually for the first five years, which has been reported in Washington, is somewhat lower than the actual payments to be made.

All the first payments are low as compared with the Caillaux proposals. Eagerness to get a settlement on a basis which it believed will have the effect of helping the franc is hardly concealed, but the government's disposition is to say as little as possible.

Public No Longer Worried.

The public also is no longer worried about getting the safeguard clause by which France, if necessary could cease payments, although the political opposition insists that such a safeguard is necessay to prevent Germany from stopping her reparation payments.

CANADIANS DENY BEER POLICY WORKS

Former Attorney-General of Ontario Testifies Government Control System Is Failure.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Spokesmen for the drys at the Senate's prohibition hearing today included Prof. Irving Fisher, economist, of Yale University; A. A. Stagg, for many years a football coach at the University of Chicago, and two Canadians who were brought forward to combat the wet testimony of their countrymen.

Fisher fired statistics in favor of bone-dryness with the rapidity and precision of a machine gun; Stagg defended prohibition and pleaded for a "moral wave" that would restore the old-time conception of family life, and the Canadians declared that the establishment of Government-controlled liquor dispensaries in parts of the dominion had been followed by a train of evils.

The absence of Senator Reed of Missouri from the committee room during a part of the afternoon session permitted the college men to get their statements into the record without cross-examination.

Reed Examines Canadians.

Both of the Canadians, however, were subjected by the Missourian to a searching quiz. Some of the edge was taken off the testimony of W. E. Raney, former attorney-general for the Province of Ontario by Reed's development of the fact that his arguments were based largely on second-hand information.

The cross-examination of Raney brought confirmation of the recent testimony of United States District Attorney Buckner of New York regarding large shipments of bootleg liquor from the dry United States into wet Canada. Raney told the committee that more liquor was crossing the border from the United States into Quebec than was being smuggled in the other direction.

Fisher asserted that prohibition had saved $6,000,000,000 to the people of the United States and that even if enforcement cost $1,000,000,000 a year it would be "well worth while, purely as an economic investment." He said that the drys had made a great tactical blunder in dropping their educational program and concentrating on a "mere law observance program."

"More Acute" Drinking at Yale.

Fisher then summarized the statements given him by his authorities. Frederick S. Jones, outgoing dean of Yale College, wrote that there was decidedly less drinking than before prohibition, but that the cases which he now encountered were "more acute." Jones said that the main trouble came at the great athletic events when large numbers of young alumni returned to the campus

C. W. Mendell, the incoming dean of Yale College, as quoted by the witness, said that there was more drinking of hard liquor than before prohibition. "In the old days," continued Dean Mendell, "the staple drink was beer, and I am inclined to think that it led to very little harm. The present drinking of hard liquor almost always results in trouble of some sort, so that scenes of public disgrace are rather worse than they used to be. The drinking is more occasional, but more disastrous. Personally, I am not a believer in prohibition."

Fay Campbell, secretary of the Yale University Christian Association, wrote that much less liquor was being consumed by Yale stu-

DEMON FLIVVER TRAPS VENDERS OF SHORT "GAS"

Inspector, in Ancient Car, Gets Evidence Against 31 Filling Stations.

Driving an old automobile with a tank under the front seat, Inspector of Weights and Measures Haley has been a big cash customer among gasoline filling stations for the last few days with the result that proprietors of 31 stations have been summoned to his office to explain why he got less gasoline than he paid for. Out of 86 stations visited, Haley said yesterday, these 31 were found to be delivering anywhere from 15 to 60 cubic inches per five gallons less than the amounts called for.

Haley's practice was to purchase gasoline as any other customer would do and then measure it. He determined upon the plan after receiving numerous complaints of short measure from automobile drivers. The penalty provided for this offense is a fine of $5 to $500, but offenders this type will escape with a warning to correct their measurements.

COUNTY BANK ROBBER HELD HERE CONFESSES

Richard Kneist, Chauffeur, Admits Part in $4200 Holdup in 1924.

Richard Kneist, 23 years old, who had been sought for 17 months as one of five men who robbed the Chesterfield Bank in St. Louis County of $4200, Nov. 12, 1924, was arrested yesterday and readily confessed his part in the holdup. He said he left St. Louis the day after the robbery and returned six weeks ago, thinking the police had "forgotten about the Chesterfield affair."

He got employment as a chauffeur for the Enterprise Cleaning and Dyeing Co., 4229 Easton avenue, and yesterday police received a tip that he was in the city. Detectives Murphy, Carten and Hunt took him from his truck at Newstead and Easton avenues at 1 p. m. yesterday.

Kneist was implicated in the confession of Thomas Dickens, 24, who was sentenced to 15 years in prison for participating in the robbery, in March, 1925. Edward Williams, a Negro, is serving a 12-year term for the robbery, and Robert Hill, Negro pickpocket, is under $15,000 bond awaiting trial. Hill avoided an early trial for the robbery by submitting to imprisonment for pocket-picking. He was released recently but rearrested and compelled to furnish $15,000 bond on the robery charge.

Kneist, the police say, insisted the bank robbery was the first crime in which he had a part. He was persuaded to drive the car, because of his experience as a chauffeur, and received $385 as his share of the loot.

Kneist said the money was divided in a confectionery on Easton avenue and that he went to Chicago immediately after the robbery. He worked there as a chauffeur until he decided to return to St. Louis. He said he knew nothing of the whereabouts of his brother, Anthony, who is also sought in the case.

The percentage per 100,000 of policy holders was 3.9 per cent. In the same quarter last year there were 121 such deaths and a rate of 3.0 per 100,000.

ANTI-SALOON BODY WITHHOLDS WORD AGAINST ANDREWS

Legislative Committee of Dry Organization Holds Conference but Takes No Action.

MELLON TO IGNORE CLAMOR FOR OUSTER

Satisfied With Prohibition Enforcement Chief's Beer Testimony at Senate Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—After a conference tonight the Legislative Committee of the Anti-Saloon League announced that it had no statement to make at the present time concerning the testimony of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, prohibition enforcement chief, before the Senate Prohibition Committee.

Some dry leaders have demanded that Andrews resign because of his opinion that the sale of non-intoxicating beer might prove an aid to prohibition enforcement. These demands have reached the Legislative Committee and have been considered at a series of meetings.

After the conference tonight, Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, chairman of the Legislative Committee, issued this statement:

"The Legislative Committee of the Antisaloon League of America has authorized no official statement concerning the testimony given at public hearing before the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary and the Legislative Committee has no statement to make at the present time."

Wheeler Signs Statement.

Besides Bishop Cannon, those signing the statement were Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Antisaloon League; Arthur J. Bargon of Kansas City; and Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington of Westerville, O., secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism. The other three members of the Legislative Committee are absent from Washington.

While attacks and defenses of Andrews were being made by dry and wet Senators, the Treasury let it be thoroughly understood that Secretary Mellon would stand behind his prohibition chief, no matter from what quarters he might be criticized because of his testimony. The official record of Andrews' statements to the Senate Committee has been carefully examined by Mellon.

"What other answer could anyone but a hypocrite have given," asked a high Treasury official. "It does not mean that Andrews or his administration is advocating a higher percentage of beer."

McKellar Demands Ouster.

Removal of Andrews from office and the taking of the administration of the prohibition laws out of the hands of Secretary Mellon were demanded today by Senator McKellar (Dem.) of Tennessee, one of the Senate drys. McKellar declared the evidence before the Senate Committee showed that "the present enforcement authorities are not in sympathy with the law and are not trying to enforce it."

Senator Edwards (Dem.) of New Jersey, a wet immediately came to the defense of Andrews. "Is an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to be removed from office because he has the moral strength to defy the Anti-Saloon League and tell the truth about the prohibition and its attendant evils, crimes and debaucheries?" he demanded.

"Andrews is both doing his duty and telling the whole truth, and nothing but the truth concerning prohibition, and if there is one thing the fanatical dry cannot face it is the truth—cold hard unconvertible facts."

Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon League, in a speech over radio station WMAL tonight, said the wets and not the drys, were afraid to face the facts.

"Facts are the last things the liquor interests wish to face," he said. "They cleverly shout the slogan, 'Face the Facts,' to create the impression that the drys are hiding something while they dodge the facts themselves. Their challenge is a brazen bluff."

Five Women to Govern Missouri Town for Year

Vigorous Campaign in De Kalb Results in Taking Management of Affairs Away From Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DE KALB, Mo., April 17.—This town, in the southern part of Buchanan County, has elected all women officers to run the city administration. Mayor, Police Judge and all the Council are women.

De Kalb, with a population of 500, holds an election each year. Sometimes there are two sides—then again there is often only one—the men's ticket.

Entered at Last Minute.

Such was the case this year when Rube Frakes, then Mayor, decided to run for office again. He started to St. Joseph to have the ticket printed in good spirits and feeling that there was no opposition. On the way, however, he was confronted by a group of women who demanded that they be allowed to enter a woman's ticket, before the official ballot cards went to the printers.

"Do you mean that?" said the Mayor.

"Sure we do," replied the women.

Mayor Frakes consented, and when the ballot was printed a woman's ticket was included.

Election day followed, with the weather combating voters to come to the polls. The roads and streets of De Kalb are not paved and were so muddy that the women were forced to abandon their motor cars and take to buggies and wagons to carry on their campaign.

Gave Away Tobacco and Candy.

At noon the race was about neck and neck, both parties claiming they would win. The women kept on—from house to house and from store to store to get the women to vote. Following the tactics of their opponents they carried cigars, cigarettes, candy and chewing gum, as inducements to get out the voters. When the polls closed, the town had cast more than 200 votes, the largest on record.

The women had won everything and Mrs. J. W. McAdow, who was elected Mayor, had defeated her opponent with 106 to 87 votes. Others elected with Mrs. McAdow were Mrs. S. J. Hull, City Clerk, and three members of the council, Mrs. S. A. Mallory, Mrs. John Pyles and Mrs. Charles Clinkenbeard.

Husband Did the Washing.

Mrs. McAdow, besides being the Mayor, is also the Police Judge. Speeders, bootleggers and other violators of the law will have to face her.

One of the candidates elected stated that her husband stayed home and did washing while she was out getting votes.

DR. JESSE L. BOOGHER DIES AFTER OPERATION

Had Practiced in St. Louis 34 Years; Funeral to Be Tomorrow.

Dr. Jesse Leland Boogher, well-known physician and former secretary of the American Medical Association, died at 2 p. m. yesterday in the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium after an operation a week ago for acute appendicitis. He was 57 years old.

Dr. Boogher, who lived at 5431 Bartmer avenue, had been in practice for 34 years, and had considerable note as a specialist in genito-urinary diseases. He was recently elected an honorary member of the American Urological Society.

He was a native of St. Louis, and, after receiving his early education in the public schools and Smith Academy, took his M. D. degree at St. Louis Medical College. He took postgraduate studies in Berlin, Paris, Vienna and London, and returned to St. Louis to practice 32 years ago.

He moved into an office in the Central National Bank Building on the first day the structure was opened, as the Union Trust Building, and kept the suite until his last illness. He was the oldest tenant there in point of occupancy.

His widow and three children, Miss Marybel, James and Leland, survive him. Funeral services will be held at the home at 3 p. m. tomorrow, with interment in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

FOREST FIRES IN THREE STATES UNDER CONTROL

By the Associated Press.

SPOKANE, Wash., April 17.—Forest fires in three states were hemmed in today by fire forces aided by favorable winds. Three of four large fires in Montana were under control and a fourth had spread over an acreage of only 100 acres. In Washington a 600-acre fire in the Solduc burn area was fought back fro mits course toward the Moran logging camp, which had been threatened by the spread of the flames.

In Northern Idaho crews isolated a blaze in the heavily wooded Kootenai Notional Forest, which extends into Montana.

Overcast skies threatening showers gave promise of seconding the efforts of the fire fighters.

The widespread threat is unusual for this time of year, fire officials said. It is due to the low humidity, high winds and dry weather that has characterized the season.

Fred Flora, 40 years old, of 5470 Vera avenue, a lineman for the Union Electric Light and Power Co., is in a critical condition at City Hospital as a result of burns he suffered at noon yesterday. He was saved from falling by his safety belt, and was lowered to the ground by fellow-workmen.

LOOKS BACK AT BOY HE HIT, SPEEDS AWAY

Employer Reports That J. B. Howard Ran Down Vernon Schuth, 9.

John B. Howard of 1202 Elliot avenue, a truck driver, was arrested last night, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, after he had run down and injured Vernon Schuth, 9 years old, 3932A Virginia avenue, at 4 p. m.

The boy was crossing South Grand boulevard in the middle of the 3700 block when he was knocked down by a truck. Another 9-year-old boy, the only witness, said Howard slowed down after the impact, looked back at the injured boy, and then, increasing his speed, continued south in Grand. The injured boy was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital, where it was found he was suffering from a skull fracture, a dislocation of the right shoulder, and a fracture of the left leg.

After the accident Howard reported it to his employer Chester Garrett, a contractor, who lives at 6220 Ridge avenue, and Garrett reported it to police.

In addition to leaving the scene of an accident, Howard was charged with felonious wounding and with carelessness.

A second child, Mary Clark, 4, daughter of Robert E. Clark, 5621 Cabanne avenue, was seriously injured when she was struck by an auto near her home. She suffered a fracture of the skull. Louis Rosenblum, 4247 Evans avenue, the driver, was arrested, and gave bond on a charge of careless driving.

MOVIE MAN RAKES BILLS FOR FEDERAL CENSORSHIP

Producers' Counsel Attacks Theory of Preparing Path for Child, Not Child for the Path.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—C. C. Pettijohn, counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, before the House Education Committee yesterday, assailed the move for Federal censorship of the movies as an advanced stage of the "anti" movement, which, he said, more than a century ago in Boston required a physician's prescription for bathing.

"The censors cannot supplant the fireside," he continued, denouncing the Swoope and Upshaw bills for Federal regulation of the industry. "They are centering their attention on preparing a path for the child rather than preparing the child for the path. That doesn't make character."

PARLEY FOR TRUCE IN RIFF WARFARE TO BE HELD TODAY

French and Spanish Commissioners Will Confer With Abd-el-Krim's Envoys North of Taourit.

TRIBESMEN MAY OBJECT TO TERMS

Allies Optimistic of Peace, but "Military Guarantees" Are Likely to Prove Stumbling Block.

By the Associated Press.

OUJDA, Morocco, April 17.—An armistice bringing to a close the Riff's five-year war against Spain and their short but spirited one-year campaign again France, may be signed tomorrow when the French, Spanish and Riff delegations meet just behind the battle line, 50 miles north of Taourit.

Both the French and Spanish delegations profess optimism that the war will come to an end, but the Riff delegates may balk at what the French and Spanish call "military guarantees" and refuse to permit the French troops to advance about five miles on various parts of the front and occupy many strategical positions commandnig extensive territory.

An argument against acceptance by the Riffs of the Franco-Spanish terms is that the French troops are ready to move northward from El Kifane, while the Spanish also are prepared to strige a blow to the southwest from the Melilla region, turning Abd-el-Krim's left wing.

The Spanish delegation arrived in Oujda this evening. They are understood to be less inclined to peace than the French. Senor Lopez-Olivan, acting under instructions from Madrid, said he felt that a great chance to crush the Riff seeds of rebellion forever, whether from Krim or other leaders, was being thrown away inasmuch as now both French and Spanish forces were ready to strike.

A correspondent of the Associated Press journeyed to Taourit and met Caid Si Mohammed Azerkane, head of the Riff delegation, who said: "We are ready to sign peace. We want peace, but we do not want peace at any price. We are not vanquished, and if the conditions imposed upon us amount to unconditional surrender, we might well take the field again and die free men, rather than live as slaves."

$100,000 IN GEMS STOLEN BY WINDOW-CLEANING BURGLAR

Clever Crook for Several Seasons Has Visited New York and Escaped With Rich Loot.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Somewhere in Palm Beach, or perhaps in luxurious quarters aboard an ocean liner clipping the waves toward Paris, an expert window cleaner is fondly toying with a nice handful of jewels and enjoying another series of chuckles at the expense of the New York police.

This diligent artisan has just concluded his annual visit to the metropolis. As is his custom he cleaned windows for three months at a net profit of $100,000. As a final salute to the vexed police the skillful pane polisher plucked $50,000 worth of gems from the boudoir of Miss Muriel H. Wurts-Dundas, Park avenue heiress. He was so rude as to leave without finishing his work, but thoughtfully left his pail.

For several years this clever crook has appeared in New York in the spring cleaning season. He works only in the fashionable streets along Fifth avenue. Last year he lifted $20,000 in jawels from the home of Col. William Hayward, former United States District Attorney, and casually took diamonds and pearls worth $25,000 at the home of Adelaide Phillips.

The police know the robber's name and have a description of him, including finger prints, but have no photograph. The finger prints show all the big robberies of this nature to be the work of one man.

BISHOP ORDERED TO TRIAL IN MEXICO FOR WRITINGS

Opposed Enforcement by Government of Religious Clauses of Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, April 17.—The District Judge issued an order today directing Bishop Jose Jesus Martinez Zarate of Huejutla, State of Hidalgo, to appear for trial on charges preferred by the Attorney-General. These charges grew out of the recent pastoral letter of the bishop voicing his opposition to the intention of the Mexican government to insist on obedience to the religious clauses of the constitution.

Says Non-Drinkers Make Best Athletes

dents now than 10 years ago. "Saturday night," he added, "is still a bad night."

Prof. Charles C. Clarke, a member of the University Discipline Committee, said that he was not a prohibitionist, but felt that the effects of prohibition on the student body had been good. Disciplinary cases involving intoxication, he said, had practically disappeared.

Roswell P. Angier, former dean of freshmen, reported that the situation among freshmen improved from year to year during his administration from 1920 to 1924, while Percy T. Walden, the present dean, said that since prohibition came in the freshmen were finding more drinking places than formerly.

President James R. Angell of Yale wrote that he had received the impression that "despite the all too frequent violations of the law, the amount of drinking at present, and particularly the amount of excessive drinking, is very much less than it was in earlier years."

Fisher Gives Conclusions.

Fisher summed up his own conclusions as follows:

"The number of discipline cases in which drinking is a factor is now very much smaller than before prohibition.

"The improvement has been especially noticeable in the last few years.

"Such drinking as still remains is often more concentrated and uproarious than before prohibition. When liquor that was largely beer was easily obtainable, many got it, got it often, and got it in small quantities. Now that it is harder to get, fewer get it, get it more seldom, but when they do, make up for lost time.

"Prohibition created a defiant attitude in many students. It is unpopular even among many who do not try to circumvent the law.

"Judging from such discussions as I have heard, Yale College is no exception. Throughout the country the same evidence is available that the present outcry against prohibition gives an exaggerated picture of the evils complained of."

Once Made Great Strides.

"Prohibition," he added, "made great strides when the evils of alcohol were stressed. It lost ground as soon as that emphasis was lost."

Fisher candidly admitted at the beginning of his statement that the prevailing student sentiment at Yale was wet. Statistics of the senior class, he said, showed that 80 per cent were wet in their sympathies. He compared this showing with a recent survey of 11 colleges, mostly Middle-Western, which he said indicated that two-thirds of the men and four-fifths of the women were for strict law enforcement.

"Not only," he continued, "is the Yale student sentiment prevailingly wet, but the city and state in which Yale is located are among the wettest in the nation. Connecticut did not ratify the eighteenth amendment and recently refused an opportunity to tighten up its inadequate enforcement legislation. The newspapers of New Haven are uniformly wet. The Judges are wet.

"Besides all this damp atmosphere in which they live, the students largely come from the great wet cities, especially New York, and a large fraction of the students are from the well-to-do classes that can support wine cellars at home.

Tradition in Favor of Wets.

"Thus tradition and environment conspire to moisten these young men's minds if not their throats. Moreover, the students are just at that age at which, as we are so often told, prohibition is corrupting the youth. If, therefore, anywhere in this great country, prohibition ought to prove a rank failure, it should be among such a group of susceptible young men. I have, therefore, taken great pains to ascertain the actual facts in the case, with every desire, after ascertaining them from every available source, to face them squarely, exactly as they are.

"Not relying on my own impressions, I asked the eight authorities who are most familiar with student discipline as these know the facts at first-hand and far better than any others. At least two of thees eight men I knew to be strongly opposed to prohibition. One I know to be strongly in favor of it. The attitude of the other five I do not know positively, but believe they are mostly opposed."

Enforce Law, Fisher Urges.

Asked what he would do to improve conditions, Fisher replied: "Classify enforcement officers in the civil service and provide an adequate sum for enforcement."

Fisher said that after prohibition there was a sudden drop in the evils attendant on alcoholism. This reached the lowest point in 1919 or 1920; then came a rise, so that the curve when plotted looks like a fishhook. The rise, he said, was not back to the old level. He characterized the wets' statistics as misleading.

"How do you account for the rise since 1920?" asked Senator Harreld, chairman of the Senate committee. "By inadequate enforcement," Fisher replied.

Fisher launched into a lecture on alcohol. He described it as a poison and a habit-forming drug, the craving for which was not natural, but acquired.

"It is as proper to forbid the traffic in alcohol," he asserted, "as in opium. If the taking of opium were as fashionable, there would be the same hue and cry against its suppression, the same talk about the invasion of personal liberty. Alcohol has behind it a longer history and its use has become a social custom sanctioned by fashion.

"Anyone with a craving for alcohol is an alcohol addict. Its use is a bad effect to compensate for the peculiar conditions of our modern civilization—to get relief from the fatigue and stress of life.

"The biological ideal is not temperance, but total abstinence. There are merely various degrees of drunkenness among the users of alcohol. If a man takes one glass of beer he is one glass of beer drunk."

Fisher showered the committee with statistics showing the percentage by which efficiency in various lines of endeavor is reduced, as he claimed, by even a moderate use of beer.

Effect of Glass of Beer.

One to two glasses of beer, he said, would reduce the mental capacity of a student by 12 per cent. From an elaborate set of figures on the national income and the estimated increase in the productivity of labor under prohibition, Fisher drew his conclusions that $6,000,000,000 had been saved to the country by the Eighteenth Amendment. His figure for increased efficiency was 10 per cent.

"With the coming of prohibition," he said, "wages suddenly rose from the old level, which they had kept without much change for over a quarter of a century, to a new level a third higher, where it now is.

"Profits have also risen, as has the total income of the country, but the figures for profits are not so nearly up to date. All of us, however, know that our present abounding prosperity is unprecedented. This is one reason for our unprecedented stock market.

"Thus the facts fit perfectly with the theory that prohibition should increase wages and profits by at least 5 per cent.

Allows 600 Per Cent Margin.

"In fact they leave a margin six times that figure to take account of other causes, as well as of the fact that this 5 per cent is a sane minimum and for the fact that prohibition is not fully enforced.

"Personally, I am inclined to believe that prohibition has saved and added much more than the $6,000,000,000 which I have estimated as a safe minimum.

"But it is always better to keep on the safe side and to mention no higher figure specifically, for even a paltry six billions a year is well worth saving. This is one reason why Gary, Leland and other industrialists believe in prohibition.

"Evidently if prohibition enforcement cost us a billion a year, it would be well worth while purely as an economic investment.

Fisher said that he could go on indefinitely, but had come to the end of his allotted time. The committeemen then sitting, all drys told him to proceed. He entered then upon a vigorous attack upon the "personal liberty" argument of the wets.

"New Freedom" Under Dry Law.

"Prohibition," he exclaimed, "has partly emancipated the human race from slavery to drink. It has given us a new freedom, a true liberty in view of which the personal liberty argument becomes a hollow mockery.

"Ask the wife of the workingman who wants full personal liberty to drink. She will not be so doctrinaire. Her husband's liberty to drink takes away her person liberty to eat." The drys applauded.

"Nothing," he concluded, amid a murmur of approval, "nothing can add so much to our real liberty as prohibition."

A. A. Stagg, director of physical education at the University of Chicago, went back to the days of his boyhood in a poor neighborhood in East Orange, N. J., when it was a common thing for him to see nine or ten men in his block drunk at the same time. He went to Yale and there he saw a great deal of drunkenness among the students. The same was true in Chicago before prohibition, but since then, he said, there had been a wonderful improvement. He asserted that there was much less drinking among students than before prohibition.

Non-Drinkers Best Athletes.

"As a coach," he said, "I do not believe in the use of alcohol. None of the coaches do. Our American athletes stand at the top. The only ones who approximated us at the Olympic games at Paris two years ago were the Finnish and they didn't use liquor either.

"I have a theory that a great deal of the looseness that we see nowadays is due to the breaking down of home life. The girls of today try to be comrades of the boys. They are acquiring freedom. I don't believe in it. I wish that a moral or religious wave might sweep over the country and restore the old family life. Parents today are running away from their responsibilities in search of pleasure.

"But things are not so bad as they have been painted. The great portion of the young people are essentially sound.

"Let us back up the prohibition law as we should. The whole nation should get together and cooperate in its enforcement. That is what the people out our way demand."

W. W. Peck of Toronto, a minister of the United Church of Canada, and educational secretary of the Prohibition Federation of Canada, told the committee that the Government sale of liquor in Canada had resulted in a large increase in the consumption of liquor.

Bootleggers Buy of Government.

Bootleggers, he said, got their supplies from the Government stores.

It struck Senator Walsh as odd that a bootlegger should buy from the Government. The witness explained that the stores were only open from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., and that the bootlegger ministered to the thirsty before and after that period.

Peck produced an array of statistics designed to show that the Government sales plan produced not moderation, but excess. His figures were different from those given the committee last week by Francis W. Russell of the Manitoba Moderation League.

The witness said that the moderationists promised that the dispensary system would wipe out the public debt of Manitoba; instead, the debt had increased. He drew a comparison between dry Ontario and wet Quebec, much to the disadvantage of the latter.

A decrease in the sales of hard liquor in the Government stores at Montreal, said the witness, was not due to any growing taste of the drinking public for light wines, but to the increased activity of the American border patrol in stopping smuggling into this country.

"The drinker of hard liquor," said the witness, "does not take kindly to mild beverages. The beer drinker becomes waterlogged before he can become exhilarated."

The remark got a laugh from the drys, but Senator Reed turned it to the use of the liberals. Anent a statement by the witness on brewers' profits, Reed observed, "It looks like they are drinking beer up there, and when they drink beer, as you say, they get waterlogged, but they don't get drunk."

"Shocking Beer Parlors."

The witness said that under a local option clause in the law "beer parlors" had been set up in some places in British Columbia. Men and women were permitted to sit down and drink together in these "parlors." The results, the witness said, had been shocking.

Reed made the point that even in the saloon days in the United States, a corresponding institution, the "wine room" had been abolished by most of the states.

"Wherever you have these miserable wine rooms in Canada," asked Reed, "they have been put there by the vote of the people?" The witness said that was so. Reed asked the witness who had summoned him to appear. He replied, "The committee." Further questions developed that he meant a committee from various prohibition organizations in this country.

Presentation of the dry case will be resumed Monday.

Enforce or Modify the Dry Law, Says Head of Wet Group.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—W. H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, in a statement issued today, said the drys were demanding more money for prohibition enforcement and thereby were admitting "that the law which they have so many times declared perfect is not perfect."

Stayton said that "if the Anti-Saloon League does not lay the lash on Congress and bring about the immediate apropriation of the hundreds of millions of dollars which its own friends admit are necessary to make the Volstead law effective, this wet association will be forced to conclude that the dry league is satisfied with the present condition of chaos so far as en forcement is concerned."
"Enforce or modify," Stayt said, "should be the demand every citizen, and we want the pr ponents of the Volstead law to ha every opportunity to satisfy the selves that it is completely impra tical in its present form."

ESOLUTION ON RY ISSUE BEFORE WOMEN VOTERS

lea to Congress to Refuse to Weaken Law Expected Because of Spirited Debate.

EAGUE'S POWER TO ACT QUESTIONED

ome Contend It Would Violate the Organization's Rules — Others oubt Its Wisdom.

Though the sentiment of the onvention of the National League f Women Voters is thoroughly ry—bone dry—it is likely that a esolution introduced yesterday alling upon Congress to refuse to "weaken" the prohibition law will provoke spirited debate when it is reported out of committee tomorrow or when it comes up for final action Tuesday.

The League always has been dry and last year passed a resolution indorsing the Eighteenth amendment and demanding enforcement. This year's resolution goes further, however. One clause reads: "We urge the Congress to resist all attempts to undermine or weaken the Eighteenth amendment." Many of the delegates interpret this to mean that Congress should refuse to tamper with the Volstead act as it now stands.

This has raised among them the constitutional question whether the convention has authority to pass any such resolution. The League is prohibited by its governing laws from approving or indorsing legislation, unless such proposals have rested on the table from the convention of one year to that of the next. Unless modified in committee, the resolution will have opposition on that score.

Other Likely Opposition.

Another likely opposition is that of delegates who doubt the wisdom of any action upon the subject at this time. Among them are those who, as a matter of basic policy, constantly are endeavoring to steer the League away from controversial matters of whatever nature and guide action along fundamental lines. This section of the League has been growing in influence. Generally speaking, it is the attitude of Miss Belle Sherwin, president, who as yet has not indicated her position on the resolution.

The resolution emanated from the Pennsylvania delegation, which has a reputation for scrappiness, and it may stand upon the letter of its recommendation. Its purpose to oppose any modification of the Volstead act is further indicated by another statement of the resolution: "Federal prohibition officers have openly declared themselves as favoring the modification of the enforcement act, while opponents of the eighteenth amendment have bitterly, persistently and unjustly attacked it from without."

Other demands are that executives, including state executives, decline to appoint to enforcement positions anyone not in full sympathy with the prohibition act. If passed the resolution will be sent to the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, members of Congress and Governors of states.

Introduced From Floor.

As it was introduced from the floor and not through the Resolutions Committee, it first became necessary for its proponents to obtain, by a two-thirds vote, consent of the convention to consider it. A rising vote was called. The convention rose en masse, only three delegates signifying their opposition by rising upon call for negatives.

It thereupon, under the rules, was referred to a committee composed of Mrs. Maud Wood Park of Maine, former president of the National League, and now its Washington representative; Mrs. Edward Y. Hartshorne of Pennsylvania, who introduced it; Mrs. Ernest J. Mott, California; Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Ohio, and Mrs. Luella St. Clair Moss of Columbia, Mo. Delegates commented that the committee was four to one dry.

Rules forbid final passage until 24 hours have elapsed after the committee report which will be made tomorrow morning. Whether opponents of the measure will choose to center fire upon the committee report or await the final vote was not indicated yesterday.

PASSAIC STRIKE LEAD HELD IN $25,000 BA

Rearrested on Inciting to Ri Charge After Release in Conspiracy Case.

By the Associated Press.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 17.—A multiplicity of charges of inciti to riot, hostility to the Governme and conspiracy tonight confront Albert Weisbord, youthful stri organizer.

Released in $25,000 bail fro Paterson jail, pending trial on fo such indictments, he was rearreste and taken to Garfield, where P lice Judge Richard J. Baker se him to the Bergen County jail Hackensack in default of $25,00 bail on a complaint of inciting riot. He was held in his own re ognizance on charges of conspirac and destruction of property.

The charge of inciting to ri grew out of a speech made Weisbord at Belmont Park, Ga field, on April 9, in which the au thorities accused him of saying "No scabs will be allowed to ent the mills. You must meet the on the streets or at their home or on trolleys and busses and han dle them as you know how."

Efforts of Weisbord's attorney to have the amount of bail reduce failed. "We cannot have he continued and deliberate attemp to intimidate people and destro property," Judge Baker said. "T put an end to this I feel it neces sary to hold the defendant in $25, 000 bail."

When the day began, Weisbor was in Paterson jail in default o $30,000 bail on three Passaic po lice charges similar to the indict ments. Habeas corpus proceed ings in which Bainbridge Colby former Secretary of State, alleg false arrest and excessive bail grounds for release, were by mu tual consent merged into plead ings to the indictments. The lead er pleaded not guilty and was re turned to jail where he spent thre hours before bail was offered.

The Passaic County indictments recited that Weisbord in hi speeches expressed hope for the overthrow of the Government and for the establishment of a communist regime. They also alleg that he predicted workers of th country would "take over the mills," "crack the necks of the bosses," and emulate Russia.

Colby expressed his personal opinion of communism by declaring it "hateful, fallacious and unsound." Speaking directly of Weisbord, Colby asserted that there was nothing to indicate that he was an enemy of the Government.

"Enforce or modify," Stayton said, "should be the demand of every citizen, and we want the proponents of the Volstead law to have every opportunity to satisfy themselves that it is completely impractical in its present form."

ESOLUTION ON RY ISSUE BEFORE WOMEN VOTERS

Plea to Congress to Refuse to Weaken Law Expected Because of Spirited Debate.

EAGUE'S POWER TO ACT QUESTIONED

Some Contend It Would Violate the Organization's Rules — Others Doubt Its Wisdom.

Though the sentiment of the convention of the National League of Women Voters is thoroughly dry—bone dry—it is likely that a resolution introduced yesterday calling upon Congress to refuse to "weaken" the prohibition law will provoke spirited debate when it is reported out of committee tomorrow or when it comes up for final action Tuesday.

The League always has been dry and last year passed a resolution indorsing the Eighteenth amendment and demanding enforcement. This year's resolution goes further, however. One clause reads: "We urge the Congress to resist all attempts to undermine or weaken the Eighteenth amendment." Many of the delegates interpret this to mean that Congress should refuse to tamper with the Volstead act as it now stands.

This has raised among them the constitutional question whether the convention has authority to pass any such resolution. The League is prohibited by its governing laws from approving or indorsing legislation, unless such proposals have rested on the table from the convention of one year to that of the next. Unless modified in committee, the resolution will have opposition on that score.

Other Likely Opposition.

Another likely opposition is that of delegates who doubt the wisdom of any action upon the subject at this time. Among them are those who, as a matter of basic policy, constantly are endeavoring to steer the League away from controversial matters of whatever nature and guide action along fundamental lines. This section of the League has been growing in influence. Generally speaking, it is the attitude of Miss Belle Sherwin, president, who as yet has not indicated her position on the resolution.

The resolution emanated from the Pennsylvania delegation, which has a reputation for scrappiness, and it may stand upon the letter of its recommendation. Its purpose to oppose any modification of the Volstead act is further indicated by another statement of the resolution: "Federal prohibition officers have openly declared themselves as favoring the modification of the enforcement act, while opponents of the eighteenth amendment have bitterly, persistently and unjustly attacked it from without."

Other demands are that executives, including state executives, decline to appoint to enforcement positions anyone not in full sympathy with the prohibition act. If passed the resolution will be sent to the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, members of Congress and Governors of states.

Introduced From Floor.

As it was introduced from the floor and not through the Resolutions Committee, it first became necessary for its proponents to obtain, by a two-thirds vote, consent of the convention to consider it. A rising vote was called. The convention rose en masse, only three delegates signifying their opposition by rising upon call for negatives.

It thereupon, under the rules, was referred to a committee composed of Mrs. Maud Wood Park of Maine, former president of the National League, and now its Washington representative; Mrs. Edward Y. Hartshorne of Pennsylvania, who introduced it; Mrs. Ernest J. Mott, California; Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Ohio, and Mrs. Luella St. Clair Moss of Columbia, Mo. Delegates commented that the committee was four to one dry.

Rules forbid final passage until 24 hours have elapsed after the committee report which will be made tomorrow morning. Whether opponents of the measure will choose to center fire upon the committee report or await the final vote was not indicated yesterday.

MAUNA LOA EMITS HUGE FIERY BOULDERS

Church, Residence and Tropical Forest Destroyed by Volcanic Eruption.

By the Associated Press.

HILO, T. H., April 17.—The lava flow from Mauna Loa, which burst into eruption a week ago after being inactive for five years, grew more spectacular late today as fiery boulders, some as big as houses started rolling down the side of the mountain towards the sea. Heavy woods mask the view of the ocean so that it is impossible to say whether the lava has actually reached the water. The flow has already caused much damage.

Besides a church, a residence and a forest of tropical trees destroyed last night, the lava has done much damage to Kona Forest and the pastures of Honomalino Ranch, where many branches of the flow entered the forest for a short distance and then ceased.

In the woods below Hoopuloa, Prof. J. A. Jaggar, volcano expert, is watching the course of the flow. He is expected to return tonight.

Guards are watching to warn people of any new danger.

CHINESE PREMIER RESIGNS, TAKING BLAME FOR COUP

Cabinet Dismisses Nationalist Commander From All His Posts—Committee Works for Peace.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, April 17—Premier Chi Teh Yao has resigned, blaming himself for negligence in connection with Kuominchun coup.

The cabinet has dismissed Gen. Lu Chung-Lin, the Nationalist commander, from all his posts.

Under the direction of a nonpartisan committee of 10 men, of whom six are former Premiers, the city is calmly awaiting the arrival of young Chang Hsueh-Liang, who represents Chan Tso-Lin, his father, and Chan Tsung-Chang, Governor of Shantung, the dominant factors since the Kuominchun (National army) exacuated the capitol.

The victors are hourly expected as are representatives of Marshal Wu-Pei-Fu, the Chihli war lord, to confer with the civilian committee on the future of the Government of China. The committee is to be dissolved when some sort of Government has been established.

(A Kuominchun coup a week ago took over Pekin, but since then the national army evacuated the city.

WISCONSIN RIVER LOCK BURSTS

Flood Threatens Four Cities; Appeal for Aid Send Out.

By the Associated Press.

PORTAGE, Wis., April 17.—The cities of Oshkosh, Neenah, Menasha and Appleton are threatened with floods as a result of the collapse tonight of a section of the Government lock connecting the Wisconsin River and Fox River near here.

Should the temporary dam fail to check the swirling waters eating at the locks, a stream of water 11½ feet high and with tremendous power back of it, will be poured into the canal. At 9 o'clock it was reported that water was seeping through the barricade and there was danger it might be wiped out any minute. Due to decayed timbers a section of the lock at the Wisconsin River end caved in about 5 p. m.

INQUIRY AT HERRIN CLOSED TO PUBLIC

Coroner Says Witnesses to Six Killings Demand Protection of Absolute Secrecy.

By the Associated Press.

HERRIN, Ill., April 17.—Witnesses called to testify at the inquest into the killings here on election day last Tuesday today refused to tell what they knew unless their names and the nature of their testimony be withheld from publication. They told Coroner George Bell they were afraid something might happen to them if what they testified to be generally known.

The Coroner at once requested all newspaper men to leave the inquiry. He made the request after a short consultation with State's Attorney Arlie Boswell, who agreed the press must be barred.

After the newspapermen had retired the inquest proceeded and during the recess no one would tell anything that had gone on.

The State's Attorney and the Coroner even refused to tell the nature of the testimony, for they said it was not expedient to say anything at this time.

"We regret we are forced to close this inquiry to the newspapers," the Coroner said, but if we are to get at the truth of these killings we must have witnesses who are unafraid. With conditions as they are in Williamson County, we have the question of prejudice to deal with, and we must avoid the element of fear as much as possible.

"This is done because we had to do it. There is no attempt at whitewash. We are simply taking the only way to get the truth."

It is understood, however, that the first testimony was that of eye witnesses to the shooting in which three Klansmen and three anti-Klansmen fell before a polling place in the Masonic Temple.

Co. K of the 130th Infantry, from Cairo, Ill., which has been on guard under the command of Capt. Harry Boland, has departed.

WORKHOUSE SENTENCE FOR DAMAGED AUTO HUB CAP

Punishment Could Have Been Averted by Payment of $1.50 by Driver Who Left Scene.

Police Judge Beck fined James T. O'Connor, 4724 Natural Bridge avenue, a total of $115 and sentenced him to 100 days in the workhouse, yesterday, on charges of careless driving and leaving the scene of an accident preferred by George Teppenbach, 3804 Sullivan avenue, after O'Connor had refused to pay $1.50 for a hub cap that had been bent when their machines brushed together last Wednesday.

Judge Beck offered to parole O'Connor from the workhouse if he would surrender his licenses for one year or sell his automobile. O'Connor declined to accept the parole and announced he would appeal.

The testimony in police court indicated that O'Connor did not stop after his machine had bent the hub cap of Teppenbach's car and Teppenbach pursued him and demanded $1.50 for the damages. O'Connor offered to buy a new hub cap for 35 cents. Not being able to reach an agreement, Teppenbach asked for O'Connor's arrest.

DEFENSE IN COLONEL'S COURTMARTIAL CLOSED

Effort to Impeach Testimony of Gen. Butler Gives Thrill; Argument Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Ap.il 17.—Defense efforts to impeach a Brigadier-General's testimony by investigation the recollection of a Second Lieutenant brought to a close today the presentation of evidence in the courtmartial of Col. Alexander S. Williams.

The Second Lieutenant, Francis Wulborn, known to followers of Marine Corps athletics last year as a football players of promise, recalled hearing rumors that Brigadier-General Smedley D. Butler said something to someone about "Col. Williams being in Tijuana on March 6.' But he did not remember having told anyone, as reported by previous witnesses, that "Gen. Butler has called us all a bunch of liars."

Inability of the Lieutenant to recall exactly anything he might have heard the General say, discouraged defense counsel to such an extent that the testimony was allowed to dwindle away in Tijuana, leaving court and spectators to imagine for themselves what that Mexican border resort, just south of here, had to do with the charge of intoxication against Col. Williams.

The court adjourned with the announcement that arguments of counsel would be heard Monday.

When court convened today the president, Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, announced he and his colleagues desired to call no more witnesses, but the defense was given permission to recall to the stand Capt. George F. Stokes, adjutant of the Fourth Regiment of Marines, which Col. Williams commanded until Gen. Butler ordered his arrest.

Through the testimony of Stokes the defense began its efforts to impeach the testimony of Gen. Butler. The General denied during cross-examination, several days ago, that he had called statements submitted to him by officers of the condition of Col. Williams ' a pack of lies."

Stokes said he heard Capt. Clifton B. Bates, then warned by Col. E. B. Miller that Butler would "put you all under oath if you don't watch out," reply: "What difference will that make? Gen. Butler has already told one officer that we are all a bunch of liars."

Stokes said the officer referred to was Second Lieutenant Wulborn, and that Wulborn's words on the matter were:

"You fellows are in for a hot session. The General already has called us a bunch of liars."

WOMEN OFFICE HOLDERS SPEAK AT CONVENTION

Mrs. J. Paul Goode, Member of Illinois Legislature, Says Government Is Their Business.

INTEREST IN ALL ELECTIONS URGED

Miss Marie Wing, Cleveland Councilwoman, and Mrs. John T. Pratt, New York Alderman, on Program.

Three women holders of public office were among the speakers who addressed the convention of the National League of Women Voters last night in the ballroom of Hotel Statler.

These were Miss Marie Wing, member of the Cleveland City Council, who spoke on "Sharing in Municipal Government"; Mrs. J. Paul Goode, member of the Illinois Legislature, whose subject was "Let Women Mind their Own Business"; and Mrs. John T. Pratt, only woman member of the New York City Board of Aldermen. Mrs. Pratt's topic was "Being Practical by Being in a Party." All of the addresses aroused more than ordinary enthusiasm among the 500 or more women present.

Like Housekeeping.

"City government," Miss Wing declared, "is like good housekeeping. If it is going along smoothly and the cit yservices are well performed, everybody takes the comfort and orderliness for granted; but if things are upset or badly managed, people set up a howl. Modern cities are like growing boys, full of vitality, hard to keep clean, hard to keep straight and hard to regulate after dark and on Sundays. City families to a large extent do not know each other and yet are very dependent upon one another. This creates a situation which makes co-operation absolutely necessary. The destructive elements in a city's life are usually good conditions gone wrong, human capacity gone to waste. Our business as citizens is to conserve this tremendous energy for a constructive creative purpose."

Mrs. Goode summarized her address in this bit of advice:

"Let women mind their business; it may take them out of the home occasionally, but it will never take them away from the home."

She said a woman's business includes more than the age-old business of bringing children into the world, tending the hearth fire and preparing food for the family. Any business which affects the home and the general welfare of the community, she held, was something which women had no business overlooking. And what, she asked, affected home and general welfare more than government?

Mrs. Pratt, in urging active membership in some political party, emphasized that constructive measures cannot be put into effect without party machinery. Organizations such as the Anti-Saloon League, the Civil Service Reform League and the American Protective Tariff League, are not to be ignored, she pointed out, but the fact remains that they are supplements to and not substitutes for political parties since the parties perform functions which cannot be undertaken by these bodies.

Day fro New Voters.

Yesterday was New Voters' day at the convention, and the new voters—91 young women from all sections of the country—made the most of it. All are too young to vote.

The majority of the visitors were undergraduates of American colleges and universities, but here and there was a business woman, or a home-body. All were members of the New Voters' section of the league and as such were allowed to sit in its sessions, without a vote, however.

They were housed at McMillan Hall, Washington University, and in private homes. At noon they had a luncheon in the ballroom of Hotel Statler, at which they were introduced to the older voters by Mrs. Charles H. Dietrich of Nebraska, director of the Sixth Region. Then followed a business conference presided over by Miss Gertrude Ely of Pennsylvania, director of the Second Region.

Miss Belle Sherwin of Cleveland, president of the National League of Women Voters, yesterday was renominated for a term of two years. Her nomination and other nominations reported yesterday are equivalent to election. The elections will be formally announced tomorrow.

The other officers nominated for two-year terms in accordance with the amendment passed Thursday providing for biennial instead of annual conventions, are: First vice president, Mrs. James Morrisson of Chicago; second vice president, Miss Adele Clark, Richmond, Va.; third vice president, Miss Ruth Morgan, New York; fourth vice president, Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser Girard, O.; fifth vice president, Miss Mollie Ray Carroll, Baltimore, Md.; secretary, Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith, Farmington, Conn.; treasurer, Miss Katherine Ludington, Lyme, Conn. Regional directors: First region, Mrs. James E. Cheesman, Providence, R. I.; second region, Mrs. Casper Whitney, Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.; third region, Mrs. Mary O. Cowper, Durham, N. C.; fourth region, Mrs. William Hibbard, Chicago; fifth region, Miss Marguerite Wells, Minneapolis; sixth region, Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, St. Louis; seventh region, Mrs. Ernest Mott, San Francisco.

Meeting at Odeon.

"The Progress of International Co-operation Toward Peace," will be discussed at the meeting in the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today. The principal addresses will be by Prof. James T. Shotwell, director of the division of economics and history of the Carnegie Endowment for international peace, and Chester Rowell, regent of the University of California. Invocation will be by the Rev. William Scarlett and benediction by Rabbi Julian H. Miller. Miss Ruth Morgan of New York, third vice president of the league, will preside.

At 8:30 tonight there will be an informal musicale for delegates at the Artists' Guild. A program of Russian, German, Spanish and English folk songs will be sung by Mrs. Clara M. Schevill.

HOUSE AIDS BUCK PRIVATE WHO CURSED OVER ARMY ORDER

Sends to Senate Bill Giving Him Honorable Discharge—10-Year Term Cut to One.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The House decided today that a buck private, sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for cursing when his top Sergeant read an order forbidding men to wear gloves or overcoats while grooming horses, was entitled to an honorable discharge from the army.

It passed and sent to the Senate a bill making such provision for George Barrett of Oakland, Cal., said to be ill of tuberculosis at the Livermore Hospital.

Barrett saw action with the Twelfth Field Artillery of the Second Division in the St. Mihiel and Argonne offensives. He was convicted in 1919 while his outfit was on the Rhine, the reviewing authority cutting the 10-year sentence to one year.

MODEL FOR "MISS LIBERTY" ON SILVER DOLLAR IS DEAD

Miss Anna W. Williams, Retired School Teacher, Succumbs at Philadelphia at 68.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—Miss Anna W. Williams, retired public school teacher, whose profile as the "Goddess of Liberty" is stamped on the silver dollar, died at her home today. She was 68 years old. Miss Williams' hip was broken last December and she had been confined to her bed ever since. Death was due to apoplexy.

Miss Williams was principal of the girls' school at the House of Refuge here when she was chosen in 1876 to be the model for the goddess upon the silver dollar. Her profile was considered the most perfect that could be found at the time.

It was with great difficulty, however, that she was prevailed upon to give sittings to the artist. Only upon condition that her identity should not be revealed would Miss Williams consent to have her likeness stamped upon the new silver dollar, the Treasury had decided to mint.

For two years the incognito of "Miss Liberty," the woman's face on the dollar, remained a secret in the keeping of the Government and the artist. A Philadelphia newspaper man disclosed that Miss Williams was the "silver dollar girl." Then came offers of stage engagements, all of which Miss Williams rejected. She consented, for $60 a month, to teach at the House of Refuge until she accepted, in 1891, the position of teacher of kindergarten philosophy in the girls' normal school.

HOLDUP MAN ARRESTED 15 MINUTES AFTER ROBBERY

Negro Chauffeur of East St. Louis Health Department Identified by Two Victims.

Fifteen minutes after the grocery store of Benjamin Goldenhersh, 1700 Division avenue, East St. Louis, was held up and robbed of $245 at 9 o'clock last night policemen arrested Sylvester McConico, 24 years old, a Negro, of 2208 Missouri avenue, who was identified as the holdup man by Goldenhersh and his clerk, Earl Winters.

McConico had called a taxicab from a house near the store. He had a revolver and $41. He is a chauffeur in the employ of the East St. Louis Health Department, and denies the charge.

WORKS "AROUND CLOCK," DIES

Long Hours Kill John Rourke, 59, of the Boston & Maine

MELROSE, Mass., April 17.—John Rourke, general superintendent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, died at his home here tonight from an illness induced by two "round-the-clock" struggles to keep his lines open during blizzards of last Feb. 4 and 10. He was 59 years old.

For 36 hours starting Feb. 4 and for nearly 48 after dawn of Feb. 10, Rourke sat without sleep at a telegraph key, directing the work of thousands of men during the storms which virtually paralyzed rail transportation in New England.

METROPOLITAN OPERA'S BEST FINANCIAL YEAR

Debut of Five American Principals May Have Been Responsible.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17.—An opera season marked by the introduction of five new American principals, and the best financial year of the Metropolitan Opera Company's 43 years of production, closed tonight with "La Gioconda."

The Metropolitan would make no statement concerning the possible financial value of the debut of American singers, but it was conceded that this possibly had a bearing on the box office statement.

Two special trains were employed to carry the majority of the company after the performance to Atlanta, Ga., where a program of seven operas opens Monday night. There will follow 10 performances in Cleveland and two in Rochester, N. Y., which will close the season on tour, with a total of 249 performances of 48 operas, ballets, and concerts.

Foremost in the interest for the season was the introduction of new American voices.

Marion Talley, Kansas City girl, whose debut was heralded by a special delegation from her home town will join the company at Atlanta. She now is engaged in concert work.

Another debutante was Mary Lewis, whose progress to stardom in opera lay through the path of musical comedy; Carmela Ponselle, whose sister Rosa already had gained fame on the operatic stage, won plaudits at her debut, and Nanette Guilford, who previously had sung small parts in the opera, became a full-fledged star. Dorothea Flexer completed the list of aspirants, all of whom were pronounced artists of promise by the critics.

Verdi's "Aida" and Puccinni's "Tosca" led the list as favorites, each having eight presentations.

Amelita Galli-Curci will not sing at Atlanta, but will join the company in Cleveland. Some 35 principals, besides the chorus, ballet and others, made up the party tonight.

RECALL SIGNATURES NOW TOTAL 23,084

444 of 558 Voters in Tenth Precinct of 28th Ward Favor Movement.

More than 10 per cent of the 14,297 registered voters in the Twenty-eighth Ward, a West End residential district, have signed petitions for the recall of Mayor Miller, John J. Heil, chairman of the Miller Recall Committee, announced last night.

Twelve canvassers have been assigned to this ward, which has 25 precincts, but voters have been approached for signatures in less than half of the precincts. Only one is considered to have been completely covered—the tenth, where 444 signatures were obtained out of a registration of 558 voters.

The Twenty-eighth Ward gave William L. Igoe, Mayor Miller's Democratic opponent in the election a year ago, 593 votes against 5377 for Miller.

Under the Charter at least 20 per cent of all the registered voters of the city must sign recall petitions before a recall election can be held, including 20 per cent in at least two-thirds, or 19, of the wards. This means at least 60,456 valid signatures must be obtained, and to meet requirements of distribution and make up for faulty ones, about 80,000 will be required.

Active canvassing has been in progress two weeks and 23,084 signatures had been tabulated up to yesterday morning. Canvassers have found that about 60 per cent of the voters approached will sign the petitions in most sections of the city, though in some parts the percentage has reached as high as 80, Heil said.

An imposter has been discovered circulating a petition in the nineteenth precinct of the Twenty-eighth Ward, the chairman stated. He has been obtaining signatures, apparently with the idea of keeping voters from signing genuine petitions when canvassers of the committee reach them. He is described as 60 or 65 years old, short and stocky in build and was wearing a greenish-brown raincoat and slouch hat when seen recently. Other less definite reports of imposters have been received.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., April 17.—Frank Filoski, 28 years old, alleged gangster and robber, escaped from the county jail early today, by crawling through a ventilator, 7 by 12 inches, in the window of his cell on the third floor. He broke two heavy locks with strips of iron torn from his bunk to reach the ventilator and slid down a rope, made of bed clothing.

Filoski is an averaged sized man weighing about 150 pounds. The authorities marvel that he was able to crawl through so small an opening.

ST. LOUIS-IN-COLOR SHOW PROVES CITY IS 'PAINTABLE'

No Lack of Interesting and Artistic Subjects in Exhibit at Artists' Guild—Much of Work Really Significant.

St. Louis artists are discovering that their home town is "paintable." So much, at least, is manifest in the First Annual St. Louis-in-Color Competition, under auspices of the Post-Dispatch, the competing pictures of which were hung in the exhibition galleries of the Artists' Guild, 812 Union boulevard, yesterday.

There are 118 entries, and upwards of 50 painters have contributed their efforts. In prizes, $500, offered by the Post-Dispatch, will be awarded by a non-resident jury, probably early next month. This is divided into a first prize of $250, a second of $150 and a third of $100.

The competition is open to any artist, whether resident or non-resident of St. Louis. Each work submitted must have a St. Louis subject. It may be either figure or landscape and may be done in oil, water color or pastel.

As there is no jury to pass on the entries, some works have been admitted which are, in fact, very amateurish, but, as against these, some sterling painters have contributed their best, which would grace any American art exhibition anywhere.

Two Paintings by Kajiwara.

Two paintings are entered by T. Kajiwara. In a Nocturne the painter has caught the spirit of the street as he looks from some high perch just after dusk. In the green and blue shadows of the evening sparkle the electric lights of sign and window. And these, with the lights of the maving motor cars below, are caught and reflected in golden glints on the wet pavements.

In "From the Painter's Window," the same artist has caught the heavy, brooding spirit of gray winter. At the left a blue curtain is drawn back from the pane through which one glimpses the leaden day, the brown and gray of grime-stained buildings, their shapes and cornices pricked out in snow. In the studio, at the lower right of the picture, is a porcelain crane in deep green-blue and at the lower left are twisted tubes of paint and the artist's brushes. The subtle color harmonies of the East are in both these works.

Across the hall is Fred G. Carpenter's "The Fruit Merchant." Green is the tone with virile black outline. Before the blue gray building, the green awning casts shadows upon the rich color of the fruits. At one side a Negro woman, rich chocolate brown, eyes the watermelon slice she holds. Children on the other side engage the merchant in conversation. With admirable skill Carpenter has caught the care-free happy air of the son of Italy.

Full Color of Italian Section.

The Italian section of older St. Louis is full of color. Biddle Market on its edge has caught the fancy of Fred Conway, a newcomer among St. Louis artists. Conway has caught its spirit of bustle and confusion, of bickerings and a babel of tongues.

Mrs. Katherine Cherry, too, has painted it, bold in colors and teeming with life, though somehow in less of the market's mood by reason of less confusion. Conway's quick, sure note of life's bustle is like a shorthand record; Mrs. Cherry's the "fair copy" of a more gentle and ruminant day.

In a water color painting Oscar E. Berninghaus has fixed his impression of the new Bell Telephone Building, a favorite subject for the painter and draftsman of these latter days. The building soars in tawny lines from the smoky turmoil of the hoisting gear. Back and about it, other soaring lines express the aspiration of the city. It is three-dimensional painting. There is body and weight. There is stunning play of light and shadow. There are striking contrasts between the St. Louis, here revealed, and the old that is passing in the rows of houses in the foreground.

Many Deserve Attention.

Many of the pictures that deserve a pause, a thought, a mention. Among them Esther Silber's bit of slum, Martha Hoke's gayly lighted fancy of the Crypt in the Artists' Guild, Edward Luchtemeyer's forthright painting of the water works at the Chair of Rocks; J. J. Eppenstein's most interesting note of that bit of Grand avenue beginning at the southwest corner of West Pine boulevard and including the Melbourne Hotel; Tom Barnett's study of Lindell boulevard; Carnelia Maury's charming Carondelet door, with its shadowed tree and its rose vines; Paul Fenske's view of "The Bevo Mill," Scott McNutt's richly shadowed vision of the Garden Theater at night; P. A. Gronemeyer's Ead's Bridge; C. K. Gleeson's Carr Park Playground; Tom Barnett's "City Club Entrance," which is as a vision of Italy . . . more there are than one can tell of here.

Not all, of course, is of an equal standard. Some of the painters whose interest has helped make the show a success are handicapped by subjects of the city. But the proportion of fine craftsmanship is large and there are some really significant, some genuinely worthwhile, and many interesting things.

List of Exhibitors.

The list of exhibitors includes: Oscar Thanginger, Esther Eilber, T. M. Jenkins, F. J. Kareaga, Nathan Lipsitz, Mrs. E. Lea, Mrs. Emily Summa, Tom I. Barnett, Mrs. F. C. Voss Jr., Roy Mueller, C. H. MOTLOW TO APPEAL FROM JACK DANIEL CASE RULING

Two Other Defendants Plan Similar Action to Prevent Taking Names Off Docket.

An appeal will be taken from the ruling of Federal Judge Davis yesterday, under which District Attorney Curry was permitted to strike from the docket, with leave to reinstate if desired, an indictment against 13 men charged with conspiracy in the theft of whisky from the Jack Daniel whisky warehouse.

The appeal will be pressed by Patrick H. Cullen, attorney for Lem Motlow, wealthy Tennessee distiller; Tom Heffernan and Henry L. Dahlman, who sold the whisky concern to the George Remus syndicate before it was looted. Curry's action was a legal device to keep the St. Louis charge alive in case similar indictments in Indianapolis cannot be brought to trial. A number of defendants were convicted in Indianapolis last December, but Motlow and others were not placed on trial.

O. E. BERNINGHAUS, ST. LOUIS ARTIST, NAMED TO ACADEMY

Highest Official Recognition in Country Given Him; Member of Taos Colony.

Oscar E. Berninghaus, widely-known St. Louis artist, has been elected an associate member of the National Academy of Design, the highest official recognition of merit in the country was notified yesterday of his election.

The only other St. Louis artist to be awarded this honor is Richard E. Miller, who was elected in 1915. After a short period as associate members, the artists become full-fledged academicians. For a number of years Berninghaus has sent his work, largely dealing with Indian and Western subjects, to the yearly expositions of the Academy. It was on the quality of these canvases that the Academy Board based its decision at the meeting in New York Wednesday night.

Berninghaus was born in St. Louis Oct. 2, 1874. He attended the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, and since has won many prizes and awards. He painted five of the Lunettes in the Capitol in Jefferson City, and is represented in the St. Louis Art Museum. He is a member of the Taos colony of artists at Taos, N. MOB OF BOLIVIANS AT LA PAZ ATTACK LEGATION OF PERU Demonstration Follows Reported Killing of Countrymen by Customs Official at Border.

By the Associated Press.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, April 17.—Quiet prevailed here today after special precautions had been taken by police to prevent recurrence of a demonstration last night by 2000 persons as the result of reports that two Bolivians had been killed by a Peruvian customs official.

When reports of the shooting on the Heath River, separating Peru and Bolivia, were received, a crowd of angry Bolivians stoned the Peruvian legation. The inmates of the legation fired seven shots into the air, but the crowd continued the attack. Police interfered and were forced to fire numerous shots over the rioters' heads before the mob was dispersed.

The homes of a number of Peruvians were attacked, but little damage was done.

After a visit by the President to the Peruvian minister and enforcement of special measures by police, it was announced today the situation had quieted down.

The victims of the border incident were Capt. Alfredo Urric Lagoita of the Bolivian boundary guard, and Julian Rada, chief of the Bolivian customs station. The aggressor is said to be Emilio Salas, an official of the Peruvian customs house on the Heath.

You drive in safety always in The New-Day JEWETT SIX

TEN minutes after you first take the wheel of the New-Day Jewett you'll feel a greater degree of confidence, in your car and in yourself, than you've ever felt before.

For in that time you will have discovered the almost instant acceleration of the car. You'll know how little pressure is required on its Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes to bring you to cushioned rest immediately. You'll enjoy its much wider vision, its comfortable roominess, its finger-touch steering, its ability to turn completely around in narrow streets, or to park in spaces unbelievably small.

You cannot find in any other car so many "safety" features. You cannot find another motor car that handles so easily—nor one that obeys your wishes so quickly and so surely.

The New-Day Jewett Six is the safest car in the world to drive—not by accident, but because it was built to be just that. But really—you'll never known how safe a car can be—how safe the New-Day Jewett Six is—until you take its wheel and drive. When will you take your first drive in this remarkable car? We invite you—without obligation on your part, of course.

MILLS WITHDRAWS AS SPONSOR FOR WAR CLAIMS BILL

New York Congressman Hears Proposed Legislation Affects Firm in Which He Is Stockholder

OTHERS IN SIMILAR STATUS, IT IS SAID

Garner of Texas Asserts Secretary of Treasury, Who Made Up Bill, Is in Companies Benefited.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The legislative course of the Mills bill to adjust German-American war claims took an unexpected twist today when its author, Representative Mills (Rep.) of New York, announced in the House that he would withdraw his support from the measure.

He had learned, he explained, that he was a director and stockholder in a company that would be affected by the measure. Under such conditions, irrespective of House rules, he said he considered it proper to decline to further support the bill.

Mills informed the House he would not participate in consideration of the proposal, either in the Ways and Means Committee, before which it is pending, or on the House floor. Information, which he confirmed, that he was an official in one of the corporations affected, he said, had been conveyed to him by Representative Garner (Dem.) of Texas, who yesterday characterized the measure "a stupendous steal."

Thinks Rules Disbar Other Votes.

Addressing the House after Mills had made his announcement, Garner said he doubted if 25 members, under House rules, had a right to vote on the bill.

It was introduced several weeks ago by Mills after its provisions had been worked out by the Treasury. It proposes adjustment of war claims between the German and American Governments and citizens through issuance of bonds. It is estimated that unsettled claims total about $250,000,000.

It was indicated that some other Republican on the Ways and Means Committee would sponsor the bill instead of Mills, while at the same time Democratic members made plans to oppose the measure to the limit.

Garner said that as soon as he found out definitely that Mills would be personally interested in the measure he felt it his duty to call his attention to it, adding:

"When I did he expressed surprise and said he did not know that they had a claim or an award under the Mixed Claims Commission.

Says Mellon Is Interested, Too.

"The Secretary of the Treasury, so far as I can ascertain—and I think I have conclusive evidence—is a stockholder in seven different firms which have had an award from the Mixed Claims Commission amounting to something over $1,000,000. The Secretary, according to the records, is the gentlemen who made up this bill. He says that the President examined it and is anxious that it shall become a law."

Distinctive Beauty at a One-Profit Price

Studebaker Big Six Brougham $209

THE most beautiful Studebaker ever built—a car that offers luxuries in style, finish and interior appointments considered impossible in a car at this price until Studebaker achieved it through One-Profit manufacture.

No car has finer type of body construction—nor more luxurious inner and outer appearance—than the Studebaker Big Six Brougham. There are only seven American cars of equal rated horsepower, and they cost from $2655 to $7955 more to buy.

It is because of this that we ask you to judge this fine car solely on a basis of comparison with any fine car you have admired—and buy then by what you know to be the facts.

From its black-enameled steel travel trunk on the rear, attractively set off by ornamental brackets, to the distinctive curve of its bright nickeled radiator—the Big Six Brougham is the highest example of the coachbuilders' art. Leather rear-quarter and landau arms complete its custom beauty.

A study in luxury

Inside—it's a study in luxury. Wide, deep seats accommodate five in easy-chair comfort. Upholstery is of finest broadcloth, tailored to a form-fitting design. Interior hardware is tastefully arranged and finished in rich Butler silver.

The richness of its interior and exterior finish is indicative of the fine quality body construction you cannot see. Body pillars are of selected northern white ash; cross members of hard maple. Studebaker standards—the highest in the industry—zealously guard every operation in its manufacture.

Studebaker Big Six Brougham

$2095 f. o. b. factory

Under Studebaker's fair and liberal Budget Payment Plan, this Brougham may be purchased out of monthly income for a small initial payment and at the lowest time-payment rates known to the automobile industry.

The Most Beautiful Studebaker Ever Built

Studebaker Big Six

world's fastest-selling high-powered car

THE Big Six Brougham is powered with the identical engine that carries hundreds of Studebaker busses at high speed hour after hour over some of the most mountainous and difficult-to-travel routes in America—hence we urge you to compare its thrilling performance with that of the finest "eights" as well as "sixes."

Because of volume production on a One-Profit basis, Studebaker is able to offer value in the Big Six Brougham that no manufacturer can duplicate. No other car of equal rated horsepower sells at less than double its price.

Studebaker's unique facilities

Few motor car "manufacturers" have foundries, forges, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of an automobile's cost is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of a car's cost is in the body.

Studebaker builds all its own bodies, all engines, all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Studebaker in the fine-car field enjoys such complete manufacturing facilities.

One-Profit value

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis—eliminating outside profits. The savings thus effected are passed on to Studebaker owners in the form of higher quality and lower prices.

Unit-Built construction

Studebaker facilities result, too, in cars designed, engineered and built as units. The hundreds of parts in a Studebaker function as a smooth-working unit, resulting in scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort and higher resale value.

Always kept up-to-date

Direct manufacturing control enables Studebaker to keep cars constantly up-to-date. We add improvements regardless of the calendar—we do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete. For a complete illustrated story of One-Profit manufacture and for a beautiful colored catalog of Big Six Studebakers drop a postal or a letter to The Studebaker Corporation of America, South Bend, Ind. Studebaker Big Six world's fastest-selling high-powered car

THE Big Six Brougham is powered with the identical engine that carries hundreds of Studebaker busses at high speed hour after hour over some of the most mountainous and difficult-to-travel routes in America—hence we urge you to compare its thrilling performance with that of the finest "eights" as well as "sixes."

Because of volume production on a One-Profit basis, Studebaker is able to offer value in the Big Six Brougham that no manufacturer can duplicate. No other car of equal rated horsepower sells at less than double its price.

Studebaker's unique facilities

Few motor car "manufacturers" have foundries, forges, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of an automobile's cost is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of a car's cost is in the body.

Studebaker builds all its own bodies, all engines, all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Studebaker in the fine-car field enjoys such complete manufacturing facilities.

One-Profit value

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis—eliminating outside profits. The savings thus effected are passed on to Studebaker owners in the form of higher quality and lower price.

Unit-Built construction

Studebaker's facilities result, too, in cars designed, engineered and built as units. The hundreds of parts in a Studebaker function as a smooth-working unit, resulting in scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort and higher resale value.

Always kept up-to-date

Direct manufacturing control enables Studebaker to keep cars constantly up-to-date. We add improvements regardless of the calendar—we do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete. For a complete illustrated story of One-Profit manufacture and for a beautiful colored catalog of Big Six Studebakers drop a postal or a letter to The Studebaker Corporation of America, South Bend, Ind. MRS. G. B.—Start amaryllis bulbs in pots with some bottom heat, say on the register or near the window, keeping the bulbs near the surface of the soil. They flower when making their first leaves, but they must not be put away and neglected nor put in the cellar after the flower fades for it is then the plant makes its principal growth and stores up strength for future flowering. Keep them watered and growing until the winter months. Then put the plants in a cool room and keep on the dry side, watering them only occasionally. Toward spring the top soil in the pot should be replaced with rich dirt. They like a rich, heavy loam. The offsets can be removed and potted when you start the bulbs into active growth again.

B. G.—Rub isinglass in motor car curtains with slightly warm cylinder oil, after which wipe off the oil with a piece of clean cloth. Then remove the last traces of oil with a clean cloth dampened with gasoline.

READER.—John Wilkes Booth, actor and assassin of President Lincoln, was born in 1839, the son of Junius Brutus Booth, actor. He abandoned the stage in 1863 and began to organize the conspiracy which resulted in Lincoln's death. Booth fled from Washington after the shooting and reached Bowling Green, Va., before he was overtaken and shot after refusing to surrender. His body was taken to Washington and in 1869 it was buried in Greenmont Cemetery at Baltimore. There have been stories to the effect that Booth made his escape and that another body was substituted for him. The most persistent legend states that after living in Canada, Mexico and elsewhere, he died by poison at Enid, Ok., in 1903. All the available records dispute this claim.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

F. B.—The following is the formula for enuresis (bed wetting): This may be caused by some abnormal conditon present; if so, it should be corrected. This includes the presence of pin worms in the bowel. A highly acid urine calls for alkaline drinks and free drinking of water. The child should lead a simple, natural life, preferably in the country. No overtaxing of the nervous system, at home or in school. Excitement should be avoided. Early hours and plenty of sleep. No coffee, tea or beer. Avoid sweets and highly seasoned food. The best diet is milk, vegetables, fruits, meats and cereals. Never punish a child for this trouble; rewards for avoidance are much better. Appeal to the pride. If wetting occurs at night encourage the child to retain the water as long as possible during the day and discourage drinking fluids in the late afternoon and give none after 6 p. m. See that no condition of ill health and no local irritation such as adenoids are overlooked. Of drugs, atropine is best, one grain to two ounces of water, of which one drop represents 1-1000 of a grain. One drop may be given for each year of the child's age. For night wetting at first give the dose at 4 and 10 p. m. After a few days give at 4, 7 and 10 p. m. This may be very gradually increased until double the quantity is given. It is not advisable to go above these doses, but if larger doses are given the increase must be more gradual. The physiological effect of atropine is first dryness of the nose, mouth and throat; beyond this it is useless to go, besides not being safe, for atropine is a potent, dangerous drug in overdoses, so care in dosage is essential. When the condition is under control or a cure seems to have been attained, the same dose should be continued for some time and then reduced, the drug being given for at least two months in gradually diminishing doses. This is most important if a permanent cure is to be obtained, as there is always a strong tendency to relapse. Strychnine may be added when atropine alone fails, especially in day wetting. Begin with a dose of 1-100 grain for a child of 5 years, given twice daily, very gradually increasing to double the dose, three times a day. Do not push it further. Careful, intelligent, systematic training of the child is a valuable adjunct to any form of treatment.

WIFE, CHILDREN, BROTHERS, SISTERS and all who loved him.

In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Augusta Krieg, who departed this life two years ago, April 16, 1924.
Today recalls sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of her today,
Are the ones who loved her best.
Sadly missed by MOTHER AND SISTERS. (c)

In loving remembrance of my dear son, George Daly Ebersol, who departed this life, April 17, 1925:
Peaceful be your sleep dear son,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name.
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Caroline Bredemeyer, who departed this life, two years ago, April 19, 1924.
Loving mother, true and kind,
No friend on earth like her we'll find;
God called her home, 'twas His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still;
For all of us she did her best,
God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN. (c)

In loving memory of my dear wife and mother, Augusta Krieg, who departed this life two years ago, April 16, 1924.
The flowers we lay upon your grave
Will wither and decay,
But our love for you who sleeps beneath,
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by HUSBAND AND DAUGHTER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER. (c)

In loving memory of Ruth Helen Frisch, who departed this life two years ago April 16, 1924:
God has her in His keeping now
Angels attend her through the day,
Never her feet shall go astray,
Never shall anguish line her brow,
Never a bitter thought shall find
Harsh lodgment in her gentle mind.
Lovely her girlhood shall remain
Safe from the hurt of time and rain.
Sadly missed by her PARENTS, BROTHER AND SISTER.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad memory of my dear beloved son and our brother, Harry L. Sandell, who died one year ago, April 19, 1925.
Just one year ago today,
My dear son and our brother was called away;
Oh, that parting was so sad,
Bid us farewell, no chance he had;
We hope some day we will get to hear,
The one that fled from here.
May God forgive them if He will,
For whom hearts with sorrow fill;
Just the same as that sad day
As he in his casket lay.
Sadly missed by his MOTHER, SISTERS, BROTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, George Becherer, who died one year ago, April 19, 1925:
So unexpected and so sad, one
Year ago today, the dearest pal
I ever had on earth was called away;
He bade no one a last farewell;
He said good-by to none.
His loving heart had ceased to beat,
And before we knew it, he was gone.
Mourn not for me, nor sorrow take
But love each other for my sake;
Weep not for me, but be content,
My life to you was only lent.
My grave you know, my bed you see,
Prepare yourself to follow me.
In love we lived, in peace I died.
You asked my life, but God denied!
Anniversary requiem mass will be said Monday, April 19, at St. Agatha's Church at 8 o'clock for the repose of his soul. George Becherer.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND FAMILY.

COTTON PRICES MIXED AT CLOSE IN NEW YORK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Renewal of yesterday's selling movement based primarily upon better weather conditions for the new crop start in the South, led to further declines in the cotton market today. All new crop months made new low ground for the season, but the decline was checked by trade pricing or covering around 18.51c for May and 17.00c for October. May later rallied to 18.61c and October to 17.14c. The market closed steady, net 7 points lower to 2 points higher. The opening was easy at a decline of 7 to 13 points, active months soon showing net losses of 13 to 15 points. Selling on the better weather was stimulated by relatively easy Liverpool cables, poor trade advices from Manchester and reiterated talk of domestic mill curtailment. Covering in new crop months and trade buying of the old, checked the break at about the 18½c level for May, however, and the market was less active with forenoon prices decidedly steadier.

The official forecast for partly cloudy or cooler weather in the South probably disappointed recent sellers and there may have been a little buying on apprehensions that unsettled conditions would develop over the week end. July sold up from 17.95c to 18.12c and December from 16.66c to 16.76c, and the market closed within a few points of the best.

Private cables reported hedge selling and liquidation in Liverpool on the better weather news from the South and unsettled labor conditions in England, adding there was only a small demand for cotton cloths in Lancashire and that yarns were depressed.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 60,576 bales, against 90,831 last year.

Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, April 17.—The butter markets during the week brought a continuation of the weakness and declining prices which were so prevalent during the previous week. The chief difference between the two weeks was that the lower tendency was more general during the week under review. Many operators had fixed 39 cents at New York and 38 cents at Chicago as the low point on 92 scores, but when the decline continued after reaching these figures without stimulating any buying interest, the situation could be described as demoralized.

After the previous week's decline some of the trade felt that a certain price level had been reached where demand would take care of current receipts. Most of the buyers had been off the market for some time and were expected back with heavier orders. This anticipated demand did not materialize and stocks accumulated and could not be moved except at concessions.

Supplies of all grades of butter were ample to meet the exceptionally light demand with stocks of fancy butter heavy. During some years April has brought short supplies, a good demand and high prices while April in other years brought heavy receipts, a comparatively light buying support and low prices.

Quality of butter at this season of the year also makes it rather risky to hold butter more han a few days. In other words, the only possible support for the market at this season is a regular consuming demand and unless this is heavy enough to cause a shortage of supplies a real firm tone is almost impossible.

In the week under review, the receipts of butter at the four markets have been exceeding those of last year, indicating that production is still increasing.

CATTLE AND HOGS LOWER, LAMBS UP

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last wk.	Pr. wk.	Year ago
Cattle and calves	22,937	18,587	19,399
Hogs	80,416	70,408	59,591
Sheep	3,722	4,296	2,825
Horses and mules	284	452	290
Totals	107,359	93,743	92,105

Cattle and hogs closed slightly lower for the week at the St. Louis National Stock Yards, although gains were registered in sheep and lambs and horses and mules ruled steady to strong. Combined receipts at approximately 107,359 head were larger than both a week ago and a year ago. Cattle scored a substantial advance Monday, although trading during succeeding sessions was generally downward. Compared with a week ago beef steers, light yearling steers and heifers and all classes of cows average 15c to 25c lower, with most sales showing the full loss. Bulls alone maintained a steady level. Beef steers were in rather liberal supply and quality gradede medium to good. The bulk of sales was $8 to $9 per cwt. Light steers and heifers of desirable finish scored around $8 and $9 with tops reaching $10 and $10.15. Beef cows sold in a popular spread of $5.75 to $6.50. Cutter cows closed at $4.25 to $5.25 and canners at $3 to $4.25. Bologna bulls continued at $5.50 to $6.50 and heavy beef animals made $6 to $7.25. Stocker and feeder cattle did not show any great change. Receipts were light and demand about in proportion. Steer prices ranged from $7 to $8.45 and cows and heifers brought current prices. The closing top for veal calves at $11 compared with $11.50 the previous week. The cheaper grades also declined, first cuts closing at $8 and common cuts at $4 to $6. Southern canner yearlings were available at $4.50 to $5.50.

Hog Run Heavier.

The local hog market drew a generous quota of hogs during the past week, receipts much heavier than the previous week and also the same period a year ago. While some increase was also shown at other Western markets, the 11 market circuit still shows a lighter total than a year ago. With this increase in numbers the past week came a deterioration of quality, this feature especially noticeable in the light and medium weight hogs, although heavies too showed a slightly lower grading in flesh. While orders for bacon hogs took care of some of this class of hogs at satisfactory prices in comparison with other hogs, the majority found much discrimination and usually sold at prices around 25c per cwt, under fat hogs of the same weight. Southern hogs were another source of trouble for salesmen. A limited outlet was offered through other sources at a discount of $2.50 to $3 per cwt. in price. Declines in value were the rule in all classes last week, although light kinds were the hardest hit of any. This class after up and down fluctuations throughout the six days closed the week at a loss of 15c to 25c mostly, medium and heavy butcher hogs looking steady to lower and heaviest grades around steady. Order buying demand was slack toward the latter part of the week and lights slow in moving, although butcher hogs from 190 pounds and up found ready outlet right up to the close. Pig trade throughout the week showed less change than any class of swine, but late in the week suffered a setback that closed them at a 25c to 50c decline. Top kinds are selling around $13.25 to $13.40, with medium grades at $13 and fair quality light pigs at $12.50 to $13. Plain Southern pigs range downward to $8.50 in some cases. Packing sows received a cut of 25c in price, some of the light kinds 35c off. Good light mixing sows quotable up to $10.75 late in the week, although the bulk of offerings cleared at $10.50 to $10.60. Light stags are 50c off at $10, with the medium and heavy kinds steady to weak at $8 to $9.50. Good heavy hogs, 280 pounds and up, quotable at $12.25 to $12.50; weights from 240 to 270 pounds, $12.50 to $12.85; offerings from 210 to 230 pounds, $12.90 to $13.25; lighter butchers and shipping weights from 160 to 200 pounds, $13.25 to $13.65. Pigs, 90 pounds and up, $13.25 to $13.65. Stock pigs, 70 to 120 pounds, $14 to $15. Packer sows, $10.50 to $10.75; stags, $8 to $10.

Lamb Market Advances.

The week just finished saw one of the most satisfactory sessions in sheep and lamb trading that has been witnessed in some time, looking at things from the perspective of selling interests. Receipts were of moderate proportions, but shipments of through and direct stock were materially lighter than during the previous six-day period, with the exception of one or two instances the market throughout the week showed stronger tendencies and closing sales indicate an advance of 25c to 50c on best grades of lambs, culls and medium kinds ruling strong to higher in spots. Wool lambs made up a small part of the week's offerings, with practically none of this class on sale during the latter part of the week. A high of $14.15 was registered during mid-week trading for some choice fed lambs to local butchers, sales to packers of odd lots mostly ranging from $13 to $13.50. Some few wool lambs averaging 104 pounds were noted as low as $11.50. The movement of spring lambs up to date has been very slow and unsatisfactory, the past week's offering in this line consisting of a few odd head of stuff, most of which was inferior in quality. Sales ranged from $14.50 to $16. Clipped lambs, of which the big end of the week's supplies consisted, sold very well. Local butchers paid up to $12.25 in mid week for some of this class with packers, however, making this price look out of line by purchasing their supplies at $11.50 to $11.75 largely. Some fat light clippers late in the week brought $12.25 to packers. Heavies in this class met with the same discrimination as weighty wool lambs, sales ranging downward to $9.75 for some averaging well over 100 pounds. Culls sold around $9 largely, best culls $9.50. Sheep were generally steady, although mutton ewes were strong. Some sales of light fat kinds were noted up to $9, with the bulk, however, clearing at $8 to $8.50. Clipped kinds and heavy wool offerings brought $7 to $7.50. Choppers and canners were mostly wooled offerings and sold at $2 to $4 largely. Bucks cleared at $4 to $5, with some of the best grades making as high as $6.

Good to choice wool lambs quotable at $13.50 to $14; medium to good $13 to $13.50; plain to medium, $12 to $13; cull and common, $10 to $12; skips, $5 to $9; good to choice clipped lambs, $11.75 to $12.25; medium to good, $11.25 to $11.75; plain to medium, $10.50 to $11.25; culls, $8 to $10; good to choice wool ewes, $8 to $9; medium to good, $7 to $8; plain to medium, $6 to $7; clipped varieties quotable at $1 to $2 less than wooled kinds; choppers and canners, $2 to $4; bucks, $4 to $6; fat goats, $3 to $4; thin goats, $1 to $2.50; fat kids, $6 to $8; thin and common kids, $3 to $5.

Horse and Mule Market.

Horse and mule receipts were again of relatively light volume at approximately 300 head and markets maintained a firm level in most departments throughout the week. Clearance was good. Work horses and farm horses were readily absorbed and a few of the big horses and cheap offerings reflected a stronger trend. Work mules and harness marked kinds with bone, also big mules reflected a firm trend. There was also a good call for mine mules and pit mules. Receipts included a number of mules not suitable for the trade and these were inclined to rule slow. These included light-boned stock and offerings not suitable for work.

Weekly Metal Review

NEW YORK, April 17.—Pig iron was quiet and about steady. Foreign iron was being sold more freely at sharp discounts under domestic and caused talk of advocating a higher tariff.

Copper has been firmer since the publication of the March statistics showing a reduction in stocks of refined in the hands of producers. These figures evidently encouraged a firmer attitude on the part of sellers, while they also appeared to have a stimulating effect on European markets. With London advancing and exporters showing increased interest, buyers for domestic consumption became more active and a fair business was reported at 14c for electrolytic delivered.

Tin scored a substantial advance through buying by dealers on the improvement shown at London and the Far East. Prompt straits are in scant supply, but consumers' needs appear to have been well provided for on the recent decline.

Zinc wa sirdegular, with demand limited and prices ruling within a range of ¼c.

Antimony was unchanged and while demand was light for spot metal, there was a little better inquiry for future shipment from China.

Lead displayed a firmer tone. Consumers have bought heavily and producers are reported to be well booked up into June.

CROP NEWS IS WATCHED CAREFULLY

In Field of Industry and Trade Crop Products at the Moment Are the Newest and Most Important Topic of Interest, Says Review.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"After the passing of nearly a month since the opening of spring it still is difficult to find much that is new on which to base an opinion of the future. Certainly the backing and filling movements of the stock market nowadays are more interesting for the corrective influences that they reflect in the speculative field than for what they may reveal of coming developments in industry. Even if the stock market should work lower, as many believe it will, the decline would not necessarily mean that good times are about to change into a period of depression. Notwithstanding the drastic liquidation of the year to date stocks will stand high above levels to which they would surely have fallen had it become evident that the country was facing a crisis in trade. For these reasons the more experienced prophets are giving greater weight to reports from industry in their efforts to understatnd underlying conditions than to the inconclusive movements of the stock market.

Watching Crops.

"In the field of industry and trade perhaps the crop products at the moment are the newest and most important topic of interest, although backward weather in many sections has retarded spring work and thus increased the probability of error in the early forecasts. Much can happen between now and the time of harvest, but real basis for the expectation of a large crop of winter wheat may be found in the Government report and dispatches from the wheat belt of Kansas and the Southwest.

Trend of Commodities.

"Except for a temporary improvement last summer commodity prices at wholesale have tended downward now for a year but the March recession of 2.2 per cent recorded by the Bureau of Labor statistics compilation represents the sharpest down swing since early in the movement. That a sagging market in commodities invites trouble when the proper preparations have not been made for a decline is plain enough but in the present instance the readjustment has brought a minimum of disturbance since the recession has been most orderly and gradual and since the stock of goods in dealers' hands had not been allowed to become excessive. Quite a different situation was it that prevailed in 1920. Prices fell violently then and the fall brought agonies of the worst sort since the shelves of the dealers were loaded with goods purchased at fancy prices. The rapidity of the decline did not allow time to make the proper adjustments of costs to selling prices and concerns in possession of large stocks on hand were obliged to write off tremendous inventory losses. Marked improvement in our transportation facilities among other things has encouraged hand-to-mouth buying during the last year, however, so that the comparatively moderate recession in commodity prices at no time has left dealers in great danger.

Foreign Trade Returns.

"Some concern is expressed over the swelling tide of our merchandise imports, which in March exceeded our exports by $70,000,000, but the condition is not one to disturb persons that see what is back of the movement. Clearly our debtors are endeavoring to settle here through shipments of goods and gold but in the long run that is precisely what must precede any general revival of world trade. That the adverse balance swung so high last month is partly explained by the unusually heavy inflow of rubber and a falling off in cotton and grain shipments. While the approach of autumn doubtless will bring a period of excess exports again, we should be prepared to accept occasional periods of excess imports as beneficial and natural for a nation that has become a creditor. The fall in the French franc to a new low level for all time at 3.35 did not stir the financial community particularly, although, it will be recalled, the fall to 3.42 in March, 1924, brought great anxiety and the announcement of a $137,000,000 stabilization loan."

Dull Market Saturday.

"Important developments were lacking in today's quiet trading in financial market. A generally steady tone prevailed in securities, but the volume of business was characterized by midsummer dullness. Transactions scarcely exceeded 450,000 shares on the Stock Exchange. The inactivity reflected uncertainty among professional operators and the public over the outlook for business and market prices. Attempts to dislodge additional stock having proved fruitless, speculators for the decline were not disposed to continue their campaign for lower prices. At the same time operations for the rise have virtually been suspended. Prospects of continued easy money were reflected in continued demand for high-grade investments, although the volume of business in the bond market also was small. Good rails were steady, while Government bonds ruled firm and fairly good buying movement developed in some of the semispeculative issues.

Bank Clearings on Increase.

"While speculators in securities showed a desire to await developments before making commitments, a favorable sign was seen in the bank clearings for the week compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle. These revealed a total of $10,383,834,056, an increase of 4.5 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. In New York they showed the clearings an increase of 6.6 per cent. Another set of figures made public during the day bearing a relation to security prices was the March commodity price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. These figures showed that wholesale commodity prices fell 2.2 per cent last month, the sharpest decline in a year.

Price Trend Irregular.

"Prices moved irregularly in light trading, many traders showing a desire to limit operations until evidence accumulated that a definite move was under way. Industrials eased off at the start, then reacted when professionals bought 'for a turn.' Announcement that the General Motors plant in Canada would resume operations Monday was followed by a rally in motor stocks, while oils were in rather good demand in response to statistics showing increased use of gasoline. Steel stocks and most of the pivotal issues were generally firm in the closing dealings.

French Francs Weak.

"French francs again lacked support and held at the record low of 3.34½ established yesterday. Buying orders were scarce and although offerings were fairly large they were not pressed for sale. The remainder of the European list held within relatively narrow limits. Scandinavians showing a tendency to sag and Spanish exchange developing renewed strength. Far Eastern movements again attracted attention, Chinese exchange falling to a new low record for the year as Japanese rates worked slightly higher and recorded a new peak for the movement. Buying of Japanese exchange and selling of Chinese was attributed to Chinese mercantile interests, who were anticipating establishment of the yen on a gold basis this year and a further rise in Japanese rates.

Commodities Irregular.

"Prices in the principal commodity markets were irregular, cotton continuing to decline in response to reports of better crop weather. Quotations were below the bottom prices of last year and almost as low as the lowest point reached this year. Grain prices held firmer.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"A slight decrease in the surplus of the Clearing House banks took place during the week, it was revealed today in the weekly statement. This showed a decrease of $5,427,020, resulting in an excess of reserves of $14,264,680. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $65,076,000.

NEW TRADING HOURS ON LOCAL EXCHANGE GO IN EFFECT MONDAY

THE ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE will put into effect a new schedule of trading hours Monday. Only one session will be held daily, that extending from 10 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

For many years the local board has held two sessions daily, a 45-minute period in the morning being followed by a 30-minute afternoon session.

ST. Ely-Walker was the next most active security during the week, but sales were only a little over 700 shares. The general market showed mixed price changes for the week. Ely-Walker showed fractional loss for the period, as did Consolidated Lead, while Missouri Portland and Brown Shoe were down more than a point. The traction stock, which led trading, ranged between 7 and 5, closing at 6¼.

Among the individual incidents of the week was the sale of Lafayette-South Side Bank stock at 250, Laclede Gas Light preferred at 87 and Century Electric at 115 and 116.

The volume of business for the six days was approximately the same as for the preceding week.

Financial and Industrial Briefs

NEW YORK, April 17.

Shell Union Oil Corporation has made a contract with Miller and Lux Co. to prospect for oil on 130,000 acres of the Button Willow Ranch properties in Kern County, Cal., on a royalty basis. Shell Union, it is understood, will spend about $250,000 in five years. If oil is found the company has the right to operate in one section.

Burns Brothers, coal, had record earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31, with the largest net income in the company's history, exceeding $2,600,000 after depletion, depreciation and tax reserves, double the net income of the previous 12 months. This was equal after preferred dividends to $16 a share on the Class "A" common and $8 a share on the "B" common.

Production of crude oil from the combined properties of Standard Oil of California and Pacific Oil Co. are yielding about 152,000 barrels daily, of which Standard properties are producing about 98,000 barrels and Pacific Oil 55,000 barrels. This is more than 25 per cent of California's daily output of approximately 600,000 barrels daily. In addition, the two companies have about 28,000 barrels daily of shut-in production, representing about 40 per cent of the total shut-in production of the state, estimated at 63,000 barrels. With this volume of output, the Standard of California's organization is calculated to have the largest crude oil production of any oil company in the United States. Continuance of the present rate of output for the rest of the year would bring the total yield for 1926 to about 54,000,000 barrels.

Greater activity in iron and steel scrap is reported from the Pittsburg district. Sales of heavy melting steel have been made at $16.50 and at $17 a ton, confirming recent quotations by dealers.

Total consumption of copper by the automobile industry in 1925 exceeded 235,000,000 pounds, a record figure, the Copper and Brass Association reports, based on complete figures of automobile production and registration now available. An increase of nearly 20 per cent in the year's output of cars and a rise of 13 per cent in registration were factors in the larger quantity of copper used in the industry.

Frank Callahan has been elected a director of the Consolidated Textile Corporation, replacing Andrew G. Pierce Jr., formerly chairman of the board, who retires. Joseph Bennet was chosen a vice president. Other directors and officers were re-elected.

This was equivalent to $9.91 a share on $137,816,050 common stock, $50 par, against $5.67 a share on $123,826,200 stock outstanding the year before. Gross profits were $41,971,195 against $29,721,151 in 1924. Current assets of $53,497,794 included nearly $32,000,000 in cash. Current liabilities were $16,697,731.

LONDON FINANCIAL REVIEW OF WEEK

Special wireless to Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 19.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in review today, says:

"Underlying not only the coal, but other industrial problems here, is the general lack of vim. Statesmen and other people think that all will be well if industry can somehow scrape along on lines giving workers a necessary wage.

"Keen appreciation of foreign competition, the need of meeting it and the accumulation of big stores of wealth, with the subsequent consideration of wise distribution of it among workers, is lacking. In short, a hand-to-mouth policy is followed without vision.

"The situation, of course, is complicated by a lack of confidence between capital and labor, for which both sides are responsible, but the political aspects of our industrial problems should not be overlooked.

"Nevertheless, it is not believed that an acute struggle is imminent. It is believed, wisely or otherwise, that the Government may afford further small relief for a short period, easing the first effects of lower wages.

"The situation is complicated by the position of Germany, which country would export huge supplies of coal if the output were restricted here.

"There is an unusual disposition here to minimize the unfavorable March trade figures and instead to emphasize points like the probable effect of lower-priced cotton and other commodities.

"Anxiety of trust companies here to take advantage of the present level of security prices in the United States is indicated by the fact that in some instances money is even being borrowed temporarily from the banks for investment in America. Moreover, there is little doubt here that the recent Wall street slumps have drawn the attention of our speculative investors once more to American securities, holdings of which are increasing.

"One institution here recently issued a circular on the best class of American rails, which, while recognizing the possibility of a further fall in American railroad stocks if industrials continue to slump, emphasizes such points as that, whereas taking the average prices of leading railways and industrial stocks, the former used to sell in Wall street above industrials and have consistently sold below them since the early part of 1921. The point is emphasized also that the rise in railways stocks from the low point of 1921 to the present time has been relatively less than that of industrials.

"There is merit in the argument that Wall street can measure better than London the chief points that are noteworthy of illustrating the increased interest on this side in your securities.

"Consideration of our industrial shortcomings should not obscure the recognition that America's financial position is pretty sound. For that reason settlement of the coal dispute, however temporary, might easily occasion a general revival in financial activities, with a rise in securities, always supposing that no important drain in gold takes place, which would involve a higher bank rate."

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Sales of unfinished cotton goods today were larger in some houses than at any time in the past three weeks and were made up chiefly of print cloths and sheetings. Yarns remained unchanged. Curtailment of production will be undertaken shortly by a number of Southern mills. Raw silk dropped sharply here and at Yokohama. Silk goods are slow for immediate sale, but were being offered and bought for fall. Wool goods were quiet. Work probably will be resumed in the dress goods mills of Passaic, N. J., on Monday, and openings of fall lines are expected to take place next week. Burlaps continued quiet and easy.

Lead, Zinc and Copper.

Lead was reported quiet in St. Louis Saturday at $7.80 per 100 pounds. Zinc was quoted at $7.15 per 100 pounds.

IMPROVED TONE SHOWN ON CURB DURING WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17.—An overnight break of 25 points followed with a further loss of 10 points in Ford Motor of Canada was the outstanding feature in an otherwise quiet session on the curb exchange today. The movement in Ford Motor of Canada was effected on odd lot transactions totalling 190 shares and its low quotation at 440 showed a loss of 140 points for the week. It rallied 20 points in the following dealings.

General Baking "A" opened slightly higher but failed to maintain that improvement. A few public utilities declined on small dealings, American Light dropped 2⅞ points. After the opening period there was only occasional trading and formerly active favorites were neglected. In the oil division, Standard Oil of New York and Tidewater Associated recorded small advances.

The curb market during the week showed an improved tone generally, nearly all the usually active issues being well sustained and reflecting quiet accumulation whenever a supply appeared. Different conditions existed, however, in a number of the inactive specialties. Several fluctuated violently over a wide range and a number of those stocks sustained severe losses. Most interest was attached to urgent selling of Ford Motor of Canada and although transactions in that stock were of only small lots there was no nearby demand after each sale and this small selling was effective in carrying the stock down.

Royal Baking Powder, which had not been traded recently showed a loss of 38 points from its last preceding sale a few months ago and a loss of five points carried. Bucyrus down to 195. This stock sold at 247 early in the year. Atlas Portland Cement dropped 3 points and Fajardo Sugar had a range of over 20 points to the low level of 124¾ before a rally occurred.

Clearings, Money, Silver

The St. Louis Clearing House Association reported clearings for April 17, 1926, $23,300,000. Corresponding day last year, $19,500,000; this year, $2,351,400,000; corresponding period last year $2,270,000,000. Report of debits for April 16, 1926, were: Debits to individual accounts, $29,700,000; total to date, $2,698,800,000; debits to bank and bankers' accounts, $18,200,000; total to date, $1,641,200,000; combined debits were $47,900,000; total to date to individual and bank and bankers' accounts, $4,340,000,000.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Heavy selling of silver by Chinese interests who are reported to be accumulating Japanese yen on belief that the gold standard will be restored in Japan this year, placing the yen on parity with the dollar, is considered responsible for the current decline in the price of silver which is at its lowest level in the New York market for two years. Quotations in the London market also are the lowest in several years. Silver is quoted at 63⅝c an ounce in New York.

PARIS, April 17.—Prices moved irregularly on the Bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 46 francs 45 centimes. Exchange on London, 144 francs 90 centimes. Five per cent loan, 56 francs 85 centimes. The dollar was quoted at 29 francs 75 centimes.

LONDON, April 17.—Bar silver 29 5-16d per ounce. Money, 3⅝ per cent. Discount rates, short and three months bills, 4⅜ per cent.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Bar silver 63⅝; Mexican dollars, 48⅝.

New York Rubber Exchange.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Opening: Rubber, easy; smoked ribbed sheets, May, 46c; July, 45.50c; September, 44.50c.

NEW YORK, April 17. (Closing)—Rubber barely steady: May, 46.90; July, 45.10; September, 44.50. Smoked ribbed, spot, 46⅞c.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY.—

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17.—A slow decline in stock prices, a slight stiffening in bond quotations reflecting the easing of monetary rates, a sharp rally in wheat futures, a break in rubber prices and a drop in silver to the lowest point in two years were the high lights of this week's financial and commodity markets.

The stock market appeared to be awaiting more definite indications of the trend of business, which has been hampered by spring by unseasonable weather. Such ordinarily favorable factors as another sharp drop in brokers' loans, a substantial increase in bank clearings, a 20 per cent jump in gasoline consumption and unusually favorable first quarter earnings reports by several large railroad and industrial corporations were counteracted by the further decline in wholesale commodity prices, the reduction in steel mill operations and the narrowing margin of profit in several industries, particularly the sugar, steel and textile.

The rally in wheat was inspired by fears of a world shortage of the commodity before the new crop is ready. The break in rubber reflected the accumulation of surplus stocks of the raw material. Heavy selling of the Chinese currencies for the purpose of accumulating Japanese exchange, which is expected to be restored to a gold basis, accounted in part, for the drop in silver.

French francs were driven down to 3.34 cents in today's market. Peruvian and Chinese exchange also established new levels for the year. Canadian exchange went to a premium of 5-32 of 1 per cent, assuring an early resumption of gold exports to that country.

BOND TRADE DULL BUT TREND HIGHER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17. — Bond prices continued to point toward higher levels today but trading was dull and featureless. While an undercurrent of strength was evident at the start, the market soon was influenced by the general loss of interest which marked dealings in securities.

The pressure of investment funds seeking an outlet held most of the United States Government obligations around the year's highest levels. Most of the buying centered in the fourth Liberty 4¼s and the Treasury 4s.

The foreign list continued to make a good showing, although most of the price changes were fractional. French issues ignored the downward drift of the franc to another low record, some of the Government and municipal bonds scoring moderate gains.

Price movements in the railroad and industrial divisions lacked uniformity, but the trend was mainly upward. Chicago & Alton 3½ per cent certificates, Norfolk Southern refunding 5s and Ulster & Delaware 4s moved up 2 to 4½ points, while other liens which had led the advance earlier in the week eased off on realizing sales.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange, says:

"Record-breaking movements in French exchange were the features of the foreign exchange market this week. The rate for checks on Paris yesterday fell to 3.34½, a new low for all time, following the making of fresh bottoms on two preceding days. Actual business in French exchange was not large, but the market was flooded with selling orders continually, offerings being made until bids for some amounts were reached. Those concerned in the trading, including leading banking interests, held the view that instead of this trading being referred to as selling of French exchange, it could be better described as buying of dollars by French interests.

"Belgian exchange was naturally influenced by this movement, the Belgian franc falling 12 points on small dealings. Sterling was in supply for a time, when cables sold at a slight fraction below $4.86, but became firmer in the last few days. Italian was steadily held. Wide movements again marked Norwegian exchange, which made a new high for the year on an advance of 30 points to 21.92. Swiss and Dutch hold close to their recent trading positions.

"A vigorous upward movement in Spanish exchange carried the peseta to above 14.30. This came immediately after the announcement of the conference to settle the Riff troubles.

"Exchange on Japan was strong all through the week, yen cables, which were bought on a large scale, advancing ¼ of a cent to 46.75, a new high for the year. Silver exchanges were heavy, both Shanghai and Hongkong following the silver metal on a downward movement, those exchanges showing losses of around 2 cents.

"Heavy trading sent Canadian exchange up ¼ of a cent to 100.25. Havana exchange declined to 1-16 discount.

"French francs again today lacked support and held at the record low of 3.34½ established yesterday. Buying orders were scarce and although offerings were fairly large they were not pressed for sale. The remainder of the European list held within relatively narrow limits. Scandinavians showing a tendency to sag, and Spanish exchange developing renewed strength. Far Eastern movements again attracted attention. Chinese exchange falling to a new low record for the year as Japanese rates worked slightly higher and recorded a new peak for the movement. Buying of Japanese exchange and selling of Chinese was attributed to Chinese mercantile interests, who were anticipating establishment of the yen on a gold basis this year and a further rise in Japanese rates.

SHARP RISE IN WHEAT AT CLOSE OF WEEK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Wheat prices were up sharply today and most local longs were caught sold out. Strength in Winnipeg, due to heavy buying by exporters and buying by houses believed to be acting for a local leader, were the causes of the sharp upturn. Closing prices were 2⅛c to 3¾c higher. New May, $1.68⅜ to $1.68⅛; old, $1.66¾ to $1.66½; July, $1.44⅝ to $1.44½; September, $1.37⅝ E, $8.75; F, $10.50@10.60; G, $10.75@10.85; M, $12.75; N, $13; WG, $13.50; to $1.37¼. Wheat closed up 5c to cc for the week.

The market started rather tame, with a little covering by overnight shorts, due to failure of Liverpool to respond to our Friday's weakness. Liverpool attributed its stubbornness to the fact that world shipments were below requirements. Locals also were inclined to oppose an advance, but when Eastern houses bought heavily, they rushed to cover and found little wheat for sale. A surprising feature in the market was the strength shown by July.

Seaboard advised that a moderate export business was worked overnight, but buying by exporters at Winnipeg suggested that a good volume of business was closed. Milling demand has quieted down. Hard wheat basis in Chicago was ½c to 1c lower; in Omaha, 1½c lower, and an easier tone was shown in Minneapolis. Local cash men said they could get no offers of cash wheat from the Northwest today. Beneficial showers were shown over the Canadian Northwest and light rains over North Dakota.

Corn was more active and firm. Prices were ⅞c to 1½c higher and for the week 2⅝c to 3¼c higher; May, 74⅝c to 74½c; July, 79⅛c to 79c; September, 81⅝c to 81½c.

A feature was the aggressive buying of July by commission houses, credited to the account of a leading local, who expressed bullish convictions of continued unfavorable weather for preparing for seeding. Heavy snows were shown in parts of Illinois today. Shipping sales were only 12,000 bushels. St. Louis reported some export business via the gulf.

Oats were higher, closing ⅛c to ⅞c higher, and for the week ⅞c to 1⅞c higher, May 42⅝c to 43¾c, July 43⅜c to 43½c, September 44c. Buying was stimulated by reports of improved cash demand, shipping sales being 135,000 bushels.

Provisions were higher with grain and hogs. Lard closed 7½c to 10c higher; ribs 10c up and bellies 2½c higher.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, April 17.—Raw wool markets closed the week quietly, with little change in price quotations. Wool dealers had some cause for optimism in the fact that manufacturers' stocks are low and that orders of raw wool material will have to expand when good demand picks up.

SHARP RISE IN WHEAT ON THE LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 17.—Bullish comment on moisture situation in North Dakota, strength of Winnipeg credited to buying by exporters and reported indications that 10,000,000 bushels of North American wheat has been bought this week for export to Europe had much to do with a sharp upturn in wheat today. Bookings of ocean freight room for grain the first week in May were said to be the largest ever known. Corn also closed higher.

A trade opinion which received notice was that the price of July wheat would be governed by uncertainties of the growing season. Less favorable crop advices from the southwest were the subject of comment on this account. It was also asserted that there is virtually no reserve subsoil moisture in much of the spring wheat belt, and that lateness of seeding puts the spring crop in danger of damage by rust or excessive heat in July and August. Cool weather counted also as a bullish factor in the corn market.

Red wheat was more freely offered with prices averaging 1c to 2c higher. There was a fair demand for bright starchy wheat and garlicky grades, but anything bordering on the flinty or dark type had to be pressed on buyers. Hard wheat was 2c higher, being scarce and in fair demand. Country run No. 2 hard sold after the close at $1.73½ to $1.74. No. 2 hard, 13 per cent protein, was offered to arrive equal to $1.76½ here, basis 18½c over Kansas City May, 12½ per cent proten offered ½c less. Corn supplies were cleaned up closely at steady to 1c higher price, demand being good. Mills, shippers and industries were the principal buyers. Oats were ¼c to ½c higher, with a fair demand at the upturn. The market was influenced by movement of other grains.

Later in the morning May sold up to $1.65¾, July $1.42, September $1.36⅝, May corn 74⅜c, July 77⅞c and September 80¼c.

After wheat opened unchanged to fractionally higher, July gained a shade more in subsequent trade. Liverpool closed ⅛ lower to ⅛d higher. Winnipeg early was 1¼c to 1½c higher. Corn here was unchanged to shade better early.

May wheat opened at $1.63¾, July wheat $1.38⅞, Sept. wheat $1.35¾, May corn 73⅝c and July corn 76⅝c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 67,200 bushels, compared with 58,800 a week ago and 39,000 last year, included 36 cars local and 12 through. Corn receipts, which were 74,200 bushels, compared with 96,600 a week ago and 43,400 last year, included 46 cars local and 7 through. Sharp Rise at Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, April 17.—Wheat prices advanced today from 3⅛c to 4⅛c in one of the wildest sessions of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange during recent months. Steady export buying and the inclination of the Chicago market to follow the local trend were the chief factors in the bullish movement.

COBB DELAYS AND ZACHARY WEAKENS

O'Rourke Delivers Deciding Punch—First-Inning Jinx Still With Sisler's Men—Vangilder Hurls in Form.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

DETROIT, April 17.—Jonathan Tecumseh Zachary, agriculturist from the south and left-handed pitcher for the Browns, had a hunch this afternoon, but George Sisler paid no attention to it. Sisler believes in base hits and strike-outs, but hunches play no part in his life and because he paid no heed to this perfectly good hunch that came to Jonathan Tecumseh Zachary, the Browns suffered their fourth successive defeat of the season, losing to the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 4, after, for the first time this season, the St. Louis team had been on the long and apparently winning end of the score.

Detroit made the good start that has characterized the work of the enemy in all the games the Browns have played this year. The men of Ty Cobb scored three runs in the first inning, making a total of 16 runs scored against the Browns in the first frame of the four games.

Browns Take the Lead.

But the Browns came from behind. They overhauled the Tigers and passed them and Zachary, going to the mound after Vangilder had retired for a pinch hitter, turned back three Tigers in the eighth inning, retiring Wingo and Fothergill on infield grounders and striking out the dangerous Harry Heilmann.

And then Zachary had his hunch. The Browns were ahead, 4 to 3, having scored two runs in the seventh and two in the eighth. Zachary had a hunch that his day's work was done and like the weary plowman that he has been, he started to plod his way homeward. The low of the kine, winding over the southern lea, was in his ear, and the scent of the beef steak in the hotel dining room was in his nostril. Baseball was no more for him this day and Jonathan Tecumseh Zachary gathered up his personal belongings and trekked for the club house, to have his bath and a rub and journey back to the hotel and the beef steak.

Back to the Hill.

But Sisler cared not for the hunch of Jonathan Jezebel Tecumseh and when Dixon and Robertson had grounded out and it was the pitcher's turn at bat in the ninth inning, Sisler looked for Zachary. He knew that Zachary had struck out the great Heilmann and that only three more outs were needed to end the game and keep that victory for the Browns, and so he sent couriers for the pitcher and told him not to plod homeward wearily or otherwise, but to take his bat, have his turn at the plate and pitch the game through.

It was too bad. Zachary had his turn at bat, grounded to the shortstop and then went to the pitching mound. Only three outs from victory were the Browns. But they never materialized. Two men were turned back, but the third out never was. There is an asterisk at the bottom of the box score which represents that third out or its absence. There were only two out when the winning run was scored for the Tigers, and when Zachary finally was permitted to do his weary plodding homeward to the steak, his head was bent in defeat.

The Brown Blues.

Luzerne Atwell Blue opened the ninth inning as if his name had been Michael Joseph or William John, and plastered Zachary for a double to left field. Tiny Tavener laid down a bunt, sacrificing Blue to third. Mullen batted for Bassler and grounded to Sisler. That was the second out. But there were no more. Woodall batted for Which Won the Race to Third Base: The Ball or Runner?

In the third inning of yesterday's Cardinal-Cub game, with Adams of Chicago on second base, Brooks flied to Heine Mueller. After the catch, Adams dashed for third and the picture shows the ball in close pursuit. In fact it appears to be at Adams' shoulder as he starts his hook slide. Adams was safe.

Illinois and Michigan Each Win Four Firsts in Ohio Relay Meet

More Than a Dozen Records Fall in Columbus Competition—Guthrie of Ohio State Takes Two Hurdle Events.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., April 17.—Honors were widely scattered in the annual Ohio relays today at Ohio State University Stadium. Upward of a dozen meet records were broken in 36 major events.

Illinois and Michigan each scored four firsts in the university division with Ohio State trailing closely with three. Wisconsin captured two. In the college runs, Ohio Wesleyan, Michigan State Normal and Michigan State College athletes were outstanding.

Among Class A high schools, Urbana (Ill.) athletes attracted chief attention. Urbana sprinters captured two events and St. John's Military Academy of Wisconsin took one of the nine in that division.

Interest centered in the two hurdle races, the 120-yard high and 220 low, in the university division. Capt. George "Phin" Guthrie, Ohio State captain and national hurdle champion, and Werner, Illinois captain and Guthrie's opponent in numerous hurdle races in the last two years, were the principal contestants. Guthrie won both and in the high hurdles set a meet record of 15s. flat, bettering his former mark by 2-10s. Guthrie was awarded two gold watches, the prizes, but presented one to Werner.

A Sensational Finish.

A sensational finish was witnessed in the distance medley relay for universities, won by Illinois. Kennedy, Ohio State two-miler, led until the home stretch, when he was overtaken by Little of Indiana. Then both were nosed out by Stellam of Illinoios.

Michigan took all three places in the 100-yard dash. The time of Hester, the winner, was 3-10 second behind DeHart Hubbard's mark of 9 8-10.

Illinois was strong in the field events. After White had won the pole vault, his teammate, Lyon, set a new meet record for the shotput, at 45 feet 1⅜ inches. The Illini team in the distance medley race

Gehrig, Collins And Ruth Win Game for Yanks

Washington Pitchers Yield 15 Hits, Including Two Home Runs.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Yankees slugged their way to second place in the American League standing by walloping the Griffmen in the opening game of the series today, 8 to 6. The visitors pounded a trio of local hurlers for 15 safeties aggregating 29 bases, the collection including circuit drives by Gehrig and Collins. Gehrig's blow in the first carried over the right field barrier and accounted for three runs, Koenig and Combs being on base at the time. When Meusel singled and Koenig doubled the Yankees had a start of four tallies in the initial round, all at the expense of Alex Ferguson.

Jones, who started in the box for the Yanks, failed to last a round, a couple of passes with doubles by the Harris boys and Judge's single tying the score. Collins got his homer, a drive into the left field stands, in round two, after which Ferguson gave way to Ogden.

HORNSBY'S MEN MAKE FOUR HITS OFF KAUFMANN COUNT; SHERDEL TIGHT IN PINCHES

Heine Mueller Gets Home on a Delayed Double Steal—Pitchers Enliven Contest With a Row—Sherdel Picks Heathcote Off First for Final Out.

By Herman Wecke.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

Inside baseball, the kind that folks have read about, was on tap at new Sportsman's Park yesterday. It was put on by the Cardinals. Their strategy was "to win without base hits." Outhit, 8 to 4, the men of Hornsby continued their winning ways, defeating the Cubs of Chicago, 3 to 2, in the series opener. A crowd estimated at 14,000 persons witnessed the contest.

It was a thriller from start to finish. The result was in doubt until the last batter had been retired. There was enough good baseball in the ninth round to last an entire game. For instance, Freigau started with a double. Grimm tried to sacrifice him along, but Sherdel picked up his bunt and tossed to Bell to retire Freigau. Then Tolson went up for Cooney and Bottomley made a fine catch of his foul.

But the game was not over. Heathcote, who ran for Grimm, was still on first and Gabby Hartnett, a dangerous hitter, was at bat. But Sherdel ended the game by picking Heathcote, one of the fastest men in baseball, off first with a snap throw to Bottomley. Thus were the Cardinals, though outswatted 2 to 1, able to capture their fourth game of the season and share first place with the Phillies.

Kaufmann Fans Nine Batters.

It was a great contest and a tough one for Tony Kaufmann, considered one of the aces of the Cubs' staff, to loose. But Kaufmann has no one but himself to blame. Kaufmann was wilder than a march hare in the first. He walked three men and two of those passes were turned into runs. Of the four swats off him, one, credited to Bottomley, was of the infield variety. In addition Kaufmann struck out nine batters and lost because the men behind him were unable to turn eight hits into more than two tallies.

Bill Sherdel, mainstay of the Cardinal hill corps in 1925, was the fourth local pitcher in five days to come through with a sterling performance. Sherry was found for eight hits but he kept them so well scattered that in only two rounds were the Bruins able to tally.

The Cardinals' winning marker came in the eighth, with one out. Mueller shot a double to right center, then came a break. Adams booted Hornsby's roller. Bottomley smashed one at Grimm too hot to handle and Mueller tallied with the run that decided the thrilling battle.

Pitchers Have a Row.

A feud between the rival pitchers, Sherdel and Kaufmann, enlivened the proceedings in the fifth. For a time it appeared as if something might come of it, but it subsided quickly.

It came with Sherdel at the bat. Kaufmann hurled two pitches close to the little left-hander's head. Willie's bat went through the air toward the Bruin right-hander, and Sherdel followed the war club out to the hill. Players of both teams gathered around. However, nothing came of it.

The Cubs got off to a running start with an unearned run, with one out Scott singled and advanced on Blades' fumble. Brooks went out, but Wilson was safe on a boot by Thevenow and Scott tallied. This Scott is from Kansas City and is an outfielder Branch Rickey tried to get for the Cardinals two years ago.

Luck on Both Sides.

Hornsby's men were equally fortunate. In fact, they got everything that can be considered in the light of good fortune. They scored twice without the semblance of a base hit. Kaufmann, who is like the "Little girl with a curl in the middle of her forehead," in this round was "very, very wild." He walked Blades, Mueller and Hornsby to fill the corners. Bottomley flied to Wilson and Blades counted.

After Hafey had struck out, the Cards put over a bit of inside baseball. Mueller and Hornsby started a delayed double steal and when Kaufmann delayed his throw to Cooney too long, Mueller scored before the Cardinal manager was run down between first and second.

Cooney's single and steal of second and Hartnett's safe rap tied it for Chicago in the seventh.

It took a great bit of fielding to keep the Cubs from going ahead in the eighth. With one out, Mueller made a sensational running catch of Scott's drive to deep center. Then Brooks was safe on Hornsby's fumble, Wilson smashed a perfectly good double to right, but Brooks evidently had never heard of Hafey's great throwing arm. He tried to score and was cut down on Chick's great heave to O'Farrell. Brooks never did get close to the payoff station.

Mueller's Big Day.

Rhem to Oppose Blake Today

All Chicago Infielders at One Time Played With Cardinals—Freigau Turns Star Fielding Play.

Flint Rhem, who subdued the Pirates in the opening game of the season, will in all probability be the Cardinals' hurler in the second clash of the series with the Bruins this afternoon. "Sheriff" Blake, another righthander, is due for the visiting aggregation. Play at 3 o'clock.

It was a former Cardinal infield that faced the men of Hornsby in the series opener. Grimm, Adams, Cooney and Freigau at one time or other have all been with the St. Louis team. Jimmy Burke, once manager of the Browns, was another former St. Louis favorite on the field. He coached on the base

NEBRASKA RELAY TEAM SETS WORLD'S RECORD AT KANSAS GAMES

LOCKE EQUALS RECORD TIME AT 100 YARDS

Cornhusker Sprinter Shines as Anchor Man in Setting the Half Mile Mark, and in the Sprints.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 17.—One world's record was broken and another tied in a flood of brilliant performances at the Kansas relays here today.

The University of Nebraska's half-mile relay team established a new world mark of one minute 26.6 seconds, clipping four-tenths of a second off the former record made by the University of Illinois last year.

Roland Locke of Nebraska tied the world's record of 9.6 seconds in the finals of the 100-yard dash, beating Dellamaria, Notre Dame University by little more than a yard. Locke then ran as anchor on the record-breaking Cornhusker relay team.

Hoff Objects to Movies.

Charles Hoff of Norway, world's pole vault champion, failed in an attempt to break his outdoor record of 13 feet 11 13-16 inches. His best effort was 13 feet 4 inches. The bar was raised to 13 feet 9 inches, but the Norwegian star failed to clear it in three trials.

Hoff refused to permit motion picture cameramen toy record his performance, and it was only after officials of the relays prevailed upon the movie men to take down their machines that he touched his bamboo.

Hein, Daily, Davenport and Locke composed the record-breaking Nebraska relay team. Running in the order named, the Cornhusker sprinters, each traveling 220 yards, led all the way, the brilliant Locke outdistancing his Illinois opponent by about two yards at the tape. Kansas was a close third.

Five Meet Records Broken.

Five meet records also went by the boards, and one, also an intercollegiate mark, was equaled.

The one-mile relay team of the Devitt High School, Washington, D. C., made a new mark in the one mile high school, winning the race in 3m. 30.3 s.

The University of Iowa set up a new meet record of one minute, 20 seconds in winning the one mile University relay for the third straight year, taking possession of the Dr. John Outland cup.

Baker University of Baldwin City, Kan., set a new mark for the meet of 7 minutes, 43.3 seconds in the College medley relay and Occidental College of Los Angeles established another in the one-mile event. Occidental's time was 3 minutes, 28.1 seconds, eight-tenths of a second better than the former mark.

The University of Kansas equaled its own intercollegiate record of 42 seconds in winning the quarter mile relay.

Montgomery and Renault Here Tomorrow for Thursday's Bout

Heavyweight Title Contenders Meet in New Coliseum Ring — Each Recognized as a Terrific Hitter.

SULLY Montgomery, new knockout sensation, who gets test of his career here, Thursday night.

By Dent McSkimming.

Both Jack Renault of Canada, and Sully Montgomery of Chicago, heavyweight title contenders who are scheduled to meet at the New Coliseum Thursday night, will reach St. Louis tomorrow morning, it was announced last night by Matchmaker Gene Straus. Montgomery had promised to be here this morning but he requested another day's grace because of the sudden illness of his baby daughter.

Each of the above named principals has appeared here before, but this visit differs from all others in that there is no element of a "set-up" in this bout. Several months ago Renault made a very favorable impression upon a large crowd when he scored a technical knockout over Sergeant Jack Adams, who had never before suffered a defeat. Later, Sully Montgomery caused a near epidemic of heart failure among 7000 spectators when he literally smashed the husky Eddie Kealey to the ring floor in less than two minutes of the first round.

But, in each case, the victory was not thoroughly satisfactory to a discriminating public for the reason that the defeated man was not of sufficiently high caliber. There was little doubt in each case who would be the ultimate winner. Adams was no match for Renault and Kealey had not proved that he was tough enough to stand up before the terrific hitting of the former Centre College football star, Montgomery.

With the aid of a few good breaks, Matchmaker Gene Straus has succeeded in bringing together these two smashing Goliaths of the ring and there are few persons prepared to predict the outcome of the match. Montgomery's recent series of knockout victories stamps him as a man who can put astounding power into his punches He is not a loop-the-loop swinger either. Against Kealey his every punch was a short, sharp drive from the shoulder. Renault, of course, is quite well established as one of the most effective heavyweight fighters in the ring today.

The heavyweight feature is well supported by 26 rounds of milling between flyweights, bantamweights, featherweights and lightweights. Johnny (Pee-Wee) Kaiser, local bantam pride, will be paraded against Denver Kid of Ottawa, Kan., in the 10-round semi-windup. Kaiser, at present, is at the zenith of his fighting career. Since the first of the year he has been going like a house afire.

The Kid comes shrouded in mystery. He is something of an unknown quantity and quality in this section of the fistic world, yet he has presented a record of having lost but two bouts out of 38 starts. He may have a little surprise in store for our popular little Pee-Wee.

Another southwesterner is making his debut on the card. He is Joe Rivers of Kansas City, but not the great little Joe Rivers of Los Angeles who was a constant runner-up for the lightweight title in the days of Ad Wolgast, Willie Ritchie and Freddy Welsh. This Rivers is also of Castallian parentage. Rivers has been matched to box the tough and rugged South Side German, Chick Saunders. They are featherweights and are down for a six-round jaunt. Gene Riley and Willie Ramsey, local lightweights, will box six rounds, and Billy Cain and George Katchell, flyweights, tangle in the four-round opener.

Concordia Nine Beats McKendree

Preachers Play Tight Ball While Visitors Falter; Score 14 to 1.

Concordia Seminary's baseball team defeated the McKendree College nine at St. Louis U. Field yesterday afternoon by the score of 14 to 1. The McKendree defense was ragged from the very start and Concordia sandwiched base hits between errors and walks to pile up runs. About 250 persons attended the game.

Bobby Jones Will Compete in the British Open

Walter Hagen Also to Represent U. S.—Glenna Collett Sails to Play in England.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Bobby Jones will make a bid for the British open golf championship as well as the amateur title this summer in connection with his trip abroad with the American team for the Walker cup international matches.

The Atlanta star's entry for the open tourney, scheduled June 23 to 25 at Lytham and St. Anne's, was forwarded today by H. H. Ramsey, secretary of the United States Golf Association. Along with it were sent the entries of two other Walker Cup stars, Watts Gunn of Atlanta and George Von Elm of Los Angeles. All three previously were entered in the amateur championship, to be held at Muirfield May 24-29, followed on June 2-3 by the Walker Cup contest.

The United States will be strongly represented in all of the major British tournaments. Besides the amateur trio, a group of professional stars, led by Walter Hagen, will enter the open championship, which has been captured by Americans four times in the past five years.

The contingent in the amateur event, numbering close to a score, was increased today by the entry of Harry Brower, former Princeton athlete, now studying at Cambridge University and playing on the college golf team.

The women's invasion will be led by Miss Glenna Collett, American champion, who sailed today on the Olympic for the tournament scheduled at Harlech, May 10. It will be the American champion's second attempt to lift the title. She was defeated last year by Miss Joyce Wethered, the titleholder. Miss Rosamond Sherwood of the Women's National Golf and Tennis Club also is entered.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Histrionic?

NEWS service dispatches sent out of this city last night carried the promoters' announcement that John Pesek and Joe Stecher would STAGE a title match here April 29.

What do they mean by STAGE?

We have known wrestlers to put on some very capable acting, at that.

What's a Title Worth?

THE value of world's championship in round figures can be computed. For example, take the case of Joe Stecher, the present mat title holder and a great wrestler as well.

Stecher has wrestled 65 times since he won back the crown 10 months ago. He himself says that his average earnings for the 65 events was about $2400, making a total of $152,000. Add to this the $30,000 which, it is said, he is to receive for his coming match here with Pesek, and his income will reach $182,000 for 11 months, or approximately $200,000 a year!

Capitalizing this at the generous rate of 15 per cent makes his mat crown mean the earning equivalent of $1,333,333.

Quite a tidy capital.

It is small wonder that champions back, fill and sidestep when it comes to risking their titles against a real contender.

Something Wrong.

IN Friday's game between the Cardinals and the Pirates Syl Johnson pitched eight innings and allowed four hits. Allan Sothoron hurled the final inning. Sothoron was credited with the victory, notwithstanding the bulk of the effective fighting was done by Johnson.

Rules that permit such discrimination surely need amending.

Mind the Sore Lip!

THE "custodians of baseball records," a dispatch informs us, have decided that the world's series of 1903 was not a world's series at all. It appears from the custodians (whoever they are) that there was no world's series held before 1905 when, it seems, the baseball teams first began to comply with certain rules not previously in existence.

Probably the Custodians of Boxing would be justified in saying there never was a world's championship bout before 1892, because glove title fights did not exist before them.

Takes the Joy Out of Life.

ST. LOUIS objects to the Custodians' retroactive decision vigorously on two counts:

First, it wipes out the last shadowy consolation left to baseball fans here—that of our world's title victory over the Chicago National League club in 1896.

Secondly, it removes the halo from one of the almost hallowed championship struggles of history—that of 1903, probably the most dramatic of all world's series.

If "Custodians" continue to be so meticulous, somebody will have to take the custodians themsevles into custody.

Our High Schools.

THE high school baseball league opened its season yesterday, after a postponement from the previous Saturday. As was the case with the football season, games are played on a high school campus totally unfitted for such exhibitions, one without adequate drainage, seating capacity or equipment.

The situation is not only aggravating to the students and their families interested in outdoor sports, but represents a heavy financial loss to the athletic association.

With proper fields and seating arrangements the income from high school sports yields a fine revenue which can be used in building up the department of physical education or added to the stadium fund.

Our Chinese Wall.

CHINA built a wall around itself and went to sleep for ages. But it's waking up now.

The St. Louis School Board built a wall around high school sports at a radius of 25 miles from the city; and sports thereupon entered a comatose state. They're still asleep.

Today the Chinese are one up on us. Where China is now alertly reaching out internationally, St. Louis high school sports are still snoring behind the wall.

Isn't it time the School Board scraped some of the moss of tradition off our athletics by rescinding the rule which prohibits intercity sports?

Contacts with the outside never hurt any community, and have helped them all.

A Real Chance.

THE Hakoahs are coming. More specifically a Vienna soccer team that defeated a picked British team and which ranks among the best in the world, will visit this city on its tour.

Therein lies the third good chance afforded St. Louis soccer football players to show where they stand.

In past years the Pilgrims and the Corinthians visited us, to our chagrin. We didn't compare so well, although the visiting teams were only halfway representative of England's best, and were besides merely on a pleasure tour.

Why Not Practice?

THIS time real leaders are coming. Their arrival will find us, as was the case before, at a serious disadvantage. The season here is over. Training has relaxed and most of the men unable to get out for practice.

Unless the Ben Millers or the picked team, which is to face the strong Viennese are able to continue both training and practice workouts before the visitors come, the encounter will be something akin to sending Herman Heitzenroeder against Jack Dempsey.

There would be real interest in the coming game if the pick of St. Louis soccer players, welded together by some regular practice, could be trained in time to face the visitors.

Then their showing would afford a fair comparison of St. Louis style soccer with European—and perhaps teach us some useful lessons.

Mitchell Pitches Phils to Victory

Brooklyn Blows Up as Fletcher's Men Pound Out 15 to 3 Triumph.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—Brooklyn blew up completely against the Phils today and was handed a 15 to 3 lacing in the opening game of the season. Clarence Mitchell made his season's debut and did a good job of it, while the Phils socked McWeeny, Stryker and Boehler hard.

The Brooklyn infield played the rankest kind of bush league ball, a fine example being the seventh inning in which five Phils scored on two hits with four passes, Maranville's wild throw, a passed ball and wild pitch.

World's Champions Defeated by Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, April 17.—Cincinnati took the first game of the season's series with Pittsburg today, 4 to 3. Donohue held the Pirates in check until the ninth when they staged a brave but unsuccessful rally. Jakie May relieved Donohue with two on base and two out in the last frame and disposed of McInnis, a substitute batter, on a meek foul.

When Thevenow missed Wilson's grounder in the opening round it was his first error of the season. Previously he had accepted 20 chances without a slip.

There was one for the book in the Cardinals' first. Mueller and Hornsby attempted a delayed double steal and Kaufmann held the ball so long that Mueller scored before Hornsby had been retired between first and second. Heine, however, was not credited with a steal.

Joe McCarthy, the Cubs' new manager, did not make it easy for Sherdel. There were eight right-hand batters on the Cub team. Grimm was the only one who hit from the left side of the plate.

The new score board is fine, except for one thing. With the bleachers comfortably filled no one in the grandstand can see what the out-of-town St. Louis team is doing.

The feature fielding play of the game was turned by Howard Freigau, former Cardinal, in the seventh, when he grabbed O'Farrell's terrific smash with his gloved hand and followed with a perfect throw to retire the Cardinal catcher. The drive had all the marks of a safety when it left the husky backstop's bat.

CLUBSTEAK

SCORES SECOND BIG VICTORY IN TWO DAYS

Twenty Horses Start in Feature; Red Rocket Second by 3 Lengths, A. P. Canale Third.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 17.—Duplicating her splendid winning performance of yesterday, J. F. Jones' shifty two-year-old filly Clubsteak, racing coupled with Beatrice Noyes as the Jones-Faulconer entry, proved a handy winner of the fourteenth running of the Aberdeen Stakes here this afternoon.

At the finish the daughter of Meridian—Stake and Cap, under the guidance of J. Chalmers, was three lengths in front of the Eastime Stable's Red Rocket, who in turn enjoyed a two-length advantage over A. P. Canale's A. P. Canale. Fourth money went to Gen. J. A. Buchanan's Dignus.

Encouraged by the attractive field carded to face the barrier in the Aberdeen, a crowd of 20,000 racing enthusiasts turned out for the fourth day of racing at the Harford County course. Of the original 21 named overnight to start, only one was withdrawn before post time, the Sagamore Stable's Long Jig being the only scratch.

Paid $4.30 for $2.

As a result of her brilliant showing in the initial race on yesterday's program, Clubsteak was installed a heavily backed favorite by the speculative talent, eventually rewarding at the rate of $4.30 for $2.

Owing to the largeness of the field several minutes weer required to get the band of youngsters straightened out. Finally Starter Milton caught them in good alignment and sent them on their way. Red Rocket was the first to show in front, followed by Dignus, Clubsteak, A. P. Canale and Best Friend. The others, although away well, had little chance owing to the largeness of the field.

Rounding the end turn Dignus collared the pacemaker and assumed a short lead but only momentarily. Chalmers sent Clubsteak through on the rail and catching Dignus at the furlong pole drew away at the finish with something in reserve. As a result of Clubsteak's score, the Jones Stable took down $11,050. She negotiated the four and a half furlong trip in :54 2-5, which is one and two fifths slower than the local track record for the distance.

Cudgeller Wins Everglades.

Second in importance on the holiday program was the Everglades Purse, carded as the fifth number. The winner of this affair turned up in H. G. Bedwell's Cudgeller, which, under a well-judged ride by W. Smith, was home a length in front of J. E. Griffith's Singlefoot, while F. M. Kelly's Opperman was third.

Cudgeller's score in the Everglades marked the third victory for the Bedwell colors during the afternoon. He had previously been successful in the initial affair when Fields booted his three-year-old Foreland home in front and in the third when his Senator Norris scored an easy victory.

SCORES SECOND BIG VICTORY IN TWO DAYS

Twenty Horses Start in Feature; Red Rocket Second by 3 Lengths, A. P. Canale Third.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 17.—Duplicating her splendid winning performance of yesterday, J. F. Jones' shifty two-year-old filly Clubsteak, racing coupled with Beatrice Noyes as the Jones-Faulconer entry, proved a handy winner of the fourteenth running of the Aberdeen Stakes here this afternoon.

At the finish the daughter of Meridian—Stake and Cap, under the guidance of J. Chalmers, was three lengths in front of the Pastime Stable's Red Rocket, who in turn enjoyed a two-length advantage over A. P. Canale's A. P. Canale. Fourth money went to Gen. J. A. Buchanan's Dignus.

Encouraged by the attractive field carded to face the barrier in the Aberdeen, a crowd of 20,000 racing enthusiasts turned out for the fourth day of racing at the Harford County course. Of the original 21 named overnight to start, only one was withdrawn before post time, the Sagamore Stable's Long Joe being the only scratch.

Paid $4.30 for $2.

As a result of her brilliant showing in the initial race on yesterday's program, Clubsteak was installed a heavily backed favorite by the speculative talent, eventually rewarding at the rate of $4.30 for $2.

Owing to the largeness of the field several minutes weer required to get the band of youngsters straightened out. Finally Starter Milton caught them in good alignment and sent them on their way. Red Rocket was the first to show in front, followed by Dignus, Clubsteak, A. P. Canale and Best Friend. The others, although away well, had little chance owing to the largeness of the field.

Rounding the end turn Dignus collared the pacemaker and assumed a short lead but only momentarily. Chalmers sent Clubsteak through on the rail and catching Dignus at the furlong pole drew away at the finish with something in reserve. As a result of Clubsteak's score, the Jones Stable took down $11,050. She negotiated the four and a half furlong trip in :54 2-5, which is one and two fifths slower than the local track record for the distance.

Cudgeller Wins Everglades.

Second in importance on the holiday program was the Everglades Purse, carded as the fifth number. The winner of this affair turned up in H. G. Bedwell's Cudgeller, which, under a well-judged ride by W. Smith, was home a length in front of J. E. Griffith's Singlefoot, while F. M. Kelly's Opperman was third.

Cudgeller's score in the Everglades marked the third victory for the Bedwell colors during the afternoon. He had previously been successful in the initial affair when Fields booted his three-year-old Foreland home in front and in the third when his Senator Norris scored an easy victory.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 17.—Although the track was in lightning fast condition, trainers of Derby candidates saved their candidates for more intensive speed trials tomorrow by merely breezing them today. SOLDIER AWARDED ROAD WALK; FIRST ACCUSED OF RIDING PART OF WAY

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 17.—Private Earl Olson of Camp Meade, Md., was awarded first place in the Washington-Baltimore road walk after a conference of officials at which a disqualification of the soldier walker by Jack Skane a judge, was disallowed. Skane charged Olson had accepted a lift in an automobile. Olson's time was 9:50:45 for the distance, officially announced as 47.1 miles. The distance was intended to be 50 miles, and A. A. U. recognition of Olson's time was withheld because of faulty surveying of the course and insufficient checkers. Eight women who started from Washington dropped out shortly after passing Laurel, approximately the half way point.

Lord Baltimore II was swerving over to outside in stretch run. He was driving to the limit at end to stall off Tempest. Latter began slowly, but gained steadily and finished fast after making a wide turn into home stretch. Kindred a forward contender until last furlong, when she stopped. Muskallonge broke well on the outside, but immediately dropped out of it. Oblique showed a lot of speed to the top of home stretch.

Traffic showed a lot of early speed, but was used up racing Dizzy Blonde and Chocolate Soldier into submission. Munden saved ground with her at stretch turn. Harvey Steadman closed a big gap. Adria dropped out of it in early stages. Dizzy Blonde was eased up in the stretch run when she tired. Centrifugal on inside all the way would never keep up.

INGRID AND ASINIA SELECTED AS SEASON'S FILLY STARS BY SEVIER

NO FUTURITY WINNERS, BUT SEASON GOOD

But for Collapse, Friar's Carse Might Have Come Through—Other Colts Faced Uncommonly Stiff Competition.

By O'Neil Sevier.

NEW YORK, April 17.—No two-year-old filly of last season's racing was smart enough in the autmn to win a Futurity, as both Artful and Maskette did in the first decade of the current century, and as Steplightly, Sally's Ally, Blossom Time and Mother Goose have in the last half a dozen years. That may have been due to the thickening of Friar's Carse's wind following an attack of influenza last June and that the fillies that carried on after Friar's Carse dropped out, encountered uncommonly stiff colt competition. As many smart folk have pointed out, Pompey and Canter, Bubbling Over, Chance Play, Flight of Time, Penstick, Haste, Display, Crusader and Mars were as fine a bunch of colts as American racing develops.

Friar's Carse in June looked like another Artful, or another Regret. A big, masculine huzzy, she had everything. She made an awful show of Punjab, Fiddlesticks, Espino, Navigator and Mars in the Keene Memorial at Belmont Park. Giving all weight she beat them off in 1:05 2-5—the distance was five furlongs and a half—after stepping five furlongs in :58 2-5. But Friar's Carse was helpless after half a mile when she came back to the races late in the summer. She will not start again.

Good Filly Season.

Still, without Friar's Carse, the season of 1925 was a good filly season and the impending 3-year-old filling racing ought to be above average. It is hardly likely, though, that it will develop a Preakness or a Kentucky Derby winner.

Man o' War's brisk daughter, Taps, Corvette and Edith Cavell, with Ingrid, Black Maria, Rapture, Rosebee, Lakme, Siren, Sabine, Miss Thatcher, Fly Leaf, Cinema, Asinesa, Arethenina and Martha Washington, and, maybe, two or three others, ought to come through handsomely. There will be plenty of employment for these fillies in spring and summer in races for horses of their own sex. The Kentucky, Latonia, Pimlico and Coaching Club American Oaks, the Gazelle, and the Alabama stakes will aggregate upward of $150,000 in value. And there will be other filly specials.

Most sophisticated students of form, having the careers of Maid at Arms and Florence Nightingale in mind, are committed to Taps, Corvette and Edith Cavell, giving Taps first call. Taps is a husky type, like Friar's Carse. Corvette is trimmer in architecture, more ladylike. Edith Cavell reminds one somewhat of Man o' War. Taps won last fall's matron stakes at Belmont Park in impressive fashion. Edith Cavell is an own sister of Florence Nightingale, she, the winner of last spring's Coaching Club, American Oaks. Edith Cavell was smart in several races. Corvette was at her best in the late autumn.

Selects Ingrid and Asinia.

However, it is my guess that Ingrid and Asinia will be the accepted stars when the season's accounts are cast up in November. Ingrid and Asinia are easterners. William Garth bred Ingrid, a daughter of the French-American stallion Crimper and Dianah Do, she a daughter of Bergomaster in the Piedmont, of Virginia. Willis Sharp Kilmer bred Asinia at Sunbriar Court in Broome County, New York, where Sally's Ally was born and raised.

Ingrid races for Lee Rosenberg of New York. Selby Burch, youngest son of William Preston Burch, and dean of American trainers, has Ingrid in charge. She will be racing presently at Havre de Grace with Taps, Corvette, Edith Cavell and Rapture.

Ingrid is long and leggy but not ungraceful. Big gaited, she was at a disadvantage in short races last spring and summer. In the autumn she came into her own. No youngster of the softer sex ran a better race all season than she did in the $10,000 endurance handicap—Bowie's brag mile race of 2-year-olds of both sexes. She was beaten a head by William Averill Harriman's inconsistent colt, High Star, but she was spotting a pound and to a better rider in the level-headed Eddie Barnes than she had in Benny Breuning. Benny got cocky in the last sixteenth after Ingrid had disposed of Applecross and Timmara. She eased up and looked around. Barnes nipped him a head on the post. No horse that trained at the old Bennings course of the District of Columbia, now falling into melancholy decay, worked more briskly than Ingrid did in March. Possibly she is as near her best form as any 3-year-old in the country.

Asinia's Pedigree.

Asinia is a daughter of Assagel and Contessina. Her pedigree is purely English and stout. Spearmint was her paternal grandsire. Possibly she would have done as well as Ingrid did if Kilmer had kept her racing through to the end of last season. She started only four times, retiring in September. The moderation of Kilmer should rebound to her advantage. It is because American 2-year-olds are raced too hard that few of them train on into good 3 and 4 year olds.

I have an idea that if any filly outraces Ingrid and Asinia it will be Black Maria. Her sire gave racing Kentucky's golden jubilee Derby winner—Black Gold and many other good horses. Sardanapale, her maternal grandsire, was the French wonder horse of 1914. Sardanaple's brilliant career was cut short by the German invasion of France and Belgium. He was headed for a world's record in earnings.

RITENOUR DEFEATS WEBSTER IN COUNTY LEAGUE GAME, 4 TO 3

The contest was called at the end of the seventh.

Winter Defeats Spur Tilden Into Effort to Regain Form

Champion Anxious to Tie Record of Seven Straight Tennis Championships, Established by Richard Sears, Realizes His Old Dependability Is Lacking.

NEW YORK, April 17.—After a more or less disastrous indoor season, William T. Tilden is now engaged in the task of strengthening his tennis form for the big games to come next fall. The championship does not come until September at the very end of the outdoor season; but, conscious of the fact that his game has never been so lacking in dependability and effectiveness as it has of late, he started his task considerably earlier than usual.

TILDEN

Tilden's ambition this year is to tie the record of seven straight national championships, established by Richard Sears back in the days when title competition was in its infancy. Nevertheless the record is seven straight, and Tilden is out to equal it.

It is reasonably sure that, barring accidents, the champion will be in shape to make a great fight for the retention of his title in the next championship. He realizes that with the remarkable improvement of the French aces, Rene La Coste and Hean Borotra, and with William M. Johnston and Vincent Richards again on hand to dispute the issue with him, none but the greatest tennis he is capable of can hope to prevail.

Big Bill has not lost his confidence, despite his recent defeats at the hands of Lacoste, Borotra and Richards, and the majority of his friends believe with him that the outdoor campaign, when well advanced, will find his game back to its normal speed and effectiveness.

Never Star Indoors.

There is a disposition among tennis critics to discount Tilden's setbacks during the indoor campaign. He has never shone with particular brillianc on the indoor courts, and in recent years has avoided indoor play as much as possible. There is the additional fact that Tilden's theatrical work interfered greatly with his preparation for the indoor events.

That Tilden's most formidable foe in 1926 will be William M. Johnston again and not Lacoste, despite the remarkable play of the Frenchman in the indoor championships, is the opinion not only of the majority of the critics but of Tilden himself. It will not cause surprise if the next national championship final is another Big Bill versus Little Bill affair.

Billiken Frat League.

A schedule for the Inter-Fraternity Baseball League at St. Louis University has been drawn up and the season will begin soon. Frats entered are Phi Beta Pi, Alpha Chi, Omega Upsilon Phi, Phi Chi, Theta Kappa Psi and Chi Zeta Chi. The Chi Zetes won last year.

BILLY BARTON WINS ANNUAL GRAND NATIONAL 3-MILE STEEPLECHASE

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 17.—Billy Barton, owned by Howard Bruce of Baltimore and ridden by Albert G. Ober, captured the twenty-fifth annual Grand National Point-to-Point Steeplechase, raced today over a 3-mile course on the Green Spring Valley estate of Capt. Isaac E. Emerson.

Wilson K. Levering's Royal Duck, with Lieut. Victor P. Noyes astride, finished second, closely followed by Pepi, from the stable of Foxhall P. Keene, New York City.

Seventy-five hundred persons saw the record field of 25 jumpers go to the post.

Billy Barton went to the front at the drop of the flag and was never headed. The race was one of the fastest in the memory of Maryland followers, the winner's time being 6:31.

Only one bad spill was witnessed in the event. Coming into the fourth fence, Rock Creek, owned by Benjamin Leslie Behr of Chicago, fell and broke his back. Albert Burrage Jr. of Boston, who had the mount, suffered severe bruises.

RICHARDS AND KINSEY TO SAIL FOR EUROPE TENNIS MATCHES MAY 15

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 17. — Vincent Richards of New York and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco, who have been selected to represent the United States Lawn Tennis Association in international play abroad this summer, will sail about May 15.

Richards, who ranks third, and Kinsey, sixth, were selected after the other top-ranking stars, W. T. Tilden, W. M. Johnston and R. N. Williams, declined invitations to compete, for business reasons.

The players will join the members of the American women's team in Paris for practice prior to the opening event of the international schedule, the team matches against France, beginning May 28. They will play in the French hard court championship June 2.

In England the men will play an international match against a picked British combination June 11-18 at Eastbourne, while the women players are competing in the Wightman Cup matches at Wimbledon. All of the Americans will play in the English championships at Wimbledon, starting June 21.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

RICKARD ANN

SAYS HE WILL MATCH TUNNEY WITH DEMPSEY

Bout Would Be in East; Intends to Lease Windy City Layout to Local Promoters to Get Around Fight Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Tex Rickard arrived here today and stated that he will build a $13,000,000 Madison Square Garden in Chicago's loop, to be completed probably by December. Work on the new garden, Rickard said, will start within a month. The structure, covering a city block, will be between 15 and 20 stories high, with the arena in the center, and be surrounded on the four sides by an office building. The New York Madison Square Garden Co., of which the Ringlings are big stockholders, and Rickard as general manager, will finance the construction, he said.

Privilege to stage boxing bouts, hockey matches and other sport events will be leased to Chicago promoters, Rickard said, inasmuch as the new Illinois boxing law, indorsed this week by Chicago voters, requires that promoters must have been residents of Chicago for three years before staging a bout in the city.

Will Use It for Hockey.

The promoter said that he expects two hockey leagues to be playing in the new garden next winter. The garden, he said, will hold a franchise in the International Hockey League and will let privileges to the syndicate which holds a franchise in the Western League.

Rickard expects to sign Jack Dempsey next week for a bout with Gene Tunney, to be held in the East, probably at Boyle's Thirty Acres, he announced. He would not comment at length on his proposed Dempsey-Tunney match, but reiterated that he expects to sign Dempsey when the latter arrives here next week. He said that he doubts that a Dempsey-Wills match will ever be staged here or anywhere else.

The promoter declared the legalization of boxing in Chicago will be a big boost for the game generally and will not harm it in New York. Max J. Kramer, one of his associates in New York, accompanied him to Chicago where they expect to stay for about a week.

And the hunch grew stronger and Zachary's arm grew colder and likewise his legs.

Zachary's Hunch Right.

And when Warner finally batted and hit a slow roller in front of the plate, Zachary was so cold that he could not get the ball in time to make a play at first and the bases became filled with Tiger runners and Zachary's heart became filled with hunch until it was running over.

That brought up O'Rourke. Zachary pitcher over two strikes. One more was all he needed. O'Rourke fouled off half a dozen and then he smashed a hit down the left-field line. It was called a double because it scored Blue and Neun with the tying and winning runs. That hit beat the Browns and convinced Zachary that his hunch was right and that while Sisler may be a great first baseman and perhaps a great baseball man, when it comes to hunches a Southern agriculturist has it all over college boys from Michigan University.

A Real Ball Game.

It was a thrilling ball game. It was a great treat for the followers of the Browns to see the team at last in the game up to the ninth inning, after being plastered hopelessly in the first inning of each of the preceding games. And it was a great relief to see the Browns show fight and hustle and play real baseball after being bumped for the usual first-inning handicap.

Vangilder started the game. Warner greeted him with a single to left and on O'Rourke's sacrifice bunt Vangilder threw wild to first. The ball skipped past McManus and Warner scored and O'Rourke reached second. Wingo sacrificed and O'Rourke scored when Fothergill doubled to left. Heilmann followed with another double, scoring Fothergill. Sisler held the usual conference, but Vangilder was permitted to remain. Elam showed his appreciation by stopping that rally and pitching brilliantyl thereafter. Warner singled with two down in the second, but that was the last hit made off Van. He turned back the Tigers in order in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh.

RICKARD ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR BIG SPORTS BUILDING IN CHICAGO

SAYS HE WILL MATCH TUNNEY WITH DEMPSEY

He turned back the Tigers in order in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh.

Holloway meantime was going along just effectively. Robertson singled in the third after one was out, but Vangilder struck out and Durst grounded to Blue. McManus started the fifth with the Browns second hit, a single to left, but Jacobson promptly hit into a double play. Then, after turning back three Brownies in the sixth, Holloway faltered in the seventh.

Sisler's Men Show a Punch.

Lamotte led off with a single to left and Sisler crashed a double down the right field line. Williams laced a single to right, scoring Lamotte and Sisler. With a deficit of only one run it would have been good baseball to sacrifice, with Vangilder pitching such good ball, but McManus tried to hit and grounded into a double play. Jacobson then reached first on an error and Dixon's single sent him to third, but Robertson grounded out, ending the rally, which should have netted at least a tied score. This was not smart baseball.

Bennett batted for Vangilder in the eighth and his fast base running turned his hit to left into a double. Durst laid down a perfect bunt, an intended sacrifice, and beat it out. Lamotte tapped to Holloway, but Sisler punched a single to left, scoring Bennett with the tying run. Williams hit to O'Rourke and Durst slid over the plate with the run that put the Browns ahead, for the first time this season, McManus sent a short fly to Fothergill and Jacobson ended the rally by forcing Williams at second.

Then came the ninth inning with the hunch that Jonathan Zachary had, but which Sisler ignored.

Today the Browns will face the veteran George Dauss and Dixie Davis probably will do the pitching for the Sislermen.

FOUR SWIMMING RECORDS SET IN FINAL INDOOR MEET AT DETROIT CLUB

DETROIT, April 17.—Four national swimming records were set today in the final indoor meet of the season at the Detroit Yacht Club.

The marks to fall were the 400-yard backstroke relay, interscholastic; the 800-yard breast stroke relay; the 1000-yard breast stroke relay, and the 300-yard women's medley.

Northwestern High School, which finished second to Wilmington, Del., in the recent national interscholastic tournament, clipped six seconds from the record set at that meet, swimming the 400-yard back stroke relay in 4:53 3-5.

In the breast stroke events a Detroit Yacht Club team swam the 800 yards in 11:22 3-5, clipping 3 4-5 seconds from the record held by Brooklyn (N. Y.) Y. M. C. A. The team then sent a fifth man into the water for the other 200 yards to try to erase the mark of 14:33 4-5 for the 1000 yards, held by Yale. The time for the 1000 yards was 14:27 3-5.

Dorothy Colter, national junior pentathlon champion, covered the 300-yard medley in 4:33 1-, establishing the fourth record. The previous record was 4:36 2-5, made by Carin Nillson of the New York Women's Swimming Association at St. Augustine, Fla., last February.

OKLAHOMA AGGIES DEFEAT MISSOURI NINE

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 17. — The Oklahoma Aggies defeated the University of Missouri baseball team here today, 7 to 4, pounding out 16 hits off three pitchers and outhitting the Tigers in a slugging match. The Tiger defeat evens the count between the two teams, each having won two games. The Tigers garnered 12 hits from Daugherty's offerings, but the Oklahoman kept the safeties scattered during most of the game, and then established his hitting prowess by driving four singles in five times at bat.

Bullman Due to Arrive Today to Aid Bear Gridders

Arrival of Higgins' Assistant Will Give Washington U. Full Coaching Staff for Last Half of Spring Practice.

With half their spring training period behind them, Washington University football players will launch their fourth week's session tomorrow under the supervision of a coaching staff which will be supplemented by Gale Bullman, assistant to Bob Higgins, who is due to arrive today from Buchanan, W. Va., to assist in shaping the Pikeway line.

In addition to Higgins and Bullman, the squad of 45 red and green jerseyed candidates will be directed by Coaches White, Davis and Ingamells, and a group of Washington alumni who turn out for the afternoon workouts.

Higgins' men are getting a drilling every bit as intensive as routine fall training and results are beginning to show. Scrimmage finds the men on their toes on every play, responding to signals in clock-like manner and dashing off plays with precision.

30 Candidates for Line.

There are 30 candidates out for the line, which will have to be molded for the most part from new material. Charging and tackling in pleasing fashion, the squad has shown a steady improvement and the huskies have now reached the stage where they allow small gains to the backs.

Among the backfield men who are seeking to clinch the coveted four positions, one youngster, Bradley, has stood out in the past week's work. Although weak on defense, he gives indications of real fullback possibilities. Two others prospects for this berth from last fall's freshman squad are Whittler and McDonough.

Contests for All Places.

The quarterback position should be well filled. There are two good men—Hayes, who called formations for the Bruins last fall, and Oscar Burch, who also had experience in the same berth from the 1924 eleven. Other candidates are Harold Hall and Curly Campbell.

Capt. Mahan has one halfback berth seemingly sewed up, but the other position remains doubtful. Millard, Senne, Harding and McDonald will be fighting for the call when the season opens.

In the line, a tussle is going on between Elliott and Vesper for the center position. Vesper carried the brunt last fall, but Elliott, an Arkansas athlete, is bidding strongly for the position. At guards, Drake, Doerner, Sommers, and Kurz are contesting, with present indications pointing to Drake and Kurz as regulars. Clyde Collins, a West Virvinia grid player seems cut out for a berth at tackle and Jerry Hoffman looks promising for the other berth.

CENTURY CYCLING CLUB SEASON OPENS APRIL 27

The Century Cycling Club will start the first bicycle race of the season with a road race to Fenton Sunday, April 25, thence to Nelson's Farm for chicken dinner. This club has some of the best riders in the state on its membership and they have been training diligently for this race. The road to Fenton is exceptionally fast and a new record is expected.

The start will be from the bridge on Gravois road at the city limits at 9 a. m. W. M. Martin will have charge of the race.

PRO FOOTBALL HAS COME TO STAY, SAYS TOPEKA SPORTS CRITIC

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 17.—Football as a professional game has come to stay, in the opinion of Leslie Edmonds, sport writer for the Topeka Capital, expressed yesterday at the sport writers' convention at the University of Kansas. A dozen sport writers attended the meeting.

"I believe this fuss over professional football is much ado about nothing," Edmonds said.

"Baseball in college is shortlived, due to the season. There will never be a sport as great as college football, and there will never be one as rotten as college baseball. Professional football will enable persons to see games who would not have the privilege at the college games. The time has come in a great many schools where only students or persons otherwise connected with the college are able to obtain tickets. You will live to see the same conditions exist at the University of Kansas," Edmonds said.

Sports writers from Kansas and neighboring states were in attendance at a round-table discussion.

Indiana Normal Wins.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DECATUR, Ill., April 17.—Scoring five runs in the second inning on passes, errors and wild pitches, the Indiana State Normal team of Terre Haute defeated Milliken here today, 10 to 5. The hitting of Allbright and Eder featured for the visitors while Barnes and Hinkley each poled two blows for the locals.

In the Realm Of Bird Dogs

Unknown Setter Puppy, Tom Coffer, Wins Southern Ohio Stake.

By A. F. Hochwalt.

The Southern Ohio Bird Dog Club, composed of pointer and setter fanciers of Cincinnati and neighboring cities, including those in Kentucky, Indiana and West Virginia, ran a very successful trial for yearling puppies at Madison, Ind., during the second week of April.

It was the Southern Ohio who instituted puppy trials more than a dozen years ago. Since then events of this kind have sprung up everywhere, and during the present spring season no less than 60 have taken place.

The winner of the stake at Madison was a setter owned by D. H. Roby of Indianapolis. It was the first field trial in which Roby ever entered a dog and it was some feat to come into an event in which the professional handlers from all parts of the country, including the big circuit trainers from Alabama and other Southern states and win first place, but this good setter puppy hailing from the capital of the Hoosier State was equal to the occasion.

The dog's name is Tom Coffer. He came to the trials with his owner, entirely unknown to the field trial public. Indeed, his owner was also unknown in bird dog circles, although in the realm of the harness horse, Roby is very well acquainted. In his day he drove some good ones, including Alva O., the pacer which went along close to the 2:05 mark.

Refuses Offers for Dog.

Roby has taken up field trial dogs only recently, but he has always been a field shot and a hunter, consequently he owned good setters and pointers. The puppy, Tom Coffer, is one of his own breeding. The dog ran his first heat and attracted immediate attention. After his first appearance his owner had numerous offers for him, but Roby said he was anxious to own a winner himself and would not consider them.

The dog had no easy thing of it, however. He was put down in the second series to run against the pointer puppy, Lady Ben Hur, hailing from Alabama and handled by Chesley Harris of Haynesville, that State. Harris has a reputation for winning big field trials and he was picked to beat the Indianapolis setter. The dogs were turned loose over the soggy fields; they ran their allotted time, but Lady Ben Hur did not beat Tom Coffer.

The judges, however, were not entirely satisfied with the relative performance of the two dogs and called for them to run a third heat. This time Tom Coffer showed them very positively that he could repeat, for he came back with another good performance and won the stake.

Lady Ben Hur was a fair second, but she did not beat the amateur from Indianapolis. After the race was over, Roby told Harris that he had a young pointer at home that was even better than the setter. "Bring him on," replied Harris. "I'll buy him. If you are raising dogs as good as this setter, I want to get them, and it is pointers I am looking for."

Never Depends on One Dog.

Harris bought Lady Ben Hur for Jacob France, the oil magnate and with her he expects to try conclusions in the derbies of next fall. But he is looking for more, for he never depends entirely upon one dog to do his winning with.

Another dog in that stake over at Madison which attracted attention was a pointer still known by the very ordinary name of "Spot." Eventually, if this pointer makes good he will own a fancy registered appellation, but at this time it is plain "Spot."

Spot made a sensational first series heat and of course his owner, W. W. Myers of Huntingburg, Ind., had many offers for the puppy. Harris, however, made him the most attractive one. This was when the puppy was called back for the finals, but before he ran.

Had Myers cared to do so, he might have sold the puppy at any price he could name within reason, but he also wanted to own a winner. Spot, however, did not repeat like Tom Coffer did. In his second series heat was a failure. From what the dog showed here, he is a one-heat performer. Myers missed his chance by not selling at the end of the first series.

A report will be submitted to a special meeting of the league, which will be held next month. The members of the committee are President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League, President James Strachan of the Montreal Maroons and Manager Director Leo Dandurand of the Canadian Hockey Club, Montreal.

BEAUMONT AND CLEVELAND WIN OPENING GAMES OF SCHOOL LEAGU

FIRST CONTEST OF DOUBLE BILL IS HARD FOUGHT

Groepper, Roosevelt Hurler, Allows Only Four Hits, but Loses When Defense Fails—Central Defeated 14 to 3.

Beaumont came from behind to defeat Roosevelt, 3 to 2, in the inaugural game of the City High School baseball league, yesterday. In the second contest of the afternoon double-header Cleveland ran rampant over Central, winning by the one-sided score of 14 to 3.

Because of the lack of bleachers, only a small crowd was on hand to witness the two games.

Although "Lefty" Grant was nicked for at least one hit in every inning except the sixth, the diminutive southpaw from Beaumont was steady and cool in the pinches.

Roosevelt surprised the North Siders by exhibiting a talented right-hander in Groepper. For four innings the young Rough Rider did not even permit the semblance of a hit. Errors of his teammates let two Beaumont runs across in the fifth Roosevelt Scores First.

Roosevelt shoved across the first marker in the third frame with a triple by the pitcher followed by an error on Hill's infield grounder. The Rough Riders came back with another in the next round on a single by Behrman and a double by Haverstock.

In the Cleveland-Central fray eight bases on balls by the two Mid-City twirlers, coupled with eight hits, three being for extra bases, enabled the winners to score in every inning but the fifth. The Cleveland brigade ran wild on the paths, stealing six bases.

Vogt Walks Six.

Vogt, the Cleveland pitcher, walked six men. Home runs by Weingert and Thompson, both times with two mates on the sacks were the high lights in the Cleveland attack. Weingart's blow came in the second and Thompson's in the fourth round of the game.

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy
Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only few cents a jar at any drug store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

HORNSBY'S ANSWERS

Score is tied in last half of ninth, 3 to 3. Two men on base. Batter knocks ball into bleachers or onto Grand boulevard. What is the final score? Is the batter credited with a home run?—C. C. COUCH, Eureka, Mo.

Final score is 6 to 3. Batter gets a home run.

By what authority do the major leagues change the rules of baseball? Have the colleges no say in the matter?—COLLEGIAN.

The major leagues have no authority except that of arranging the rules to suit their own convenience. Other baseball leagues and players simply have accepted their modifications in order that baseball may be uniform, but there is nothing which gives any athletic organization absolute control over the game.

Umpire calls four balls and batter starts for first base and then the umpire reverses his decision and calls the batter out on three strikes. What is the runner, safe or out, and who has authority, umpire in chief, or field umpire?—M. C.

The runner is out if declared out, although the umpire should never reverse this decision unless he has actually missed seeing the batter swing at the ball. The decision always is to be rendered by the umpire in chief but he may ask advice from the field umpire.

Stars of Valley Ready for Big 10 At Drake Relays

Formidable Talent in Weights and Races to Represent Missouri Conference.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 17.—"Revenge of the Valley" may be an apt title for the Drake relays to be seen here next Saturday.

For the Missouri Valley Conference, which has for years smarted under the condescension of the Big Ten, has a flock of stars here this year to help topple Western conference prestige.

Of course there is Charlie Hoff, the skyrocketing Scandinavian, to act as official headliner, but perhaps even greater interest in this section will attach to the appearance of a large number of Valley stars.

Only an athletic miracle can keep the Valley from mopping up on the shot put with Kock and Richerson in the lists.

Formidable Weight Throwers.

With Morgan and Cox of Oklahoma flipping the dagger around 200 feet, things look serious for Anglers' record, 203 feet 9 1-3 inches. In the discus, Richardson recently flattened out Gerkin and Phillips of Stanford with a whirl that traveled 138 feet.

Even in the events in which the western conference is starring this there is keen competition. Werner and Guthrie of Illinois and Ohio State are rated one and two in a high hurdle race, but Dye of Gouthers, Cal., is also liable to spoil somebody's party and Weir of Nebraska, Simpson of Drake and Doornbos of Kansas are not out of the running.

In the relays, also, indications are bright for the Valley. Among the strong combinations are the squads from Kansas that consistently split with Illinois in her invasion of the Southwest this winter, for short relay honors and the unbeaten Kansas Aggies in the two-mile.

Iowa Team Going East.

The University of Iowa team will probably invade the East next Saturday, attending the Pennsylvania relays.

There are also some great distance men in the Valley. Shimek will be here from Marquette to try to avenge his indoor defeat by the Michigan sophomore, but with Conger of Ames and Niblik of Oklahoma both entered, there should be a great battle.

The 200-yard dash is almost impossible to dope. There are so many good men in the West and so few outstanding stars that anyone from Pratt of the University of Utah to Della Maria of Notre Dame may win. Oregon Aggies have some first-class runners entered also.

Ruth Advocates Using Old Balls To Check Hitting

Dead Ball and Resin Bag Have Failed to Bother Hitters, He Says.

By Babe Ruth.

(Copyright, 1926.)

WASHINGTON, April 17.—With the resin ball, and the rabbit ball, and the dead ball and all the other balls, baseball players have plenty of things to talk about this season.

And plenty of laughs too.

Ruth

I get a chuckle every time I think of the resin bag—and so do our pitchers. Personally, I can't see that the resin makes much dufference one way or another. I looked at a lot of National League pitching during the training season and I couldn't see that the pitchers got any more hooks with the resin than they did without. But of course, they may later. Maybe they haven't got used to it yet.

Just the same I've noticed that the really good pitchers—the veterans who have been up a long time and know their stuff, didn't touch the resin.

Then there's the rabbit ball. Most folks figure that the ball isn't as lively this year as it was. Our pitchers figure that way too and they're pretty happy about it.

No Laughing Matter to Jones.

I was talking to Sam Jones the other day. "A lot of guys are kicking about the change in the ball," Sam said. "But you would not kick if you were pitchers. Last season a pitcher would throw that ball up there and duck. If he didn't he was likely to get killed any time he pitched."

And the ball is deader. There's no question about that. But it will still travel if you get hold of it, I've discovered—and if you don't get hold of it, it won't go anyhow. So that's that.

Use Old Balls.

Personally, if I were going to cut down hitting, you know what I'd do? I'd stop throwing out baseballs the minute they got soiled. Give a fast ball pitcher an old ball that's a little soiled, with a cover a bit loosened by play, and they'll make more trouble for the average hitter than all the resin balls in the world. It's been a long time since I was a pitcher, but believe me, I'd about as soon pitch solid ivory billiard balls as to be compelled to pitch new baseballs all the time.

PRINTER, 38, EXPECTS TO WIN FIFTH MARATHON TOMORROW

Olympic Champion to Oppose Clarence De Mar in Boston Race on Patriots' Day.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 17.—A 38-year-old printer who has won the Boston marathon race four times in seven starts knocked off training today for his eighth attempt over the Hopkintown-Boston course. Clarence De Mar of Melrose spent this afternoon planting his garden, unworried over the fact that on Monday for the first time in the history of the event, an Olympic champion will oppose him in the Patriot's Day marathon.

Albin Stenroos, of Finland, one year older than DeMar, and winner of the Olympic marathon in 1924, went carefully over the hilly course and expressed confidence of his ability to cope with its difficulties. In additon to the Olympic champion and DeMar 106 distance runners made ready for the 29th renewal of the Boston athletic association classic.

DeMar, who won the Marathon in 1911, 1922, 1923 and 1924, ruled the favorite tonight. Last year he finished second to Charles L. Mellor, of Chicago, who has not entered this year.

The Melrose printer this morning rode to his place of business in Cambridge on a bicycle, ran a few miles after work and then devoted the afternoon to his garden. Tomorrow he will teach two Sunday school classes as usual. His workouts for this year's Marathon, have entailed running more than 1400 miles.

DeMar is one of two former winners of the event entered this year. The other is William K. Kennedy, of Port Chester, N. Y., a 1917 winner. Nine of the athletes who finished among the first 16 last year will face the starter on Monday. Canada will be represented by nine distance runners.

Paddock Will Reach Peak in Sesqui Games

Is Already in Good Form as Evidenced by Los Angeles Performance.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.—It is reported that Charlie Paddock has promised to start in the National A. A. U. championships at Philadelphia early in July as a member of the Los Angeles A. C. team that will cross the continent for the Quaker City's Sesquicentennial athletic festival.

It is evident that Paddock is not going to repeat the mistake he made in the Paris Olympic campaign two years ago—that of starting too late. He is believed to be working under Boyd Comstock and must have been at it for a month or more to acquire the form that enabled him to equal the world's 100-yard record at Los Angeles a couple of weeks ago.

Paddock doubtless realizes that he will meet bundles of speed in the national sprint races, and for that reason is leaving nothing to chance this time. With Murchison, Leconey, Hubbard, Bowman, Cummings and a few more flyers pointing for the big A. A. U. meeting, Paddock will need all of his cyclonic speed to regain the titles that he won at Colgate Field, West Orange, N. J., in 1924 and defaulted last summer.

Athletes With "Color."

Paddock's participation in the national games will go a long way toward making the A. A. U. classic a success. Like Joie Ray, Charley Hoff and Paavo Nurmi, the Comet possesses that mysterious and rare race quality known as "color." The fans will trek miles to see Paddock run when they would not cross the street to watch a dozen other sprinters in action.

INDIAN GRIDIRON STAR WILL PLAY BASEBALL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TAHLEQUAH, April 17. — Mack McCullough, Northeastern State Teachers' College quarterback, has signed a contract to play professional baseball with the McAlester club in the Western Association.

McCullough, an Indian, gained his reputation as a baseball player while playing first base for the Veterans' Hospital in the City League in Muskogee last summer. He intends to enter Northeastern again in the fall.

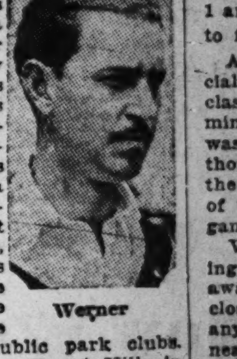
NET SEASON O

IRST EVENT IS INTERCLUB TOURNAMENT

o Major Tennis Events on This Year's Local Program — Outlook Tame Compared to Previous Campaigns.

By Davison Obear.

Interclub play will feature the ennis season in St. Louis this year. With no major tournaments on the chedule, the local enthusiasts will evote their time to interclub matches and other minor events. During the past two years the National clay court championship, held on the Triple A courts, was the outstanding attraction. It required considerable effort to stage the national tournament, and the relief from such strenuous duties this season will be welcomed by many tennis officials.



Werner

In 1924 Joseph L. Werner, former Princeton University tennis captain, offered a large trophy for interclub play among members of the St. Louis district and Municipal tennis associations. This offer caused a considerable revival of interest in team matches, and two divisions were formed, one among private clubs and the other for the public park clubs. Triple A defeated Forest Hills in the final round of the private club division and then won from Forest Park, winners of the municipal division, for the chawpionship.

The interclub tournament was continued last year. Triple A won first honors in its division while the Oakland Tennis Club surprised by winning the municipal division championship. In the play-off the Triple A team retained the Werner Trophy for another year by defeating Oakland, 8 to 2, in the final match.

No Major Events Here.

Realizing that there would be no major tournaments here this year, the Interclub Committee of the St. Louis District of which Karl Hodge is chairman, has outlined a very attractive schedule of matches. The season will open on May 15 and, weather permitting, will terminate on June 26.

There will be four divisions, two for private clubs and two for municipal clubs, as heretofore. Several meetings of players in the privae clubs have been held since January. These players have been divided up in order that the matches will be more evenly contested than in the past two years.

In Division A the three private clubs will be Triple A, St. Louis Country Club and the Washington University Tennis Club. The clubs which will participate in Division B are the Kirkwood Country Club, Forest Hills Tennis Club and the Ferris Tennis Club. In the Municipal Association there will probably be a North and a South division. The division winners in both the district and municipal tournaments will meet and the ultimate winners will meet for the right to hold the Werner trophy for one year.

Five Events in Each Match.

Each team match in the district divisions will consist of three singles and two doubles events. Teams must use at least five players and not more than seven players in any one match. Each team will meet the other two teams in the division twice.

The official schedule for private clubs is as follows:

DIVISION A.

May 15—Country Club at Triple A.
May 22—Triple A at Washington U.
May 23—Wash. Univ. at Country Club.
May 29—Triple A at Country Club.
May 30—Wash. Univ. at Triple A.
June 5—Country Club at Wash. Univ.

DIVISION B.

May 15—Forest Hills at Kirkwood.
May 22—Ferris at Forest Hills.
May 23—Ferris at Kirkwood.
May 29—Kirkwood at Forest Hills.
May 30—Ferris at Forest Hills.
June 5—Ferris at Kirkwood.

DIVISION PLAY-OFF.

June 12—Winner A vs. Winner of B.

NET SEASON OPENS MAY 15

FIRST EVENT IS INTERCLUB TOURNAMENT

No Major Tennis Events on This Year's Local Program — Outlook Tame Compared to Previous Campaigns.

By Davison Obear.

Interclub play will feature the tennis season in St. Louis this year. With no major tournaments on the schedule, the local enthusiasts will devote their time to interclub matches and other minor events. During the past two years the National clay court championship, held on the Triple A courts, was the outstanding attraction. It required considerable effort to stage the national tournament, and the relief from such strenuous duties this season will be welcomed by many tennis officials.

Werner

In 1924 Joseph L. Werner, former Princeton University tennis captain, offered a large trophy for interclub play among members of the St. Louis district and Municipal tennis associations. This offer caused a considerable revival of interest in team matches, and two divisions were formed, one among private clubs and the other for the public park clubs. Triple A defeated Forest Hills in the final round of the private club division and then won from Forest Park, winners of the municipal division, for the chawpionship.

The interclub tournament was continued last year. Triple A won first honors in its division while the Oakland Tennis Club surprised by winning the municipal division championship. In the play-off the Triple A team retained the Werner Trophy for another year by defeating Oakland, 8 to 2, in the final match.

No Major Events Here.

Realizing that there would be no major tournaments here this year, the Interclub Committee of the St. Louis District of which Karl Hodge is chairman, has outlined a very attractive schedule of matches. The season will open on May 15 and, weather permitting, will terminate on June 26.

There will be four divisions, two for private clubs and two for municipal clubs, as heretofore. Several meetings of players in the private clubs have been held since January. These players have been divided up in order that the matches will be more evenly contested than in the past two years.

In Division A the three private clubs will be Triple A, St. Louis Country Club and the Washington University Tennis Club. The clubs which will participate in Division B are the Kirkwood Country Club, Forest Hills Tennis Club and the Ferris Tennis Club. In the Municipal Association there will probably be a North and a South division. The division winners in both the district and municipal tournaments will meet and the ultimate winners will meet for the right to hold the Werner trophy for one year.

Five Events in Each Match.

Each team match in the district divisions will consist of three singles and two doubles events. Teams must use at least five players and not more than seven players in any one match. Each team will meet the other two teams in the division twice.

The official schedule for private clubs is as follows:

DIVISION A.

May 15—Country Club at Triple A.
May 22—Triple A at Washington U.
May 23—Wash. Univ. at Country Club.
May 29—Triple A at Country Club.
May 30—Wash. Univ. at Triple A.
June 5—Country Club at Wash. Univ.

DIVISION B.

May 15—Forest Hills at Kirkwood.
May 22—Ferris at Forest Hills.
May 23—Ferris at Kirkwood.
May 29—Kirkwood at Forest Hills.
May 30—Ferris at Forest Hills.
June 5—Ferris at Kirkwood.

DIVISION PLAY-OFF.

June 12—Winner A vs. Winner of B.

ALEC MERMOD

ANGLERS are now devoting their attention to trout fishing as the spawning season is on with the other game fish, and while the law permits these to be taken with live or dead minnows and worms, the real sportsman is not taking advantage of these conditions.

The reports from all of the trout streams are very favorable, especially from Bennett's Mill, near Lebanon.

The limit has been taken by nearly every one who has fished there this season.

We have just learned that the use of artificial flies will be permitted when fishing for trout; this is a very just and wise decision of our game department, for every one knows that trout have finished spawning by March 1 and are now strong and ready to fight.

As a matter of fact the artificial fly should not have been classed along with the wooden minnow, for when that clause was inserted in our game bill no thought was given to the fly, as the intent was to abolish the use of the wooden minnow with its gangs of hooks.

When the male bass is guarding the nest he is apt to fight away any object that is dropped close to the bed, but will not pay any attention to a fly which is near the surface.

Bennett's Mill.

MRS. JOSIE SMITH, so well known to the visiting fishermen, has given up the hotel at Brice, which is now being operated by Jack Kearney, who has refurnished it throughout and sets a splendid table.

The limit at Bennett's is 10 trout per day, but only 15 may be taken home.

If you are at all skilful you will have no trouble in catching 25 or more in a day's fishing, though, of course, you will only keep the big ones.

When taking a trout off the hook which you intend putting back in the water, do not fail to have your hands thoroughly wet before touching the trout. This is a very important thing to remember, for if you handle the trout with dry hands the chances are about 20 to 1 that he will die.

Two parties went to this wonderful fishing stream last week. Gerry Allen, Frank Smiley and Julius Koehler started Monday, and Ed Schlopp, Herman Ketchler and Frank Zarumsky went Wednesday. Both parties planned to spend a week.

A Record Trout.

AS far as we know, the largest trout taken in Missouri waters was linded by A. S. Donnelly, April 23, 1921. This fish was taken at 11:45 p. m. with a dead minnow. (The big trout are night feeders). After this trout had been out of the water 24 hours he weighed 7 pounds, 9 ounces, was 25½ inches long, 6 inches deep and 16 inches in girth. Measurements were taken by George Ashton. Second to Bennett's Mill is Yancy's Mill on Little Piney, where the trout are plentiful and are rising readily to the fly.

Montauk, at the head of Current River, is not quite so good as either Bennett's or Yancy's Mill, but there are enough trout to afford good sport and the surroundings are beautiful.

How to Land the Big Trout.

NEVER fight your trout when he is fighting you. In other words, when the trout jumps after you have hooked him, let him have a slack line, for a trout's flesh is very tender and if you keep a taut line, the hook will tear out.

To those who have not had much experience in trout fishing, this may seem very poor advice, for the general rule is to keep your line taut. If you have been losing your big ones try this plan.

In going after the big ones, always fish in the channel, for the big fellow likes deep water.

When using a dry fly never pull or jerk it. When in the water, allow it to float as long as it will, then retrieve and dry it off before making another cast. The fly should float on the surface of the water in a natural manner.

Propagating Goggle-Eye.

HERETOFORE no attention has been devoted to the propagation of goggle eye, but the hatcheries at Yancy's Mill and Sequiota will be devoted to the propagation of small mouths and goggle-eye.

The brood fish will be obtained by men appointed for that purpose and will be taken on hook and line. Up to date about 150 bass and goggle-eye have been taken in this way, and these hatcheries soon will be going.

The "pumpkin seed," another species of sunfish, is often called goggle-eye, but they belong to a different family. Both of these fish afford good sport for a light flyrod and are excellent pan fish.

Pro-Amateur Meet to Open Golf Season Tomorrow

First Tourney of 1926 at North Hills Club—Two Big Fixtures, the Trans-Mississippi and Sectional Pro Qualifying Event, at Algonquin.

The professional-amateur gathering at North Hills Country Club tomorrow will mark the opening of tournament golf in St. Louis district for the 1926 season. Secretary Louis Hamel of the Professional Golfers' Association of Missouri, in announcing the date and place of the opening event, said that the pros regarded the mixed tournaments of last season as highly beneficial both as a means of bringing the professionals into closer contact and as a means of providing keen competition, which makes for better golf. A professional pairs with an amateur tournament matches.

The Algonquin Country Club announced yesterday that the Trans-Mississippi tournament, one of the most important fixtures of American golf, will be played over its course June 21 to 26. The Trans-Mississippi association covers an immense territory, stretchiing from the west bank of the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains and from Canada to Mexico. This will be the big tournament of the St. Louis district this season, for there is absolute assurance that many of the best golfers in the country will be present. Entries for this event can be filed with W. L. Pfeffer, assistant secretary, at 512 Lucas avenue. The final date of filing entries is June 18.

Professional Tourney.

Two of the most important tournaments in this section of the country will be held on successive days in June when the sectional qualifying round of the Professional Golfers' Association is played at Algonquin on June 14 and the Missouri State championship is started at Westwood on June 15.

The St. Louis district championship tournament for amateur golfers will be held in September, as usual, but the date has not be selected. The tournament will be held at Bellerive Club.

Permanent greens are in use at most of the larger courses in the district now. Bellerive was the first to open the good greens. Algonquin and North Hills were next and the St. Louis Country Club was next.

Cooper May Show Here.

Harry Cooper, famous long-driving expert of the Lakewood Club at Kansas City, will be invited to appear here in one of the local professional tournaments to give an exhibition of his prowess.

FAMOUS BATTLES OF THE RING

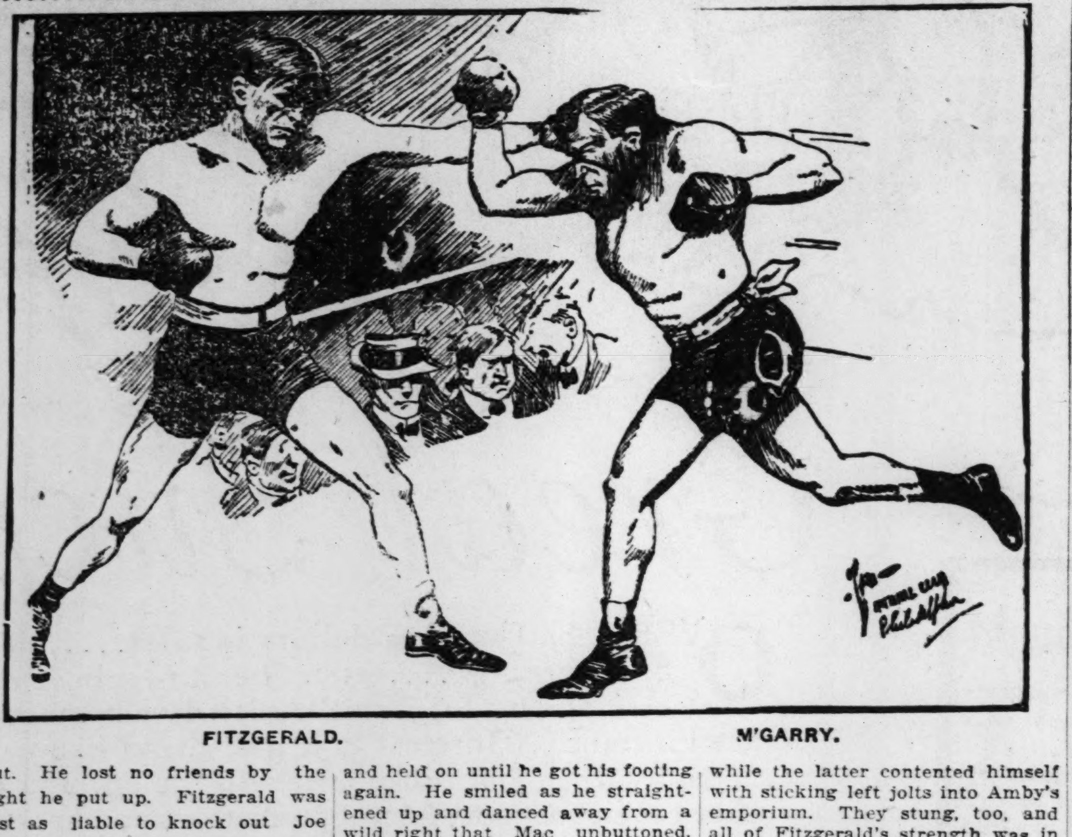
By T. A. "Tad" Dorg

FITZGERALD FIRST TO KNOCK OUT M'GARRY

Brooklyn and New York Lightweights Fought Terrific Bout in Philadelphia in 1906.

THIS is the second of a series of famous fights covered by Tad, sporting cartoonist and authority on pugilism. Tad has covered all the big fights held in this country in the last 30 years. In this review of prominent battles he will not tell alone of championships, but will refresh the memories of many of the fans who have witnessed thrilling contests in the smaller clubs.

When Willie Fitzgerald K. O.'d Amby McGarry



FITZGERALD. M'GARRY.

Amby McGarry, the Bronx lightweight, was knocked out in one round on June 22, 1906, in the National Club, Philadelphia, by Willie Fitzgerald of Brooklyn. It was a slashing battle in which the New York boy was running second, but it was a ripper, a battle that was a hummer from the start, and the end came as suddenly as lightning.

It was like the games the kids play: "Open your mouth and shut your eyes, and I'll hand you something that will make you wise."

It was the first time that McGarry ever experienced a knockout. He lost no friends by the fight he put up. Fitzgerald was just as liable to knock out Joe Gans as he was McGarry, and of late he had been fighting in superb form.

The bell rang and Fitz, clad in green fighting tights, walked up coolly to meet the hurricane from the Bronx. He had seen McGarry fight and knew all about those terrific plunges, so when Amby rushed bull-like, with his head down, Willie ducked, but was carried over to the ropes by the force and held on until he got his footing again. He smiled as he straightened up and danced away from a wild right that Mac unbuttoned. There was another and then a left on top of that which caught Fitz on top of the head.

Fitz Lands Telling Blow.

McGarry, encouraged by the one he landed, rushed in again and drove Willie into the latter's corner, where they slugged like two demons. The crowd was up in an instant. McGarry was much stronger than the Brooklynite and was whaling away for dear life, while the latter contented himself with sticking left jolts into Amby's emporium. They stung, too, and all of Fitzgerald's strength was in them, but he might just as well have tossed them up in the gallery—they seemed to have no effect on the Sharkeylike McGarry.

They broke away after this mixup and Fitzgerald backed away toward McGarry's corner, but slowly. He smashed Amby on the cheek with a left, trying to feel for an opening for the right, landing nicely, and then suddenly, as Mac rushed, Fitz hooked a left to the chin, and McGarry, with his arms at his side, reeled toward the ropes. There was a terrific cheer from the spectators. Those at the ringside were frantically yelling at Fitz, some shouting and others telling him how to knock out his reeling opponent.

Fitzgerald was as cool as a man having his hair cut. He measured Amby with his left, kind of tossed his guard away, and then smashed a right over on the jaw that could have been heard out in the street. McGarry went over on his back. The crowd was wild; they seemed crazy; the noise was terrific.

McGarry turned over on his stomach, got up on one knee, his eyes bleary, slowly searching around the ring for his corner. His seconds tossed water-soaked sponges at him and told him to wait for the count of nine. The roar continued, while Referee McGuigan counted as loud as he could.

McGarry's First.

At nine McGarry rose and dived behind the referee. It was not exactly a dance—he staggered. Fitzgerald did not leap at him like a tiger. Experience had taught him that a cool head was as necessary as a wallop. He jabbed a left and stung Amby on the nose. The latter reeled. Fitzgerald tossed up another jab and, as McGarry threw up his left to guard it, Willie smashed another over on the point that was the goods.

The water splashed from McGarry's head and he shook like a tall building in an earthquake. His legs quivered and he went over slowly on his face. Fitzgerald knew it was over. He walked to his corner.

McGarry could not get up. He was out as clean as a man could have been. He only moved once. At the count of eight he turned over on his face and his right arm fell around the canvas like the legs of a dying horse move. It was his first knockout and he was out completely. At the count of 10 his seconds carried him to his corner, where he fell into the chair as limp as a rag.

But Wu has the right to rule, conferred by age-long culture and the habit of ruling.

Wu is a Confucian, loyal to old traditions. Let the Governors govern and the laborers labor and the farmers farm! When laborers go beyond their duties and form trade unions to dictate terms to masters, Wu can suppress them as high-handedly as anyone in China. He executes them calmly, as the duty owed to law and order. His chief supporters are the great merchant class of China, which is also the class of the cultured old families. His base is Hankow, a merchant city.

Two or more years ago, when Wu took Pekin from his former teacher, he remained outside the walls till the teacher withdrew in dignity, since he would not humiliate a man who once taught him. A year later, when he himself was fleeing for life, he was found on a gunboat reading Confucius and Mencius. Even in that downfall Wu consolidated his reputation, which is worth more than many armies to a Chinese.

In the past, defeated dictators of China sought refuge in foreign settlement, protecting themselves from their countrymen under foreign laws. Wu was the first defeated chief who scorned such action. He fled by way of the sea, it is true, but he went straight to Hankow, the central commercial city of China. At once the remnants of his forces gathered around him; he almost gained in prestige by that act, what he lost in military power.

Mixing Politics and Literature.

Always the flavor of the Chinese literary past gathers around Wu. During the opening campaigns of the present civil war, when it was not yet evident if Wu himself would be drawn into the struggle, a visit was announced of a leading Chinese politician to Wu, "to spend a week discussing ancient Chinese literature." Then everyone laughed, for they knew this conference might settle a future dictatorship. Yet there is every likelihood that Chinese literature also was discussed.

Wu is the center of the choicest lot of well-born grafters in China. This is his misfortune, but also perhaps his fortune, since without them he would hardly rise to power. Wu himself is honest; he is the only man they all trust to "reward his friends" by granting them the spoils of office. This also comes from adherence to ancient sages, according to whom there is duty to friends, but none to a nation. Around Wu collect some of the ablest and best of the older men of China, and also some

He executes them calmly, as the duty owed to law and order. His chief supporters are the great merchant class of China, which is also the class of the cultured old families. His base is Hankow, a merchant city.

Two or more years ago, when Wu took Pekin from his former teacher, he remained outside the walls till the teacher withdrew in dignity, since he would not humiliate a man who once taught him. A year later, when he himself was fleeing for life, he was found on a gunboat reading Confucius and Mencius. Even in that downfall Wu consolidated his reputation, which is worth more than many armies to a Chinese.

In the past, defeated dictators of China sought refuge in foreign settlement, protecting themselves from their countrymen under foreign laws. Wu was the first defeated chief who scorned such action. He fled by way of the sea, it is true, but he went straight to Hankow, the central commercial city of China. At once the remnants of his forces gathered around him; he almost gained in prestige by that act, what he lost in military power.

Mixing Politics and Literature.

Always the flavor of the Chinese literary past gathers around Wu. During the opening campaigns of the present civil war, when it was not yet evident if Wu himself would be drawn into the struggle, a visit was announced of a leading Chinese politician to Wu, "to spend a week discussing ancient Chinese literature." Then everyone laughed, for they knew this conference might settle a future dictatorship. Yet there is every likelihood that Chinese literature also was discussed.

Wu is the center of the choicest lot of well-born grafters in China. This is his misfortune, but also perhaps his fortune, since without them he would hardly rise to power. Wu himself is honest; he is the only man they all trust to "reward his friends" by granting them the spoils of office. This also comes from adherence to ancient sages, according to whom there is duty to friends, but none to a nation. Around Wu collect some of the ablest and best of the older men of China, and also some of the worst crooks. He sits on more land than either Chang or Feng, but he sits on it insecurely, his forces being known as the "allies," who never manage to remain allied long. This is perhaps the way of allies; in Wu's case it is aggravated by the extremely varied nature of his adherents.

I went to see Wu in his Hankow headquarters. Unlike the gorgeous Mukden "court" of Chang Tso Lin, with foreign aides and diplomats, and imposing receptions, and equally unlike the desert camp of Feng, built of Mongolian mud and straw by the labors of his own soldiers, Wu's headquarters was a rambling, rather shabby structure, and his reception room was filled chiefly with a long green baize table, littered with surface debris of papers, blotters and a few cigarettes.

Here I waited for the audience while a secretary told me of Wu's habits. "He never gets sick; at 7 a. m. he is in the field or the office; at 11 he begins on his piles of telegrams." I learned also that Wu had chosen this rather inconvenient spot for barracks, because it was from here that he won his first great victories and he wished the return of his former good fortune!

Has Appearance of a Clerk.

Then we went upstairs to a smaller but similar room, with another large green table littered with remains of conferences. At one end sat Wu Psi Fu; and at first I did not know it was he. He might have been an elderly clerk working through a pile of correspondence, except that as I watched him, there was somewhat more decision in his manner of making notations on letters and telegrams. In a moment a secretary came to the door and took away a pile of letters, bringing others. All through the time he talked with me, he was receiving telegrams, making notations on them and handing them back to secretaries.

He was a kindly man, showing every one of his 54 years, older than either Chang or Feng, his chief rivals.

His manner was that of a pleasant, and somewhat shabby college professor, rather than that of a war chieftain. As we talked I could not make up my mind whether he himself was really a great military leader, or whether the traditions of his family and the prestige of learning and position had drawn military leaders around him. Neither could I decide whether the aloofness with which he marked telegrams while giving me one-half of his attention, was due to a genius for efficiency, or was merely a calm, self-centered Chineses scorn for a foreign interviewer. Yet I could not have called him discourteous, merely busy; he answered all my questions very efficiently.

"Foreign influence," he said, "has been both good and well. The

Mexico's Hopes and Progress Set Forth by Its Ambassador

Country Made Independent of Foreign Bankers, Currency Stabilized, Thousands of Miles of Good Roads Built, and Nation Rid of Its Huge Army—$750,000 Weekly Saved by Economies.

Farm Lands Distributed to More Than 400,000 Persons, Big Ranches Move to Provide Schools and Teachers, and Education for Masses Provided—And All in Seventeen Months.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17.

WHAT IS happening to Mexico? The old "hotbed of revolution" doesn't seem so hot any more. The news takes on a novel and curious tone. We hear of such things as national highways recently completed, of a plan to electrify industry through the use of water power, of vast projects to reclaim arid lands through irrigation, of thousands of new schools established, of farm experimental stations, of civil service reforms, and a new agricultural bank. We hear of old debts being settled, of a balanced budget and millions in the treasury. To us, so long accustomed to wars and rumors of wars in that Republic, such reports are puzzling. Have the old feuds and factions subsided? Is Mexico suddenly becoming a modern nation? And if so, what is the explanation of it?

To get the answers to these unusual questions, the correspondent went directly to the man best qualified to give them, namely, Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican Ambassador to the United States.

Senor Tellez is short, muscular and clean shaven. His speech is terse. He talks to the point and without gestures. His eyes are calm and appraising.

Elias Pluetarco Calles was inaugurated President of Mexico 17 months ago. Things began to happen immediately. Among these things, the most significant and important can be traced to President Calles' determination to accomplish two purposes: First, to give full force and effect to all the provisions of the new Constitution, adopted in 1917; second, to clean up Mexico and give it the kind of an administration it had never had in its tormented history.

Putting Life Into The Constitution.

This Constitution, being for the most part the work of liberal and radical scholars, was considerably in advance of other republican constitutions. It was modeled somewhat upon the program of the British Labor Party. In dealing with natural resource it took the theme, "Mexico for the Mexicans." Vigorous measures to enforce the provisions relating to land and petroleum led to a diplomatic controversy with the American State Department, which contended that the land and petroleum laws were retroactive and confiscatory as they affect American interests in Mexico.

The correspondence which has continued for several months was made public a few days ago in response to a Senate resolution introduced by Senator Norris of Nebraska. It showed that the two Governments had virtually smoothed out their major differences. While taking a firm position that Mexico could not permit outside interference in her domestic affairs, Calles was able to point to several decisions by the Mexican courts which seem to assure American property owners of fair treatment. He made it perfectly clear, however, that he proposes to go ahead with the program which has already achieved spectacular results.

Ambassador Tellez responded readily to the writer's request for a recital of some of these results.

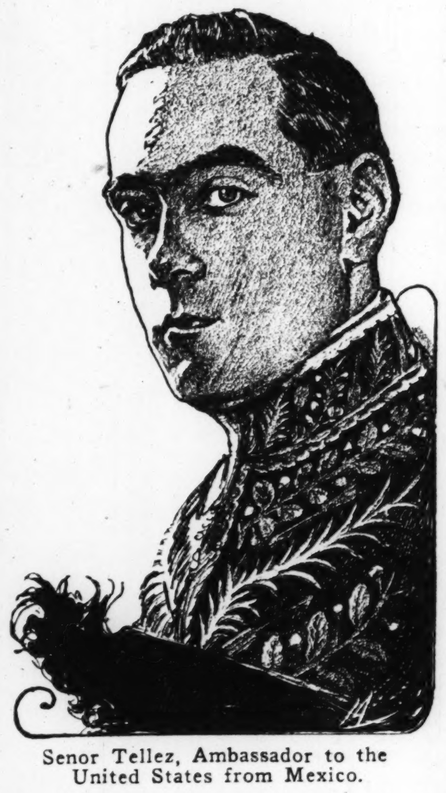
"Peace," he said. "Mexico has peace. There are no signs of revolt in our country. This is principally due to the fact that the people like the Government. They believe it is trying to give them justice. They can see what it is doing for them. Therefore, they will tolerate no attempt against it. It is human nature to stand by those who are standing by you.

5000 Army Officers Lost Their Jobs.

"Except for isolated cases, such as all countries have, banditry has disappeared. This may be attributed partly to the excellent organization of the police. Crime in Mexico City decreased over 50 per cent in the last two years. It may be partly attributed also to the improved condition of the people generally. As poverty and injustice diminish, crime diminishes.

"Our regular army now is about 45,000 officers and men, as compared with 1,500,000 under arms on both sides during the last revolution. One of President Calles' first acts was to discharge 5000 officers."

Smiling, he explained: "We had entirely too many Generals and Colonels on the pay roll. Now they can find jobs."



Senor Tellez, Ambassador to the United States from Mexico.

Mexico has a bank of issue, the institution which issues and regulates the national currency. The Ambassador was asked about that.

"Carranza established it," he said. "It is somewhat like your Federal Reserve Bank. Previously the issue of currency was in the hands of private banks. It was found that some of them had reserves sufficient to cover not more than 10 per cent of the currency they had issued. They had abused the confidence of the people. They were forbidden to make further issues, and the Government planned to establish its own bank of issue.

"Our first thought was to seek foreign capital to finance it, because of the simple fact that we had none of our own, but the terms offered by New York and European bankers were so exorbitant as to make it out of the question. They demanded financial, economical and political exactions which we could not grant. Both Carranza and Obregon rejected these offers.

"When President Calles came in he determined to save enough money from the public revenue to finance the bank with Mexican money. There was only one way to save so much, and that was through the practice of rigid economy in public expenditures, efficiency in administration and the elimination of all graft and pilfering. First, the 5000 superfluous Generals and Colonels were removed from the pay roll. Then the Civil Service was reorganized and a large number of useless Government employes were discharged. Experts were put in control of the departments.

"A strict accounting system was installed, which stopped all leaks.

Many Millions. Saved by Economy.

"By the end of the first month a saving of $750,000 a week in administrative expenses had been effected. In eight months the administration paid $15,000,000 which was owing to merchants for supplies from the preceding administration, and $5,000,000 in salaries which had also been in arrears from that administration. But most important of all, we had accumulated a fund of $30,500,000 with which to finance the bank of issue."

"During all this time, and up to the presen, the saving has continued at the rate of $750,000 a week. Our budget has been balanced.

"We have accumulated a fund of $9,000,000 to finance an agricultural bank which will be opened in a few days. We have made contracts totaling more than $10,000,000 with American firms for the building of modern highways, and in this work more than 14,000 Mexican workmen are now employed.

"We have opened more than 3000 new rural schools—all at Federal expense—and have created 16 modern agricultural schools to each of which is attached an experimental station and a staff of experts who travel around their districts instructing farmers in modern methods of planting and cultivation.

"Notwithstanding these added expenses, we had in the treasury last week a cash balance of $10,000,000. That, you will agree, is a pretty good business record.

Big Ranches Must Provide Schools.

"There always has been a high percentage of illiteracy in our country. Therefore we are prepared to spend large sums on education. Some of the great haciendas (plantations) employ many laborers. No schools have been available to these tenants and their families, because they are remote from the cities. We have passed a law requiring the owner of every hacienda employing as many as 300 persons to supply a schoolhouse and pay the salary of the teachers. The same law applies to the owners of industrial plants, if these plants are remote from existing schools.

"Schools have been established in all military barracks. We have introduced American sports in the army. Last week $250,000 worth of baseball supplies were shipped from New York to the Mexican Government as equipment for the army."

Illustrating the scope of the roadbuilding program, the Ambassador related that a concrete, asphalt-surfaced highway has just been completed from the border at Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City, a distance of 1700 miles. The similar trunk highways, one from Mexico City to Acapulco, on the Pacific Coast, a distance of 500 miles, and another from Mexico City to Manzanillo, 400 miles, are well along toward completion. Numerous shorter connecting roads are being built.

One of the great objects desired by the framers of the 1917 Constitution was the distribution of the land among those who tilled it.

Land Distribution Benefits 440,000 Persons.

The hacienda system was one of the curses of old Mexico. When Diaz was President he made prodigious grants of Government land to his favorites. Some of these haciendas reached incredible proportions. The Terrazas family at one time owned a third of the entire State of Chihuahua, employing more than 15,000 farm laborers, cowboys and herders. These people were virtually serfs and the owners were feudal barons. It was the rule of the Terrazas family, for example, that produced Pancho Villa.

Since the adoption of the new Constitution, up to last September, more than 2,000,000 acres of land had been distributed among 76,500 Mexican families. A total of nearly 5,000,000 acres has been provisionally or definitely distributed among 440,000 persons.

To each community is given an "ejidos," or communal tract, adjoining the village or hamlets. To each family capable of cultivating it a piece is allotted within the "ejidos." The law provides that the land cannot be sold. The old Constitution had the same provision but Diaz never enforced it. Consequently many of the "ejidos" were sold or given away, some to American corporations. The determination of the Calles administration to recover them was partly responsible for the recent diplomatic controversy.

"The Department of Agriculture," said Ambassador Tellez "is now prepared to supply the farmers with implements and machinery, at cost, and on long term payments. Each of the 16 new experimental stations sends out a staff of agricultural experts who tell the farmers what to plant and how to cultivate their crops.

Easy Loans for Farmers Provided.

"Our farmers, like farmers everywhere, require credit. Our bankers, like bankers everywhere, do not care to make small farm loans, and when they do make them have sometimes charged as much as 7 per cent a month interest, which, of course, is usury. For that reason we proposed to establish an agricultural bank. The capital to finance it was saved out of the national revenues—just as in the case of the bank of issue. It is ready now, and the bank will be opened in a few days.

"The rate of interest to be charged farmers will be only enough to cover the losses and meet administrative expenses. It is not intended that the bank shall make a profit. When a farmer loses his crop, he will be loaned money with which to get a start the next year."

The Government's solicitude for agriculture does not end there, however. There is a vast area of arid land, and land not adequately irrigated, in Mexico. A huge irrigation and reclamation system has been planned, and a construction contract calling for an outlay of $25,000,000 was recently let.

Lake Champla, a very large body of water which acts as a catch basin for the middle highlands, is situated at a high altitude. The plan is to bring water down from the lake in quantities sufficient to irrigate a large portion of the states of Guadalajara, Colima and Queretaro and to install in the waterways hydro-electric plants which will

Democracy Not Safe in Europe Until Mussolini's Reign as Dictator Is Tested by Time

So Writes Lloyd George, in Commenting on Uneasiness Abroad Over Fascism's Possible Aim to Restore an Imperial Rome.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Former Premier of England.

LONDON, April 17 (By Cable).

THERE can be no doubt as to the most discussed and most controversial personality in Europe today. It is that of Signor Mussolini, the Italian dictator. There are other dictators in Europe. Leaving out Russia, there are four or five governing hands situated between the Black Sea and the Atlantic. In that respect, the European continent is filling the role which South America occupied in its less settled days. But none of the other dictators attracts the attention which centers around the Italian Duce.

It is not due to the electric atmosphere of assassination, attempted or successful—Gibson or Matteotti. This is the invariable accompaniment of all usurpations. Force brings these tyrannies into being, and they, in themselves, breed the temper of violence which is never confined to one side.

Everybody rejoices at the failure of the insane attempt on Signor Mussolini's life just as every decent person was also shocked by both the brutal assassination of Signor Matteotti and the farcical trial of his assassins. But the excitement around the famous Italian leader is not due to these squalid incidents.

Europe studies the experiment he initiated with genuine and growing interest and watches his movements in the realm of foreign policy with equally sincere and increasing concern. He sailed to Tripoli accompanied by such an imposing flotilla of armed ships as never escorted any Emperor in the ancient or modern world on a peaceable mission to part of their dominions.

Trip to Africa Not Swagger Alone.

Were it all swagger the world would laugh. But there is an uneasy feeling abroad that it signifies business of a portentous kind. Italy certainly thinks so and Italian imperialism has been roused to a pitch of enthusiastic confidence in its destiny such as the peninsula has not experienced since the days of the Caesars. What does it mean? And where will it lead to?

Mussolini represents the revolt against the delays and futilities in which constitutionalism occasionally lands nations at critical moments in their history when prompt action alone can save them. Such revolts have occurred before and will happen again when the conditions arise and the man appears who can take advantage of them.

Signor Mussolini may not be a Julius Caesar, an Oliver Cromwell or a Napoleon Bonaparte but he is at least a Louis Napoleon. Louis Napoleon sprang out of the reaction against chaos produced by a succession of impracticable visionaries and amiable platitudinarisms. They drove France to confusion and despair and Frenchmen welcomed a strong hand. Napoleon's address to the French Assembly when he was meditating his coup d'etat might well have been repeated verbatim by his Italian copyist. He defined his policy as "internally—order, authority, religion, wellbeing of the people; externally—the national dignity." Compare that utterance with the words in which the Italian dictator defines his policy. 'What is Fascismo but, first, respect for the national respect for discipline, for law and order?"

Fascism and Louis Napoleon.

No historical analogy is or ever can be complete. But there are many parallel lines in the initial stages of the second Empire and of the Italian Fascist regime. Louis Napoleon could not, so soon after the French revolution, mock at liberty in the contemptuous tones of a modern Fascist. The Bonapartist dynasty was a child of the revolution, with its liberte, egalite, fraternite. But in the essentials, the attitude of the Second Empire and of the Fascists towards democracy is identical. There is the same appeal to the people to choose freely their representatives to the National Assembly. But in both cases the choice was judicially managed by the central authority so as to secure a Parliament that would tamely do what it was told.

Of the two dictators, the Italian is the more outspoken in his ideas. He does not conceal his contempt for parliaments of all sorts. He is convinced of "the decadence of the democratic and parliamentary system in all countries." He once declared that parliaments, in the past, had been useful. They had done eminently good work. Today, perhaps something new and more progressive was needed. He did not know himself yet what it would eventually be. In his opinion, the press "has in many respects replaced parliament."

As Intolerant as Dictators of Old.

All dictators have displayed the same intolerance of assemblies which insisted on discussing action either before or after it has been taken. All dictators have preferred to choose rather than to be chosen by their electorate. Lenin would not trust the peasants, who constitute 80 per cent of the Russian workers. He preferred his 600,000 Communists.

Mussolini claims to have 2,000,000 Fascists behind him. Even so, they constitute but one-sixth of the Italian male adult population. Cromwell only consulted the "saints"—which always and in every age means the people who are in entire agreement with your views. Louis Napoleon saw to it that only "well disposed persons" were elected—that, of course, means persons well disposed to his regime. "The well disposed," "the Communists," "the saints" and "the Fascists"—or by whatever other name you call them—they are the standing army of those who have usurped authority by force. Both Lenin and Mussolini were quite frank about it. They both distrusted democracy and said so, and founded their power on violence. As Mussolini puts it: "Violence is moral, provided it is timely and surgical and chivalrous." The proposition, of course, involves as a corollary that the man who uses violence must be the sole judge of its morality.

Harassed Nations Watching Experiment.

Will France and Germany follow suit? "Liberty" and "democracy" have lost much of their thrill in post-war Europe. Order, tranquility, discipline, security and prosperity are more potent in their appeal to the harassed and impoverished European. France has, for a century and a half, passed from democracy into autocracy and through autocracy to democracy with the ease and heedlessness with which an airplane, in its flight, dashes into and out of a cloud. It is all a question of the state of the atmosphere. The Germans have barely emerged from a qualified autocracy. The success or failure of the Fascist experiment is bound to influence judgment in all countries.

Economically, it is to all appearances a striking success. Italy is prospering. All her industries are doing well. There is no unemployment. Strikes and lockouts have ceased. Workmen are

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

"Old Fiddlers" Defended.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE super-sensitiveness of "Subscriber" must have been badly wrecked on Friday evening, April 2, when the old-time "fiddlin'" contest was sent out on the air from Station WOS, especially if the musical complex of "Subscriber" is as rabidly set against old-time fiddling as the communication in yesterday's Post-Dispatch would seem to indicate. But may one judge for all? Might not the intolerant attitude toward those of us who do find something to enjoy in the old-time airs be tempered with just a little of that mercy that "becometh a throned monarch better than his crown"?

True, there is little in the teasing melody of "Turkey in the Straw" or "The Arkansaw Traveler" to satisfy a grand opera complex, but the rollicking swing of "Leather Breeches" has tickled more toes than all of the grand opera in America, and to many old-timers, who are minus the grand opera temperament, the opportunity to hear those old boys in their fiddling contest would not have been exchanged for free tickets to a harp concert in heaven.

Let's be just to the old boys whose fiddlin' days are numbered. Practically every old fiddlers' contest that is broadcast anywhere has its inception with the promoters of radio entertainment who know what the general public wants in the way of amusement. A noted humorist once said "there are more average people in the world than any other kind," and it is to the great masses of just average folk that the old-time fiddlers play their toe-tickling tunes. Here's to 'em!

Values.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SOME few days ago there appeared an editorial in the Post-Dispatch all about a race horse winning $70,000 and that an offer of $250,000 was made for the horse and the editor's opinion was he was worth it.

Then contrast the writer, a human being, born U. S. citizen, thrice wounded World War veteran, and can't borrow $200 to stake a little business to keep body and soul together. Let me shake the dust of St. Louis from my feet, for no balm is found in Gilead.

Verily, yea, twice verily, horse meat is worth more than God's elect.

Recklessness and Prohibition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE impelling spirit of enforced prohibition is best exemplified by the occurrence of such un-sober acts as was described on page 16 of your Sunday, April 11, issue, under date line from Falmouth, Ky., which told of a drunken automobile driver boastfully destroying currency. And this too happened in the good State from which Mr. Clay, on the editorial page of your same issue, described bigotry so vividly. This $90 wasted by an inebriate would have put shoes on 40 pairs of drunkards' children's feet.

The Increase of Crime.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HOW wearisome, exasperating, hopeless seem the continual demands upon the courts and the police: "Sentence the criminal to longer terms!" "Crowd the prisons!" "Beat them! Chain them! Subdue and starve them!"

What short-sighted, shallow-minded recourses, are these, with crimes on the increase. More citizens held up, greater sums stolen.

The crueler the treatment, the longer the sentence, the more surely the criminal at bay is a desperate man and the police are sacrificed!

Looking back at history, this crime wave is the aftermath of the World War. The soldiers learned to kill. They learned to despise human life. Hence demoralization followed. Only the due payment of a cruel war. The K. K. K. and a crime wave followed the Civil War. After the late war followed a greater crime wave—and again the K. K. K. reared its head—and now, though 65 years have rolled by since 1861, we are no more intelligent to control the present problem than two generations ago!

How can it be controlled? The one way only. Hark to the tocsin: "Education!" Yes, but do we not educate? "We have not learned the first rudiments of what that education should be." Where are our classes on ethics? So many dates! So useless! Confusing the very few, perhaps five or ten imperative dates. So many lists of Kings and Presidents! So much routine of spelling! So many, many sums—and no time given to the classification of the child mind as an individual.

No. No courses to equip them (which should begin at the age of 5) for the great tussle for existence!

A word from the intelligent brain of Clarence Darrow: "Ninety per cent of our criminals are poor and have always been poor; 75 per cent are ignorant. The child who has been taught something by which he can make a living seldom goes wrong."

MRS. JOHN BEVERLEY ROBINSON.

THE BATTLE OF IOWA.

Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa badly overestimated his popularity. In 1922 he was elected by a majority of 175,000 to the vacancy occasioned by Senator Kenyon's appointment to a Federal judgeship. That majority went to Mr. Brookhart's head. He imagined himself another La Follette. Perhaps with reason. In that fight he licked the Republican organization to a frazzle. He came to the Senate an uncompromising, rather swaggering, radical. There was no such word as regularity in his vocabulary. Party obligation was not in his philosophy. He rejoiced mightily and openly in his insurgency.

Two years later, in 1924, when a candidate to succeed himself, though running as a Republican, he frankly rendered aid and comfort to the enemy ticket of La Follette and Wheeler. He probably thought La Follette would carry Iowa. Certainly he did not foresee the Coolidge sweep. As to his own election, he did not have the slightest anxiety, and in that judgment most of the press canvassers concurred.

But the 175,000 majority of two short years before all but melted away. The result was so close that the Democratic candidate, Steck, contested the final count. That contest has at last ended in the unseating of Brookhart and the seating of Steck.

Brookhart, therefore, must start again from scratch. He is going to do it. He will enter the primary against Senator Cummins, and according to some observers, he stands a good chance of winning. His brief, meteoric career does not warrant that inference. A man who sloughs away a majority of 175,000 in two years manifestly lacks the qualities for successful insurgent leadership. There is no trace of La Follette's genius in that swift reversal. The more plausible conclusion is that Brookhart's rise in politics was an accident. He appeared as a candidate at the moment of Iowa's acutest discontent and Iowa rallied to him. Presently Iowa's rage subsided, times got better in that corn belt and this, together with the Republican organization's alert and competent hostility, knocked off the Brookhart crown.

Can he defeat Cummins? He almost did it six years ago. But that was due in part to the over-confidence of the party organization, which did not regard the contender seriously. That mistake will not again occur.

The Cummins-Brookhart contest will command national attention, and if Brookhart measured up with several other Iowans of distinction and celebrity it might show whether that State is at bottom conservative or is ready to break away from its Republican allegiance when given sound leadership.

There have been many progressive outbreaks in Iowa. Senator Cummins himself, though a stalwart now, became a national figure and subsequently a United States Senator as proprietor of the "Iowa Idea," which, however mild and colorless it seems now, was close to heresy when first proclaimed. Dolliver ended triumphantly a lifetime of partisan orthodoxy in a blaze of delightful apostasy from the shop-worn creed resurrected by the Payne-Aldrich act. And when Kenyon was elevated to the Federal bench Iowa, the Senate and the country lost a liberal of capacity and daring.

If a Dolliver, a Kenyon or a Cummins of the truant days were contesting the senatorial nomination with the Cummins of today the pending Iowa primary might well be a definitive battle. Unfortunately, Brookhart does not possess that intellectual rank.

A NEW WILSON BOOK.

"The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson," a book written by a New Jersey editor, James Kerney, will be enjoyed by both the friends and enemies of the late President. It is a sincere piece of work, written in the swift running style of the reporter who knows his facts and tells them all gracefully and honestly.

That this is an unusual book is shown by the fact that the Post-Dispatch and Globe-Democrat have published extended reviews by their Washington correspondents. But while these reviews point out new disclosures in this extraordinary political career they miss what seems to us the most striking sentiment pronounced by Wilson after he left the White House.

They were talking, Kerney and Wilson, in the latter's study one December afternoon and the Ruhr invasion crept into the conversation. Wilson, it is known, never did like Poincare, regarded him as a ruthless imperialist, and time had already vindicated that judgment. But the occupation of the Ruhr was "damnable." With a flash of the old temper Wilson exclaimed:

"I should like to see Germany clean up France and I should like to tell Jusserand that."

German-Americans, we imagine, will go on hating Wilson to the end of the chapter, but at least this is one declaration they may enter to his credit with them. And all Americans of whatever extraction will know Woodrow Wilson better by reading Kerney's book.

LOVELY WOMAN IN POLITICS.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, talking to the League of Women Voters, told them how to get a bill through the Legislature.

It is really quite simple. You have only to practice the immemorial arts. What do you do when you want a hat, or a new car, or a hat, or a new frock or a hat, or a house in the country, or a hat? Well, that is just what you do when you beard the ponderous, majestic lawmaker in his den.

These Senators and Representatives are just as vulnerable as the mute inglorious Milton you married. Make every grave and potent solon understand that you know how important he is, how superior and influential; place your poor little bill in his individual keeping; have him put in a stitch here and a tuck there if the text needs it and see that it does; leave him preening with the fond illusion that on his masterly experience and prestige the fate of your cherished bill depends. They will all fall for it and your bill will go through a-flying.

If your conscience reproach you for thus preying on the gullibility of the sterner sex you can turn to your Bible and there find justification. And if you happen to have mislaid your Bible, just tell your conscience to cut out that ridiculous legendary twaddle and clink celebrating glasses with you.

Such, with minor embellishments, was Mrs. McCulloch's message to her sister voters. There is primeval candor here, barbaric frankness. Ponder her formula, ye sons of the Uplift, and reflect that, if woman has not changed politics, politics, thank heaven, has not changed woman.

OUR VANISHING FORESTS.

Two proclamations, issued simultaneously by the United States and Canadian Governments, appointing the week of April 18-24 as Forest Week, call attention to the urgent need of action by both countries looking to the prevention of waste by forest fires and other methods of timber destruction, the scientific care and use of what forests are left, and the reforestation of devastated areas by tree planting and culture. This subject is of special and vital interest to newspapers and newspaper readers, because of the fact that forest devastation—fires alone destroying $30,000,000 worth of standing timber annually—threatens to make pulp wood more and more costly, with the effect that the cost of advertising, if not the price of newspapers, must increase, such increase being passed on to the general public. Already, American newspapers are compelled to get a very large part of their wood pulp and paper from Canada. But the managers of Canadian newspapers, as well as those in the United States, foresee the day when there will be an actual shortage of pulp and paper, unless the rapid destruction of the Canadian forests by fire is radically reduced. And the exhaustion of pulpwood forests in the United States has gone so far that experts predict that in 10 years we shall have to obtain something upwards of 50 per cent of our paper from Canada. This, of course, means a great loss, both to consumers and to industry in general, American mills having to close, our lumber industry forced to decline and the public being compelled to pay the bills.

The Canadian proclamation especially recites the various known means of waste prevention, urging travelers and campers to be careful to start no fires and aid in extinguishing incipient blazes. This is important. But the better use of timber lands, in cutting, is a matter for lumbermen and state governments to center attention on. Nearly every state has thousands of acres of cut-over land, left without care, and too often swept by fires which prevent regrowth. Practically all of Missouri's best timber has disappeared, nothing being done to replace it. We have a Forestry Department, but our State Government has so little interest in forest conservation that the appropriation for the support of the department was stricken from the forestry bill before it went to Gov. Baker for signature. Our millions of acres in the Ozark region suitable for forestation and nothing else, are left to deteriorate into a wilderness of almost worthless scrub oak and poor grazing land.

It is expected that Arbor Day will be celebrated in Forest Week, and the young people, especially the Boy Scouts, will have an opportunity to do their bit for the forests. The Misssouri Forestry Association should keep up its good work in helping the cause of tree culture and forest work in this State, where public opinion with regard to the value of forests appears to be apathetic. The neglect of the subject is costly to the State. And the neglect by other states and the nation to effectually protect the forests is a national menace. "Prosperity for Posterity" is a forest conservation slogan that recently won a prize. But unless we begin conservation now and pursue it consistently and vigorously, one great factor in American prosperity will dwindle and vanish.

MICRÓBE HUNTERS.

The brilliant, gallant story of the great microbe hunters has at last been divorced from the scientific gibberish of the laboratories and painted in such high and dramatic colors that a boy of 12 would find it as grippingly interesting as the account of a jungle-hunt. Indeed, the jungle boasts no game so fearful and difficult to stalk as those tiny murderers, the microbes of disease. Paul de Kruif's "Microbe Hunters" tells of the war that has been waged against the sub-visible world of bugs ever since, in the seventeenth century, a Dutch janitor named Leeuwenhoek—a Christopher Columbus of a man—first saw them swimming in the fields of lenses which he had ground himself.

Some of the microbe hunters, like Louis Pasteur, the French chemist, are celebrated and are names with popular, if vague, significance, but how many know even the name of that Frenchman, Roux, and that German, Behring, who probed into the dread mysteries of diphtheria and who developed the antitoxin which now saves millions of children from death? Who knows Theobald Smith, who first proved that disease is sometimes carried by insects, as in the case of Texas fever and the cattle tick, and who paved the way for the magnificent and victorious fight of Walter Reed against yellow fever, and the scintillating explorations into the cause of malaria by the Englishman, Ross, and the Italian, Grassi?

Pasteur was a great showman as well as a great scientist and shared with Victor Hugo the glories of national heroism. Others, like that scraggly-bearded little country doctor, Robert Koch, were impatient of the spectacular and resentful of eyes that pried into their laboratory doings.. And Paul de Kruif shows us what happened in their laboratories, describes their experiments, their heroic and indefatigable work with soups swimming with invisible assassins, with nasty messes of dead animals, their gigantic blunders, their glittering strokes of genius or luck, their crazinesses, their faults and their virtues.

The microbe hunters are the real captains and the kings of history.

ON THE DEATH OF LUTHER BURBANK.

A soul has passed into the Great Unknown
Who seemed in doubt that life could ever be Transferred to planes our senses cannot see.
And people ask: "Can God such doubt condone?"

The marvels that he grew seemed wrought alone
By him, who filled so great a destiny:
His science gave him power but to see
One realm—one aim; it was an earthly throne.

Now faces he his Maker Who has said
We are His children bound for heaven and home.
What will our Pilgrim say as he is led Through gardens God has given him there to roam?
Ah, may his Maker lend him grace to see
That science gives not soul—Eternity.

Sir: Any Just a Minute space to spare for a rather fetching bit of Attic dampology? Though old enough to have been "declined with thanks" by some timid Athenian editor 2500 years ago, it has the vital and perennial interest intrinsic in all the major products of that matchless race that lived, loved, thought and fought under the glowing skies of classic Greece. True enough, some of those morally, constitutionally or professionally opposed to its convivial spirit might dryly and coldly remind us that Anacreon is said to have quite appropriately choked to death on a grape stone, but let that sour tale be told to the Boeotians; it's probably a canard, originating with either Wheel B. Wayner or Mrs. Bellemay Willycorn, and, even if true, simply proves that the merry old gentleman was a man of his convictions, even to the unbitter end of his 85 or more joyous years. But let's toddle on with our quotation:

The thirsty earth drinks up the rain,
And thirsts and gapes for drink again;
The plants set in the earth, they are
By constant drinking fresh and fair.

The sea itself—which one would think
Should have but little need to drink—
Drinks many a thousand rivers up
Into its vast o'erflowing cup.

(Entirely too much fizz and kick in the next two verses for our flat, dull times, so let's on to the snappy finale):

Fill up the bowl, boys, fill it high!
Fill up the glasses here, for why
Should ev'ry creature drink but I?
Why, man of morals, tell me why!

For the attempt to rhyme "are" and "fair," and for any other faults in the translation, the writer disclaims all responsibility, and passes the buck on or back to one Abraham Cowley, dead and beyond rebuke some little while prior to the day before yesterday.

THAT GOLDEN SILENCE.

The world is a place to live in, and to learn. Especially, to learn. Not only to acquire knowledge with the aid of books, but to become saturated with that other knowledge we acquire through experience. No one man was put into this world to reform it. It takes many to do that. Many to suppress the crying evils, and the lesser evils will always be with us. The individual who sets out to do it single-handed usually comes to grief. Nature did not intend it that way. The world is too large, and teeming with living beings who have ideas and opinions of their own, of which they are jealous, and to which they cling, tenaciously, to the extent of belligerency when opposed by any dogmatic policy, and the dogmatic policy is not wanting. It is known but too well that reformers, as a rule, enlist the aid of those who can assist them—help them in enacting their ideas into laws. Again, as a rule, these individual reformers find that they must mellow down for the sake of their own well-being, that Napoleons are few and far between, that what they can do must be done by sufferance of a teeming multitude; and the teeming multitude—we all know the great variety and perversity of ideas that exist in a teeming mulitude as well as they learn to know it—by and by. They settle down in the end to take refuge in that Golden Silence, to get that peace of mind to which their activities have made them strangers; then why not cultivate that Golden Silence first as last, to enjoy this life before they are too old to enjoy it? Let them do what good they can by example, not by precept. The great mass of people may take notice of a good example, but they resent being taught. There are too many teachers. Too many teachers who do not show by example in their public and private lives what they are trying to inculcate in others. Let the world wag. It will only be good when all the people in it are good; and making them good can be accomplished much better by example than by precept. If we live right ourselves, it may become the nucleus around which other right-living will gather.

Taking the Government tax of 1½ per cent off of $1000 of a man's income saves him $15. On the other hand, removal of the tariff tax on $1000 worth of supplies a family man buys at retail would save him about $250. Democrats and Republicans formed a coalition in the Senate to cut down on the income tax, which saves $350,000,000 to a few thousands who are rich, but gave no attention to tariff reductions that would have benefited the masses by reducing the cost of living. And yet when these tools of plutocracy ask for re-election millions of poor fools will want to shoot any neighbor who is willing to vote against such friends of the pee-pul.—Monroe County Appeal.

And now comes a letter from Congressman Bailey stating that he was sending a small sample sack of corn sugar to both Sikeston editors in order to sweeten them up a bit. The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

NOTABLE SERVICE BY A NEWSPAPER.

From the Trenton (N. J.) Gazette.

IF the average reader gives any thought at all to the subject of the proper functions of a newspaper and the duties and responsibilities of its publishers his conclusions center around a very simple thesis. A newspaper, he will determine in his own mind, should print the news in a fair and impartial way and comment intelligently upon questions that are prominent in the public mind.

In reality, however, the purposes of a fearless and forcefully directed newspaper go far beyond these restricted lines. In these days, when public interests are placed in jeopardy from numerous and insidious sources, the newspaper that is worthy of the confidence and the respect of the community must take upon itself the duty of the defender and the protector of the sacred rights of the people.

It is not to be inferred, of course, that the various governmental agencies established for this purpose are wholly impotent or incompetent, or that they are under the control of evil influences. It would be nothing less than tragedy if this were true and the nation would have sunk to a depth pitiable to contemplate.

Happily, this is not the case, but it is nevertheless a fact that there are constantly at work in the city, the state and the nation those forces whose natural element is corruption and who would, if it were in their power, twist and subvert the administration of the Government in such a way that their own base purposes would be served.

During every session of the Legislature of New Jersey and that of every other state in the Union there are introduced bills that are conceived in iniquitous origin and that are sponsored by men who have little thought for the people they are supposed to serve. To what extent have their designs and their efforts been defeated by the exposures and the driving attacks of the newspapers? The answer to this question would fill volumes every year.

So it can be readily seen that the proper functions of a newspaper are not confined to the mere publication of news in the restricted sense that is usually accepted. It must, above all things, maintain an eternal vigilance and a readiness to accept the gauge of battle whenever it is offered.

A recent and a notable example of the practical effect of the acceptance of this responsibility by the efficiently and honestly administered newspapers of the country is to be found in the action of the House several days ago in passing articles of impeachment against United States Court Judge George W. English of East St. Louis.

Judge English stands accused of tyrannical disbarment of counsel; of corruption and favoritism in bankruptcy cases; and of degrading the dignity of the bench, charges that are based upon the results of careful investigation and of an examination by a congressional subcommittee of the defendant jurist in person.

The action against Judge English was initiated by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which has performed a great public service. If the standards of the Federal courts are to be lowered by the presence of unworthy men upon the bench the cause of lawlessness will gain impetus and the danger to the public will increase correspondingly.

Foreign Ideas Ruined China, Says General Wu

foreigners have brought us big factories, and that is a good thing, since it gives a better living to tens of thousands. But the social structure founded by our sages is being destroyed to a large extent and that is bad. Men no longer think of the duty to seniors, the duty to parents, to husbands, to the older brother. This is the bad effect of foreign influence."

"Has this gone deep?" I asked.

"Yes, it has gone very deep," answered Wu. "Especially in the cities. Much less in the villages."

"And how would you correct it?"

"We must strengthen and reform our educational system," said Wu. "We must take the Chinese classics as a foundation, to enable us to follow the precepts of the sages We must go to foreigners for technical and scientific education chiefly, but our moral education should educate the people to respect their own character, as outlined by Chinese classics." * * * There was nothing here of the passion for teaching all people to read and write, which I found in the People's Armies; to Wu the universality of education did not matter as much as the quality of it. For the quality of it produced the men who, as Governors, would tell other men what to think and do.

Students Under Bad Influences.

"These radical students," he went on, "are under bad influences. They don't know what they are doing. I am against all movements of this kind that are outside the limits of law. It is easier to reform them now, but if bolshevism starts it will be harder."

I asked him if he thought China would be able to avoid the evil effects of industrialism as seen in the west, and he answered:

"Bolshevism may also come here, but of this one cannot be certain." To him, apparently, so near to the hard-living past of an industry without machinery, and with his ethical conceptions of life. the chief evil effect of the factory was was a possible bolshevism, undermining the old Confucian conception of the harmonious relations in a stable, ordered society.

He expected at that time that Feng would come in under his group of allies, and when I asked if he would find it possible to work with Feng after their past experiences together—"I can excuse him," he answered. A rather striking bit of "graciousness" since at that moment it seemed likely that Feng would have the decision of whether or not to "excuse" Wu.

Much more he said, about his ideals of government, delivered with a bored but gentle air. "The need is to establish a fundamentally stable government; to improve the educational system; to construct more railroads, to increase foreign trade, to disband superfluous troops, to reorganize the financial system."

"Big Business" Is His Program.

It was a Chinese merchants' program, for Wu is the spokesman of the great group of Chinese merchants. It is from them he draws support for his armies, being the only one of the greater Generals who has consistently disdained all foreign aid. He does not need it; China's merchants are rich enough. He spoke not of troops as "looting the peasants" but as "superfluous," i. e., costing taxes. He spoke not of roads for peasants but of railroads for commerce; not of reading and writing for the masses, but of an improved system for those whose lot it was to go to school. He represents the solidest of the old families, who have been merchants and governors and students.

Then suddeny, I changed the whole discussion. "Mr. Wu," I said, leaning forward, "I have heard so much of your literary abilities and of the poems you write. Would it be very presumptuous if I asked you to write a poem for me to take back to America?"

Like magic the air was changed. Where was the bored little man reciting off-repeated platitudes to an interviewer. His eyes brightened; he sat up in his chair, shoved to one side the pile of telegrams and letters and called aloud to his secretary. "Bring me sheets of fresh paper," he said, "and a clean pen." The pen was brought, a Chinese pen resembling a small paint-brush, dipped into thick, gummy ink. He considered a moment and then steadily traced Chinese characters across three pages. He asked for the exact sound of my name, and smiled at me happily. "I am putting at the end," he said, "your name in Chinese. To Miss Strong, from Wu Pei Fu." Then he called for a seal and placed his small red official stamp in the corner.

It is hard to translate a Chinese poem. It lacks tenses and connecting words and is chiefly a succession of symbols. I had three translators and the best we made of it was this:

"The clouds hanging over Europe and Asia
Have thousands and thousands of changes;
But the work of a hero is the same now as in the past.
The flowers blossom in the third moon (spring-time)
And the fortunate man is found at the peak of Fenglai."

Fenglai is the birthplace of Wu Pei Fu; it is also by Chinese literary tradition the haunt of fairies. Thus delicately he indicated that his life was fortunate. But was he indicating more? Was he prophesying a definite month, this spring?

It did not occur to me at the time. I was interested chiefly in the sudden change in Wu's manner—at the easy friendliness and smiling charm which had replaced the bored officialdom. I ventured once again. "Wouldn't you really rather," I asked, "be up in the mountains writing poems and painting pictures, than down here in a barrack organizing an army?"

"It doesn't matter," said Wu, again smiling slightly. He was the sincere Confucian, believing in the middle path, the harmonious way, the preserving of the five chief human relations and their duties with constant poise in solitude or in battle. He was captain of his own soul, after the best traditions of old China.

TIME MUST TEST MUSSOLINI POLICIES, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

looking to labor and not to agitation as an outlet for their energies and as a basis for their hopes. Production is increasing—the export trade is improving—the budget has been balanced. America has been satisfied and altogether the industrial and financial outlook is better than it has been since the war.

Other Countries Want a Mussolini.

All this is having its effect outside Italy. In France, in Germany and even in parliamentary Britain, there is a growing fashion in speech and oratory of demanding a Mussolini for this and a Mussolini for that. Lord Inchcape, a great Liberal peer, writes to a Tory paper to call for "a Mussolini of finance." If the coal negotiations end in a lockout and a great industrial struggle is precipitated, the name of Mussolini will be on many British lips. The Fascist example will be cited and commended, first in private and ultimately in public, by thousands who never in their hearts believed in liberty and maybe by millions who prefer a quiet life even to freedom. The same success and the same symptoms and the same vogue characterized the opening years of the Second Empire.

If it continues, the reign of Fascism is secure in Italy for many years to come and its triumph will be a constant menace to free institutions elsewhere. But if the industrial weather breaks in Italy there will be trouble, for whilst the industrial classes there undoubtedly acquiesce in the present regime, they have never really accepted it. The fate of democratic institutions in Europe will be very much in the balance during the coming years. The European world is by no means yet safe for democracy.

The immediate preoccupation of European statesmanship, however, is not so much with domestic affairs of the Fascist Government but with the developments of Fascismo in the arena of foreign policy. To recur to the analogy of the Second Empire, all the foreign offices are asking either "What is he up to?" or "What will he do next?"

Mussolini has set himself to revive the imperial spirit of ancient Rome and he is succeeding almost too well for the tranquillity of his neighbors. When he threatens to march his armies across the Dolomites, Germany is uneasy—when he talks of the destiny of Italy being on the sea, France must feel some disquiet. The Tripolitan visit was not meant to be merely a glittering pageant to enable the Duce to show off. It has a real purpose. It is intended to rouse the old Roman sentiment in favor of expansion beyond the seas and frontiers. The empire has passed from the Roman to the Greek, to the Goth, the French, the Spaniard and the Briton. Mussolini means to restore its throne to Italy. His speech at Tripoli is ominous:

"It is not without significance that I draw an augury from that sea whose history is so closely associated with that of ancient Rome and that I am conscious, all around me, of the Italian race, soldiers, colonists and pioneers. Comrades, let us turn our thoughts to that Italy of the past from which sprang the strong Italy which is ever spurred on toward the sure triumph of tomorrow."

The man who laughs at his boasts as if they were the idle bravado of a mere poseur may not have to live long ere he finds that a dream which is adopted as a vision by a brave and hardworking race of 40,000,000, with a glorious tradition behind them, may become a reality which overshadows the peace of nations. If Signor Mussolini is content with diverting the stream of Italy's surplus population toward fertilizing the rich Mediterranean lands left desolate by Turkish rule, not only Italy but mankind may well feel grateful that this dreamer of dreams has arisen in this generation to rule Italy.

Let us hope that, if he confines his ambition to the restoration of productiveness of the blighted shores of the Mediterranean, he will not be frustrated by the foolish envy of other nations. The best way of keeping the awakened genius of Italian imperialism out of mischief is to turn it to raise corn in the barren lands.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

Mexico's Hopes and Progress Set Forth by Its Ambassador

supply the industries of these states and supplement the supply power of Mexico City. Work upon this gigantic project has begun. To complete it will require huge additional appropriations and years of labor. The plan of the Calles administration is to pay as it builds.

Paying of National Debt Is Arranged.

Mexican railways were taken over by the Government of Carranza in 1915 and operated by the Government until Jan. 1 of the present year, at which time operation was restored to private companies. The Mexican Government owns 51 per cent of the stock in all the Mexican roads. Much of the remainder is owned by American banks. The decision to restore them to private operations was reached after conferences between Alberto Pani, Minister of Finance, and Thomas J. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., representing the minority stockholders. As the majority stockholder, however, the Federal Government can regulate the affairs of the roads as it desires.

Mexico has also made plans to pay its foreign debt. Approximately $35,000,000 in bonds are outstanding, and during the period of wars and revolutions the interest was in default. Since the first of the year the Mexican Government has been sending monthly installments, to be distributed through the house of Morgan, to the creditors.

"There," concluded Ambassador Tellez, "I have given you a brief sketch of what we have done, what we are doing, and what we propose to do, in my country. For the first time in her history Mexico has a Government that is honest, efficient and progressive. We are trying to improve the condition and well being of everybody, and more particularly of the poorer classes, who have been neglected and exploited from time immemorial.

"The only aim and preoccupation of the Calles administration is to make a large number of Mexicans happy. I can say to you that there are vastly more happy people in my country today than ever before."

MAN WHO SAVED 1000 DIES

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 17.—John F. Gillooly, 70 years old, veteran life-saver, who is estimated to have saved more than 1000 lives, died here today. His two score or more years' service at the falls of the Ohio River here was recognized by special acts of Congress and the Kentucky Assembly. Heart disease brought death to the life guard, who until he was retired in 1917, was in charge of the United States Coast Guard life station here.

Gillooly and his rescue workers were said to have been the first to cross the Miami River during the Dayton, O., flood of 1913.

COUNTY FARM TAXES IN CASE OF CITY EXPANSION

Figures Compiled by Post-Dispatch Give Idea of Actual Effect Under Varying Conditions.

OFFICIAL RECORDS BASIS OF ESTIMATES

Merger Might Mean Levy of $65 a Year More on the Average Tract of 80 Acres.

One of the chief arguments of St. Louis County opponents of the city-county merger plan of city members of the oBard of Freeholders is that it would bring about prohibitive taxes on farm lands. Comparative computations by the Post-Dispatch given here, the first to be made public after an abstract discussion, offers an idea of the actual effect under varying conditions. The merger might mean $65 a year added in taxes on the average farm of 80 acres.

The city proposal, which requires only the signature of one county freeholder to be submitted to the local voters, and which may instead be put before voters of the State as an initiative proposition next November, says: "Provision shall be made by ordinance for graduation of the rate of taxation for city purposes in the portions of the enlarged city now included in the present county; the rate of taxation for city purposes on farm lands in such portions of the enlarged city shall not exceed one-half of the total rate."

As the basis of its computations the Post-Dispatch found in official records that $158 was the average assessment per acre for land and improvements of all acreage property in the county, which includes large and small country estates but comprises farms for the most part. Eighty acres may be considered a fair average size for county farms, especially since there are few individual places having hundreds of acres and the county's character is fast turning from rural to suburban. Hence the assessment of an average farm is $12,640, admitedly somewhat below true value.

School Tax Rates Vary.

Conty tax rates vary with the school districts, as each district fixes its own rate. School rates in the 71 rural school districts vary from 20 cents to $1.55 on the $100 valuation, the average being 56 cents. Adding the county and State tax rates, the average rate used in this computation was $1.43. This includes a 1-cent increase in the State rate announced yesterday.

With this preliminary information, the results follow, in terms of annual taxes on this average farm:

At present average rural rate and present assessment $180.75.

At proposed reduced city rate and present assessment, $245.84, an increase of $65.09 a year.

At proposed reduced city rate and double the present assessment (since opponents argue a city Assessor might increase valuations), $491.68.

At 1926 city rate of St. Louis, $2.58, and present assessment by the county (since opponents argue that the reduced rate might be unconstitutional), $326.11.

At present St. Louis rate and double the present county assessment, $652.22.

Reduction Might Be More.

It has been pointed out in the Board of Freeholders that the reduction of the rate for city purposes on farm land might be more than the minimum of one-half the full rate, as provided in the merger proposal. The foregoing computations were on the basis of a reduction of one-half, but if a greater reduction should be decided on by the Board of Aldermen the increases in farm taxes would be smaller.

When the city freeholders point to their graduated tax scheme as a safeguard for county farmers their opponents argue that assessments might be higher under a municipal regime, with the Assessor appointed by a Mayor elected largely by an urban population. The proponents answer that the human factor of fairness must be relied upon, saying that Assessors do not consider various elements making up the value of property. They add that as metropolitan improvements are extended into the county there will be a natural increase of values.

The computation of a doubled assessment on the average farm is by way of being an extreme possibility, since it is doubtful if any land at present is assessed at only half value. Statistics recently prepared for a county freeholder show 1583 acres of farms and truck gardens within the city limits now are assessed at $120 to $2500 an acre, mostly at more than $500, but urgan location of these tracts gives them a high potential value.

Sharp Difference of Opinion.

There is a sharp difference of opinion between city and county freeholders as to legality of the city members' reduced tax scheme, which some of the lawyers in the county group attack as unconstitutional. A constitutional amendment might be suggested to remove the doubt of its legality.

Carrying the computations to the case of a farm of small value, where the owner may have a hard time making both ends meet, a certain 90-acre farm in the Meramec River Valley in the western part of Bonhomme Township, was selected. It is assessed at $2290, and with a present tax rate of $1.46, the annual taxes are $33.43. Under the proposed reduced city rate and present assessment taxes would be $44.54—an increase of $11.11—or $89.08 with a doubled assessment. At the city rate of $2.58 and present assessment the taxes would be $59.08.

In the case of another certain

WOMAN DIES AFTER BEING HIT BY AUTO

Driver Held for Coroner; Forty-Ninth Auto Fatality of Year.

Mrs. Anna Rickert, 53 years od, of 1324 Graham street, died at St. John's Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull suffered when struck by an automobile while crossing the street in front of 4345 Manchester avenue, Thursday. The car was driven by Herman Schachner of 1919 Withnell avenue.

Schachner was arrested shortly after the accident, but was released on bond. He was ordered rearrested yesterday and held for Coroner's investigation.

The death of Mrs. Rickert is the forty-ninth automobile fatality this year, one more than occurred during the same period last year. Mrs. Rickert is survived by her husband, Frank.

CIVIC BODIES PROMISE TO HELP BARRACKS HORSE SHOW

Series of Events to Interest Children to Be Among Features This Year.

Promoters of the annual Military and Civilian Horse Show, to be held at Jefferson Barracks May 21, 22 and 23, announce they have been assured the active assistance of leading civic organizations to make the show a success. Representatives of the Associated Retailers, the Downtown Business Men's Association and the St. Louis Horse Show Association have pledged their organizations in this respect.

Among special features to be given this year will be a series of events to interest children, who will be invited to attend as guests of the committee in charge of the show.

The social features will include a hunt breakfast following a fox chase over the military reservation as a morning event, and an evening outdoor dinner dance. The show will end with a dress parade of the Sixth Infantry Regiment.

21 Victories for Westminster.

FULTON, Mo., April 17.—Westminster College last night defeated Culver Stockton of Canton by a unanimous decision by taking the affirmative side of the child labor question. This makes 21 consecutive victories for Westminster against universities and colleges. This was the first debate this year for Morton Cunningham of Fulton. Ransom Comfort of Webster Groves and William Haley of Louisiana, Mo., who represented Westminster.

COUNTY FARM TAXES IN CASE OF CITY EXPANSION

farm, comprising 449 acres of diversified uses, in the Valley Park school district, where sale values of land are good, under an assessment of $22,920, or about $35 an acre, and a tax rate of $1.96, the annual taxes re $449.23. Under the proposed reduced city rate and present assessment taxes would be $445.79—an actual saving of $3.44—or $891.58 with a doubled assessment. At the present city rate of $2.57 and present assessment, taxes would be $541.33.

Example of Suburban Home.

To illustrate what might happen in the suburbs under annexation, take the case of a certain house in Webster Groves, in the picturesque Webster Park section. The tax rate is $4. This house and lot are assessed at $6230, plainly below their worth. The present taxes are $249.20. Under the merger plan, at the city tax rate of $2.58, they would be $160.73, a saving of $88.47. If the assessment should be doubled the taxes would be $321.46.

The tax provision of the city merger proposal may be clarified to show plainly that by "rate for city purposes" is means the $1 charged as a city and the 35 cents charged as a county, minus 8 cents set apart by statute for the art museum, zoo and public library, or $1.27, and to show that by "one-half the total rate" is meant one-half the total for city purposes, or 63½ cents.

St. Louis planned to renew its $2.57 rate for 1926, but the 1-cent State increase will make it $2.58. Cutting the portion for city purposes in half, this rate as it would apply to county farms would be $1.94½. In the county the tax rate, aside from that for schools, has been 86 cents.

The county has 3416 farms with a total acreage of 192,969. Its whole area is 307,840 acres. The farm land was assessed last year at $29,654,250, plus $10,085,440 for improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. David Randolph Calhoun Leave for Honeymoon in Europe

Miss Lucy Whitelaw Terry Becomes Bride at Stately Wedding Before Altar in Canvas Marquise Adjoining Home.

AT sundown of a beautiful spring day Miss Lucy Whitelaw Terry, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Todd Terry of 5231 Westminster place, became the bride yesterday of David Randolph Calhoun, son of Mrs. Luigi Signorini of Rome, Italy, and the late D. R. Calhoun of St. Louis. The service was read in a smilax-lined canvas marquise built adjoining the Terry home, by the Rev. Father Thompson of the New Cathedral. Tall silver standards of Easter lilies gave a stately touch to the improvised altar and white satin cushions covered the prie Dieu.

The bride wore ivory satin fashioned on slender princess lines to the knees where it flared with a drapery of satin and point d'Alencon lace. Long tight mousquetaire sleeves were finished by loose flowing cuffs of the lace extending to the elbow, and more lace of the same pattern edged the Jenny neck and the waist-length cape depending from the shoulders in back. From beneath the cape hung the soft folds of a long court train, entirely covered by a simple tulle veil worn to her hair with a coronet of point d'Alencon lace. Clusters of orange blossoms dotted the veil and she carried a shower bouquet centered with orchids.

A bevy of young women with whom the bride made her debut two years ago attended her. Miss Rachel Lee Cuendet was maid of honor, and Miss Frances Collins, Miss Eleanor Simmons, Miss Trimble Hoblitzelle, Miss Virginia Simmons of New York, Miss Marie Nugent, and Mrs. Marion Niedringhaus, formerly Miss Grace Whitelaw Wallace, a cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids. They wore Lanvin models of Lanvin blue chiffon, made similarly with close bodices embroidered about the neck with pearls and sapphires and circular flounced skirts. Loose chiffon draperies were caught at the shoulders with sapphire buckles in lieu of sleeves, and they wore blue chiffon headdresses fastened at one side with diamond pins. Their flowers were Claudius Pernet roses and blue delphinium combined with spring flowers tied with Pernet tinted ribbon.

Donaldson Lambert was best man and Frank Overton Watts Jr., Henry Mudd Cook, Kenneth Drummond, Asa Brookings Wallace, Paul Moser, Calhoun Jones, Harry E. Papin Jr., George Love and Whitelaw Terry, brother of the bride, groomsmen.

A reception for the several hundred fashionably gowned guests followed, for which lower rooms of the house proper were embellished in spring flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun have departed for New York to sail Wednesday on the Berengaria for Europe, and will take possession of their apartment in the Claridge upon their return in three months.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Signorini, who will depart in a few days to sail for their home; Miss Ruth Keeley of Chicago, who is visiting Miss Elizabeth Luyties; Paul McBride, also of Chicago, and Dan Mulkins of Detroit.

Mrs. Calhoun is a graduate of Mary Institute and the Westover School in Connecticut, and is a member of the Junior League and the Imperial. Mr. Calhoun is an alumnus of the University of Virginia and a member of the St. Louis Country, University and Racquet clubs.

MISS JANICE FELDMAN, who is to be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Marion Laessig and Dr. Otto St. Clair Krebs April 28. —Ashen-Brenner.

of Boston, formerly of St. Louis. She is visiting her daughter, Miss Ruth, and her son, Landsen McCandless in St. Louis. —Ashen-Brenner.

Announcement of the betrothal of Miss Frances Collins, daughter of Mrs. H. Blaksley Collins of 50 Portland place, and Henry Mudd Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cook Jr. of 3 Hortense place, was made at an informal afternoon tea given last Sunday by Mrs. Collins for Miss Lucy Terry for whom Miss Collins was bridesmaid last evening at her marriage to David Randolph Calhoun.

Miss Collins is a graduate of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and spent a year in Italy attending school. She made her debut two years ago at a ball at the St. Louis Country Club and became a member of the Junior League and the Imperial. Lawnin of 5138 Washington boulevard, landed in New York yesterday on the Berengeria after a several months' trip abroad, and will return to St. Louis tomorrow. Missourians in Europe Enjoying Spring Festivities

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, France, April 8.—With the Easter holidays out of the way, Paris has entered joyously into its gay spring season which continues now without interruption to the Grande Semaine in June. The mid-week and week-end dinner-dances at the Ritz, the barometer of social activities, have taken on added brilliance and scores of new faces are seen at each succeeding one. Galas at Ciro's, the Claridge and "dancings" at the score and one fashionable rendezvous that radiate from the Place de l'Opera are crowded, presaging an early migration of the elite to the more select oases in the Bois de Boulogne.

The tea-dance this week at the American Women's Club of Paris attracted even more than the usual attendance and was notable for several parties being entertained by members of the club. Missouri people were prominent. Dr. and Mrs. James E. Harding of St. Louis and Paris were entertaining Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Gunther, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Webb of St. Louis, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Brigham, Vicomte Tcheriadieff and C. B. Todd. Mrs.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. Brady of St. Augustine Church, Larchmont, and was followed by a reception and dinner in the Louis XV ballroom of the hotel for 250 guests. The Italian Garden and ballroom were decorated in white and yellow. Baskets of spring flowers with yellow callas and forsythia were attractively hung on the side walls of the garden, while the ceilings were festooned with Palm Beach smilax. The aisle posts were made of white roses and smilax. The bower for the bridal party was composed of cybodium ferns, tall palms with showers of white roses festooned fro mthe ceiling, and at the base of the altar were masses of Pernet roses and Easter lilies. On the bridal table there was a large wedding cake surrounded by lilies of the valley, smilax and maidenhair ferns, and on the guest tables antique bowls of spring flowers.

The bride wore a gown of white charmeuse made with a full skirt with crescents of chiffon embroidered in seed pearls and silver, and fitted bodice of charmeuse with V neck and long, tight tulle mosquitaire sleeves. A court train of satin, lined with silver cloth, depending from the shoulders, was covered by a rose point lace veil combined with tulle and worn with orange blossoms. She carried orchids and liles of the valley.

Mrs. F. Duval Broun of Mamaroneck, N. Y., matron of honor, wore yellow chiffon, yellow picture hat, and carried orchids and yellow roses. Miss Kathleen Bernardin of Evansville, Ind., a cousin of the bride, maid of honor, was gowned in chartreuse chiffon with a picture hat of straw and carried a bouquet of orchids of the same shade as her gown.

The bridesmaids were: Miss Alice Watkins, sister of the groom; Miss Edna Mae Starling of Dallas, Tex.; Miss Dorothy Kane, Miss Marie Clarkson of St. Louis, Miss Florence Cross and Miss Dorothea Kibbe of New York.

They wore gowns of green chiffon and picture hats of straw to match. Edward Stuart Paterson of Cleveland, O., a cousin of the bridegroom was best man, and the ushers were Paul J. Fitzpatrick, Walter E. Rupprecht, Walter R. Mohr, William J. Fullen, Louis M. Hann, Roger W. Patterson and Harold A. Content.

A gray straw picture hat trimmed in silver leaves, completed the costume. The Paulist choir of 50 sang the bridal chorus from "The Rose Maiden Cantata," by Cowen.

Vacation Time Plans Delayed In Washington

Official Circles of Society Await Announcement of White House Program Before Deciding Upon Own Movements.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—President and Mrs. Coolidge have not yet decided upon a summer White House and official society is waiting for this announcement before making its own vacation plans. There seems to be little chance now of the Coolidges spending this summer on the North Shore as New England is too filled with painful reminders for President Coolidge just now. Hundreds of offers of summer homes have been made to the President since it became known that he was not returning to Swampscott this year.

John Coolidge, who spent his Easter leave with his parents, departed Thursday for Amherst where he is a sophomore. Most of the other children of official families also have returned to their schools.

Washington society is losing one of its most gifted diplomatic bachelors this week in the departure of Baron Plessen of the German Embassy, who has the added distinction of being the grandson of Bismarck. Baron Plessen will go to San Francisco to sail late next week for the Orient where he will spend two or three months.

Mrs. Ralph Lozier, wife of Representative Lozier of Missouri, has written a new song, "Sweet Mother of Mine," which was sung at the luncheon of the National Capitol Musical Club, Wednesday. This song has become very popular in official circles in Washington.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who is president of the Girl Scouts of America, was the host for Mrs. Coolidge at the opening of the new Girl Scouts coffee shop on F street northwest on Tuesday. Mrs. Coolidge, who is honorary president of the Girl Scouts, ate the first waffle cooked there and drank the first cup of coffee and thus gave the little enterprise a flourishing start.

Little Pauline Longworth, the year-old daughter of the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Longworth, visited her father at the Capitol on Monday where she held a reception in the Speaker's lobby, many of the House leaders leaving the floor to greet the lively child who is best described as "All Roosevelt." Paulina cut a new tooth last week and the Speaker was kept busy exhibiting it to his friends.

Major-General and Mrs. Harry Taylor entertained at dinner Wednesday night in honor of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis.

Miss Cynthia Davis, daughter of Secretary and Mrs. Davis, who was in Washington with her parents for the Easter vacation, has returned to St. Timothy's School, Baltimore.

Mrs. George A. Williams, wife of Senator Williams of Missouri; Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton, wife of Representative Newton of St. Louis; Mrs. Leonidas Dyer, Miss Clara Sproul, Mrs. Thomas Stirling and Mrs. Thomas H. Baker were among the guests at the luncheon by Mrs. Edwards Hays, wife of former Representative Hays, Wednesday, at the Congressional Country Club.

Mrs. Breckinridge Long took an active part in the card party given for the benefit of the Episcopal Home for Children at the Roosevelt Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Joshua Evans Jr. is one of the leaders in arrangements for the banquet of the Columbian Women of George Washington University, to be held this week at the Chevy Chase Club. Mme. Blanche Arral, Opera Star, Finds In Java New Way To Reduce

Javanese Women

Grand Opera Star Reduces

34 Pounds in 4 Weeks Without Drugs, Diet or Exercise

The secret of the Javanese women's slender beauty is out at last. The method by which Madam Arral reduced so surprisingly has been used in Java for years.

It is simple and harmless, yet thoroughly scientific. No medicines, starvation diets, violent exercises—no Turkish baths, dangerous purging nor reducing garments.

This method, it is said, removes fat at the rate of about one pound a day and at the same time strengthens the body and benefits the general health.

"The results were astonishing," says Mme. Arral. "Just this pleasant simple native treatment took away my surplus flesh, restored my voice and my health. Today my mind is clear and buoyant, and I truly feel as though I had stepped from a hazy darkness into bright, glorious sunlight.

"I had previously tried, I believe, every method of flesh reductions known to medical science. I used drugs, starvation diets, purging, rolling, paddling, exercising, long walks, special garments, etc., but they did me more harm than good."

When Blanche Arral appeared in this country some time ago she was so stout that only her marvelous voice kept her from being actually amusing in such roles as Carmen and Juliet.

She has returned from abroad with a figure as beautiful as her voice. The transformation is amazing. She has reduced 34 pounds, lost a double chin and looks 15 years younger.

"I had gained flesh, oh, so rapidly," says Mme. Arral. "I was ashamed to appear on the stage. Fat made my health miserable and affected my voice. I was dull, heavy, stupid, unable to digest food or sleep.

"Finally while touring Australia my health broke down completey, my voice failed and I was obliged to take a long rest. I went for a vacation to the little island of Java, where, at the hands of a Javanese priest, I found a complete cure."

In response to a deluge of requests for information regarding this wonderful method, Mme. Arral has written a charming little book about her experience in Java, and how she got rid of excess fat by this method which can be practiced at home by anyone.

"For a short time a copy of this book will be sent free to anyone who desires to reduce. Send name and address to Blanche Arral, Suite 834-E., 35 E. Flagler St., Miami, Fla.

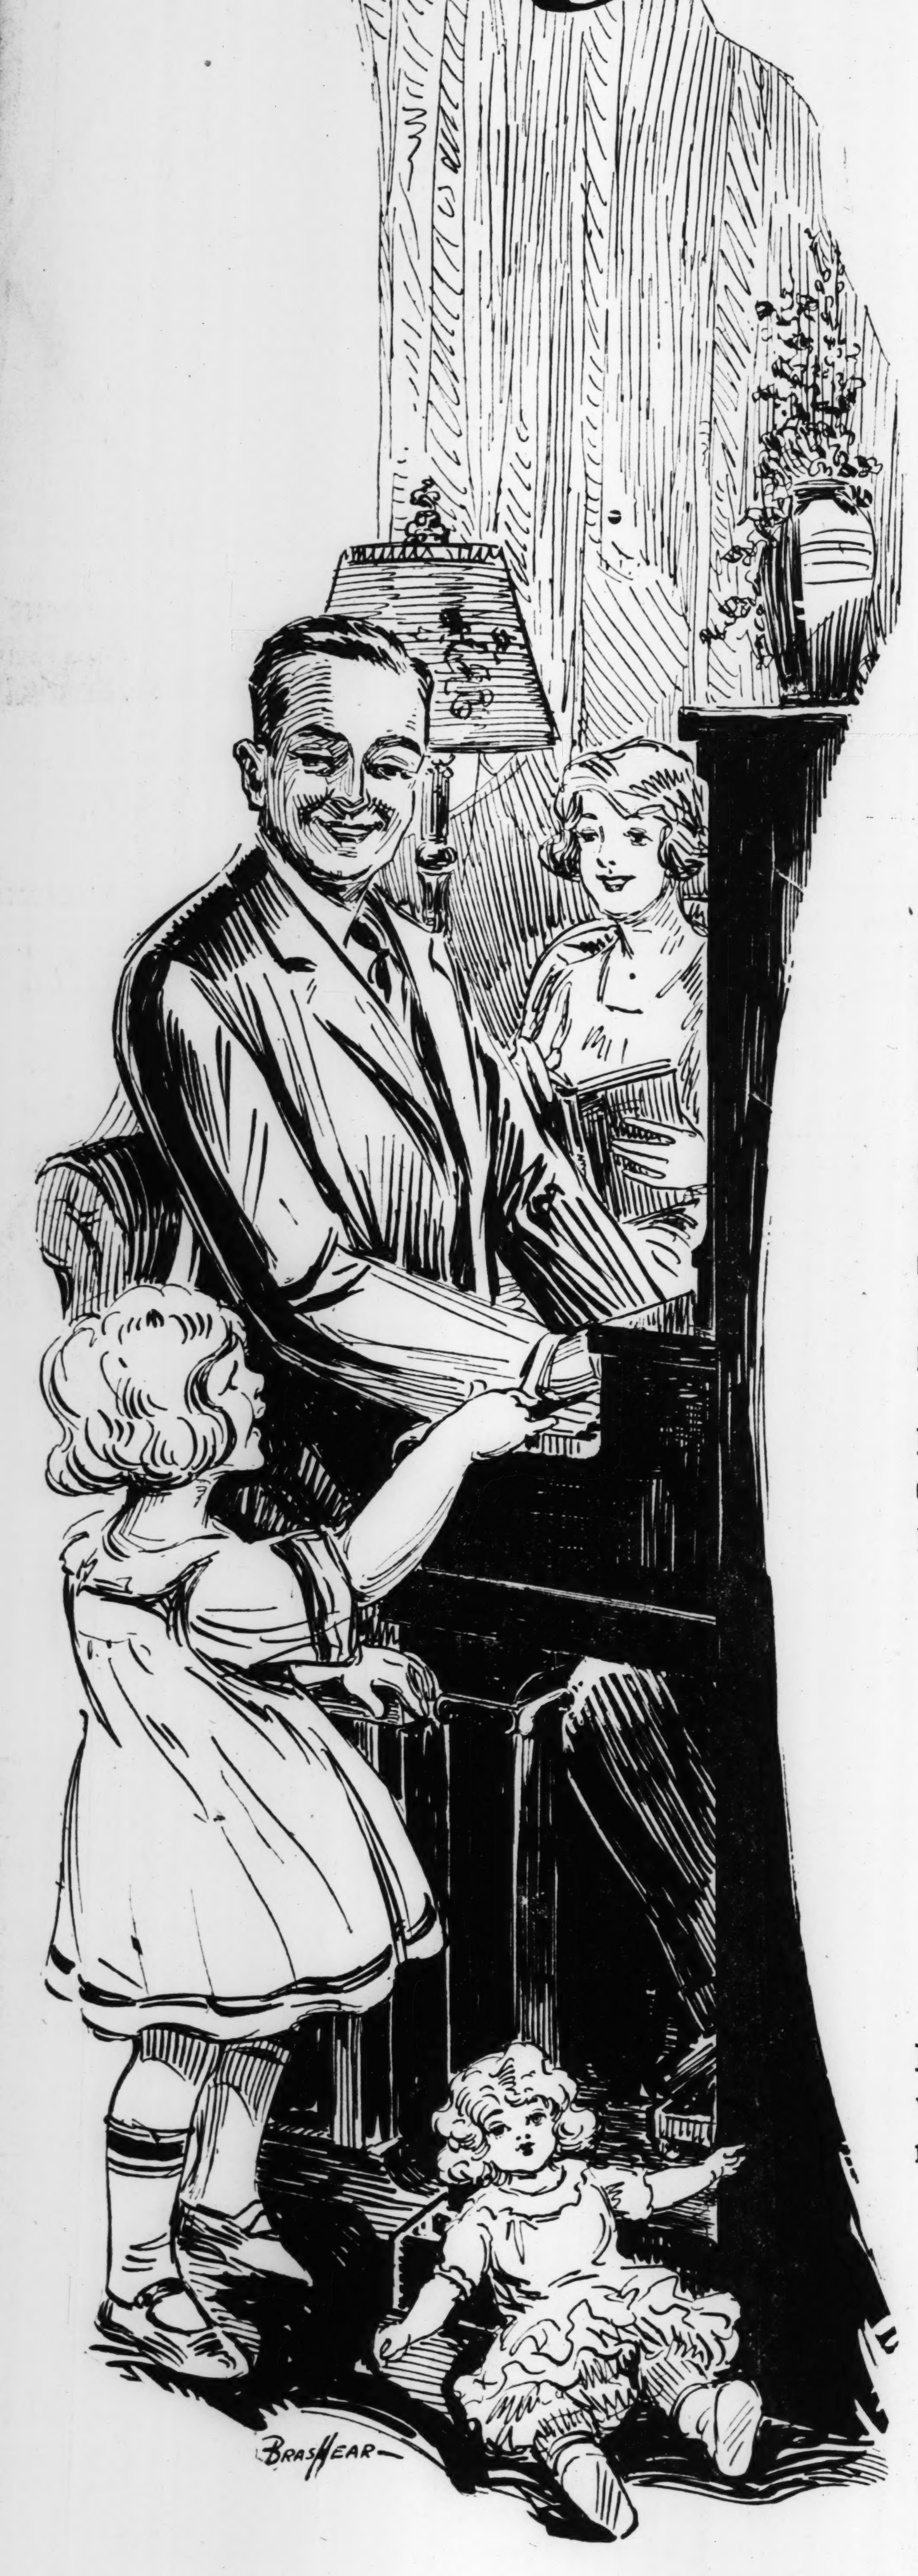
Play More Music



The creative genius which gave the world the

has brought more happiness to American homes than any other achievement of the age

TRULY this is the day of wonders! There appears to be everything conceivable for convenience and comfort.

But for that uplifting of the spirit and that marvelous joy in the heart engendered by music, the Player-Piano stands alone in the contemporary progress of refinement as all powerful, all persuasive.

Stop to think! Anyone untrained, even uninformed, in the technique of Piano playing may sit down to a Player-Piano and play any of the more than five thousand musical compositions to be had on Player-Piano Rolls.

Included in this extraordinary repertory is every piece of music of real worth ever composed—

Classical Operatic Sacred Heart Songs Nursery Tunes Dances
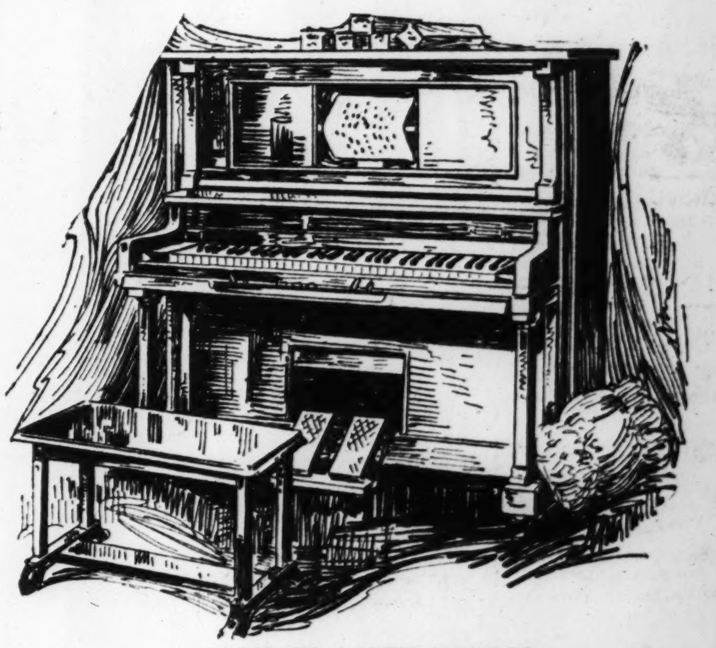
Popular Songs Marches
Ballads Patriotic
Symphonies Overtures

In such manner has the Player-Piano blessed wellnigh countless homes with the glory of music.

The Player-Piano may be hand played, just as is the Piano. The action and tone are identical. The player feature in no wise interferes with the value of playing by hand. It is the addition to the Piano which enables anyone to play any piece with accuracy and expression.



THE PLAYER-PIANO
Ready for Playing by Anybody at Any Time

If you have a Piano silent because there is no longer anybody to play it for you, buy a Player-Piano. An equitable allowance will be made for your present instrument as part payment

If you have no Piano, buy a Player-Piano and thus let every member of your family enjoy the full pleasure and happiness of music played by you in your home.

Buy a Player-Piano

Go to any established Piano Store and you will find a Player-Piano of standard make to suit your requirements. If you have a Piano or Phonograph you would like to trade in, it will be fairly appraised

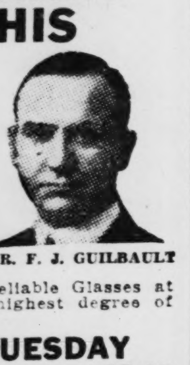
YOUR BANKER WARNS YOU AGAINST THIS



DR. F. J. GUILBAULT

When you ask your banker about an investment, promising fabulous returns, he warns you against it. Experience teaches that, generally speaking, an investment which promises returns over 6% is speculative, and to be avoided by the man or woman of moderate means.

Likewise in purchasing Glasses purporting to be worth $5, $7.50 or $10 and offered for $1—there is too great a risk as to their quality, as well as to the competency of the person testing your eyes—you simply can't afford to gamble with your eyes, which unlike money, can never be replaced.

I have been practicing my profession in St. Louis for over 20 years and have always sold reliable Glasses at the lowest possible prices consistent with the highest degree of professional skill.

NERVOUS INDIGESTION

IF YOUR nerves are not strong and calm your digestion cannot be right, for your nerves govern digestion. Nervous indigestion is the beginning of a long line of serious disorders, especially auto-intoxication, which means poisoning of the blood through putrefaction of undigested foods.

If you have nervous indigestion, with belching, gas, bloating, etc., do not try to dodge the trouble by dieting, but look to your nerves.

My 64-page book entitled "NERVE FORCE" discusses this vital subject in detail and explains in simple language how we strain our nerves, paralyze the vital organs and what we must do to restore them to normal condition. The cost of the book, prepaid, is only 25 cents, coin or stamps.

This book is not a catch-penny pamphlet. It is a dignified treatise, free from exaggerations and "bunk." It is on file in many Public libraries, sanitarium libraries, and at the National Medical Library at Washington, D. C. Over 1,000,000 copies have been sold in past years. Whether or not you have trouble with your nerves and stomach, you should read this book, which you may do at my risk. If it does not meet your fullest expectations, your money will be refunded, plus your outlay for postage. Or, you may pay for the book after you have read it. So send for this book today. Manager of Automobile Club of Missouri Inspects Airline Route to Kansas City.

Matt. F. The total mileage of the airline highway connecting St. Louis and Kansas City, as recorded by the speedometer of the official road car of the automobile club, is 265.4 miles from the St. Louis headquarters of the Automobile Club of Missouri to the headquarters of the Kansas City Automobile Club. The distance from St. Louis to the city limits of Kansas City, is 261.7 miles, allowing 3.7 miles between the city limits an dthe Kansas City Automobile Club headquarters.

Of this mileage, Morse found that there are 215.7 miles of concrete road and 49.7 miles of macadam and gravel. The macadam stretches were characterized by Morse as being as much all-weather highway as the concrete.

Morse found that with the opening of the new bridge and slab stretches at Perche Creek, just west of Columbia, a fill that caused considerable trouble in inclement weather, and was the worst stretch on Highway No. 2, has been eliminated. With this stretch in use, there are only two places on No. 2 that might be considered difficult of passage in any kind of weather.

REPORTS STATE HIGHWAY NO. 2 IN GOOD CONDITION

Manager of Automobile Club of Missouri Inspects Airline Route to Kansas City.

Matt. F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, after the completion yesterday of an investigation tour of Highway No. 2, between St. Louis and Kansas City, issued a statement today revealing in detail the condition of this highway and denying rumors that this highway is not a travelable road.

The total mileage of the airline highway connecting St. Louis and Kansas City, as recorded by the speedometer of the official road car of the automobile club, is 265.4 miles from the St. Louis headquarters of the Automobile Club of Missouri to the headquarters of the Kansas City Automobile Club. The distance from St. Louis to the city limits of Kansas City, is 261.7 miles, allowing 3.7 miles between the city limits an dthe Kansas City Automobile Club headquarters.

Of this mileage, Morse found that there are 215.7 miles of concrete road and 49.7 miles of macadam and gravel. The macadam stretches were characterized by Morse as being as much all-weather highway as the concrete.

Morse found that with the opening of the new bridge and slab stretches at Perche Creek, just west of Columbia, a fill that caused considerable trouble in inclement weather, and was the worst stretch on Highway No. 2, has been eliminated. With this stretch in use, there are only two places on No. 2 that might be considered difficult of passage in any kind of weather.

The first of these stretches is just east of High Hill where, owing to construction work, there remains a gap of .4 of a mile in the concrete.

The second is at Mineola. There it is necessary to cross and recross the new right-of-way which is being graded, and also a short run around at the new bridge in Mineola now under construction.

At Mulky underpass, 3.7 miles west of Concordia, there is another stretch of .4 of a mile under construction. But all possibility of a car becoming mired in inclement weather has been eliminated by building a unique wood trough upon which the motorist's car so runs that it cannot slip off, the center part of the trough being built up six inches to hold the automobile wheels on the wood roadway.

The activity of the Highway Department is generally noticeable, Morse said. In eight places along the road he found crews of highway employes busily engaged in cutting away the clay shoulders.

"I am convinced," said Morse, "that the road from St. Louis to Kansas City over the airline highway can be negotiated easily by any careful and prudent driver and that is the only type of person who should be permitted on highways. Having received reports from many sources that the road cannot be negotiated in inclement weather, I have personally ascertained that any such rumors reaching persons desiring to make the trip can be discounted."

AERIAL TRAMWAY TO TOP OF HIGHEST PEAK IN COUNTRY PLANNED

PLANS are under way to build an aerial tramway to the top of Mount Whitney, which is 14,501 feet high and is the loftiest peak in the United States. The project, conceived by Cooper Shapley, consulting engineer, of Bishop, Cal., will be started soon, it is said.

Plans call for a five-mile overhead cable line linking a station nine miles from Lone Pine and the summit of the peak. The line will be in the Inyo National Forest and permission of the Federal Government has been obtained. The mountain terminal will be about 200 miles from Los Angeles.

LOSS OF 25,000 LICENSES LIKELY IN NEW YORK IN 1926

Motor Vehicle Commissioner Expects to Penalize Twice as Many Drivers as Last Year.

More than 25,000 automobile drivers in New York State will lose their licenses this year because of carelessness, incompetence or intoxication. This is the prediction of State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Charles A. Harnett, writing in the Long Island Auto Courier, the monthly magazine of the Long Island Automobile Club. An article outlining his policies, entitled "Careless Drivers Must Lose Licenses," has the leading place in the April issue of the magazine, which has just made its appearance.

Safeguarding of the highways, according to Commissioner Harnett, is the chief purpose of the licensing system, rather than the raising of revenue. He holds that the power of the State to take careless drivers off the roads by withdrawing their licenses should be enforced sternly. He makes the interesting point that no automobile club has ever interceded in behalf of a driver in a revocation case. In his article he says:

One Effective Remedy.

"From the beginning of my connection with motor vehicle work I have never been able to view as a matter of vital importance, the financial side of the question so far as the State is concerned. I have always believed that the chief—the paramount—function of governmental supervision of the operation of motor vehicles is the reduction of the accidents due to careless or incompetent drivers and the accompanying loss of life and limb.

"To accomplish any reduction in these accidents something must be done with the careless or incompe-

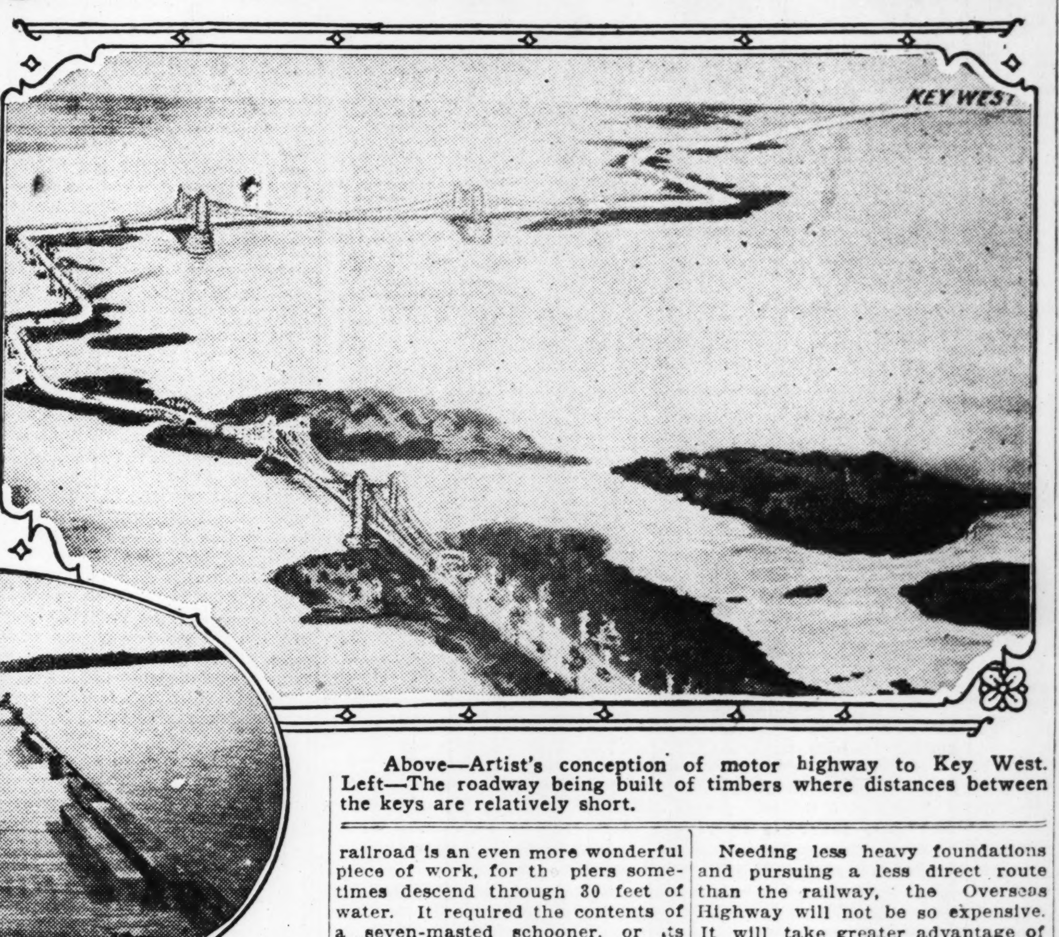
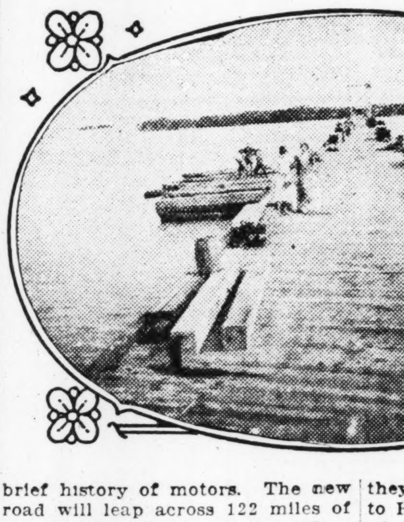
Rapid Progress on Road Over Ocean

Inspection of completed stretches of the Overseas Highway which is to connect the Florida mainland with Key West by a motor road 122 miles long warrants the belief that it will be opened to automobiles by the winter of 1928. By that time the new road from Knoxville, Tenn., through the Great Smoky Mountains to Asheville, N. C., should have been in use for some months. Completion of these two highways will mean that Missouri motorists will be able to motor through the finest scenery of the South, over the keys and tidal passes off the coast of Florida, ferry at Key West to Havana, Cuba, and then motor 600 miles farther to Santiago de Cuba.

By HAMILTON M. WRIGHT.





Above—Artist's conception of motor highway to Key West. Left—The roadway being built of timbers where distances between the keys are relatively short.

I have just been over a completed section of the most wonderful automobile road projected in the brief history of motors. The new road will leap across 122 miles of ocean, where tides and the Atlanthe Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean. It will cross the greatest fishing tidal grounds in the world, coral-studded seas and swift tidal passes, and isles filled with the fruits, palms and flowers of the West Indies. It will connect the island of Key West with the Florida mainland. When this road is completed, and its completion is expected in two and one-half years, motorists will be able to motor from Maine to Key West. Then, taking a six to seven-hour journey, they will be able to ferry their cars to Havana and ride over the roads of Cuba to Santiago de Cuba, 700 miles from Havana.

Recalls Another Great Feat.

The only feat to which the new overseas road can be compared is the building of the Florida East Coast Railway to Key West by the late Henry M. Flagler. The railroad, completed in 1912, cost $50,000,000. In one section of the line is the Long Key viaduct, a solid piece of concrete in imposing arches that raise the track 30 feet above the limit of high tide.

The Bahia Honda bridge on this railroad is an even more wonderful piece of work, for the piers sometimes descend through 30 feet of water. It required the contents of a seven-masted schooner, or its equivalent, to build a single pier. This railroad, ridiculed at first as an example of vain extravagance, today brings Key West within 47 hours of New York, and Havana, by car ferry, within 53 hours.

Key West, which, through the County Commissioners of Monroe County, is backing the Overseas Highway, calls attention to the success of the Florida East Coast Railway as an indication that the highway also will prove profitable. Thus far Monroe County has voted two bond issues for construction of the Overseas Highway. The first, voted several years ago, was for $300,000. The second, voted more than 18 months ago, was for $2,600,000. Other amounts will be voted when required.

Needing less heavy foundations and pursuing a less direct route than the railway, the Overseas Highway will not be so expensive. It will take greater advantage of the contour of the chain of small keys or islands that stretches from the Florida mainland to the Dry Tortugas. Simultaneous building is going along on links of the road. As each stretch is completed it connects with the stretch above or below.

Shows Power of Motor Car.

The latest news of this overseas road is that the County Commissioners of Monroe County, in which Key West is located, have taken steps to bridge two deep water gaps, seven and 12 miles wide, where the water is said to reach a depth of 30 feet in places. They have let a provisional franchise to an engineering concern to build toll bridges. At a meeting of PEUGEOT MISSION COMES TO SHOW 'BABY CAR' IN U. S.

Exhibits Sedan Weighing 1184 Pounds in Detroit—Would Market It in America.

By JIM LANCE.

Predictions that a mission from the French automobile house of Peugeot would soon come to this country, in the hope of interesting American manufacturers in the small Peugeot car and the Peugeot heavy oil engine, have materialized in New ork in the appearance of Lucien Rosengart, chairman of the board of the Societe Anonyme des Automobiles et Cycles Peugeot. M. Rosengart is accompanied by A. J. A. Lebaupin, a member of the French High Commission to this country during the World War, and several Peugeot engineers.

They have brought open and closed models of the 7 horsepower Peugeot four-cylinder car. The engine of this model has a bore of two inches and a stroke of approximately 3.44 inches. Despite its small size, this engine is said to handle a four-passenger sedan body well and to develop good pulling power. The Peugeot sedan weighs 1184 pounds with gasoline tank filled. It is capable of a maximum speed of around 40 miles an hour with four passengers, and with one passenger around 50 miles an hour.

On test in England by newspaper men, one of these four-passenger Peogeots averaged 46 miles to the gallon of gasoline on a 250-mile run.

The car has a three-speed transmission, worm gear steering and wheelbase of 89½ inches. The body is made of fabric stretched on a special foundation. Cooling is thermo-syphon with fan. The car has high tension magneto and electric starter. The front spring is a single transverse half elliptic. The

ELLIOT APPOINTED BRANCH MANAGER

Takes Charge of Willys-Overland Branch in St. Louis—Kiracofe Gets Leave of Absence.

Otto Kiracofe, who has been branch manager of the Willys-Overland factory branch in St. Louis, has been granted a year's leave of absence at his own request. William A. Elliot, formerly district manager for Dodge Brothers, has been appointed branch manager in his stead and has assumed his new duties.

Kiracofe, who spent a month in the North Woods last year in an effort to regain his health, found that he must take a complete rest, so asked that he be relieved for that purpose. He is remaining at the local branch for 30 days to assist Elliot in getting acquainted with Willys-Knight and Overland dealers in the territory.

Elliot has been in the automobile business for 15 years, much of the time with Dodge Brothers. He served as field representative and in other capacities at New York, Boston, Memphis and other cities. He also did special promotion work out of the factory at Detroit. For the last two years he has been manager for Dodge Brothers in the St. Louis territory.

Since January he has been studying operation methods at Willys-Overland branches in the larger cities.

MOTOR TOURS TO COLORADO FROM ST. LOUIS TO BE RUN

Fourteen-day tours by automobile from St. Louis to the scenic regions of Colorado are to be conducted by the Globe Sight-seeing Tours, Inc. Cars are to be sent out on regular schedules over the 2700-mile round trip, and stops are to be made at points of interest en route, including the State capital at Jefferson City, the Kansas Capitol at Topeka and other cities.

The tours are to run via Kansas City, Topeka and Ellis, Kan., to Denver, then over the Berthoud Pass to Grand Lake, through Rocky Mountain and Estes national parks, back to Denver via Big Thompson Canyon, then to Colorado Springs, up Pike's Peak, to the Royal Gorge, back to Colorado Springs and home via Limon and Topeka.

At first, it is stated, two tours a week are to be run. Three seven-passenger Dorris automobiles will be among the cars to be operated. The tours company has headquarters in the Odeon Building.

STAUNTON-MT. OLIVE ROAD GAP PAVING STARTS SOON

Preparations are being made to grade and pave the gap in Illinois State highway No. 16, between Staunton and Mt. Olive, according to William Hoffman, who operates a bus line from St. Louis via Staunton and Litchfield to Pana. He reports also that work is to start this week at tearing up streets in Staunton in preparation for paving the gap on highway No. 4 that has been troublesome for several years.

RAPID PROGRESS ON HIGHWAY OVER OCEAN TO KEY WEST

the County Commissioners it was announced that a charge of $1 a passenger car would be made at each of the bridges and 10 cents additional a passenger. It is reasonable to suppose that most persons would pay $2.20 to drive a car across those rainbow-hued keys.

The bridging of this 112-mile gap between the Florida mainland and the City of Key West for the convenience of motorists will be a forcible demonstration of the power of the automobile to create good roads under any circumstances. The cost of the road will be paid for many times by the motor tolls and the increase in land values on the fertile keys. Undoubtedly, there will be commercial traffice on the new road, though the heaviest sort of trucking will likely not be permitted. Primarily it will be for the motorist.

From Key West, the road has been built about eight miles toward the mainland, passing across several islands on the way. At its extremity, is a pile driver which is walking across the water and islets, laying the track upon which it proceeds. The other day it was walking over a jungle of mangroves on Bird Key. When the pile driver has driven two creosoted pilings, stringers are laid on them, and it draws itself forward by its own power upon this new foundation. Ahead of it one could see another section of the road coming down to fill the gap.

Like Going to Sea.

On some of the stretches already built, the low-lying islets appear far on the horizon and the motorist has the feeling that he is out at sea. This illusion will be heightened on the longest bridges. Almost always steamers can be seen in the lane which follows the Gulf Stream in its northern turn around Key West, and frequently they are but a few miles distant. Strong currents between the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean swirl beneath the road when the tide moves with greatest velocity. Fish of many sorts are now being caught from the road by people of Key West; even barracuda have been taken.

The most wonderful fish that you can sometimes see from the route is the shy, elusive bone fish, which many sportsmen consider the greatest small game fish in the world. Great fishermen like Zane Grey, Nat Jerlaw, George Schutt, Meisselbach and Johnson compare him to a small torpedo operating with a high charge of explosive. The bone fish weighs up to 12 pounds, but is usually caught from three to seven pounds. There are more prizes up for bone fish at the Long Key Fishing Club than for almost any other fish, not excepting the sail fish. He will take out 300 to 600 feet of line in a straight rush so fast it makes one's head swim.

The reason one can see him from the motor road is that he follows the rising tide over the shoals, and often is caught in eight inches to two feet of water. I saw the silver fins of a dozen the other evening as they grubbed in the shallow crystalline water, sometimes standing on their heads with tails out like silver banners, digging for the shell fish on which they feed.

From the mainland toward Key West the road has been graded for seven miles south of Florida City. On Key Largo, the first island after leaving the mainland, 30 miles of road have been put into shape. There is a good road almost the length of Matecumbe Key, where Northern bankers have an exclusive club, and another on Islamorada. In fact, more than two-thirds of the highway is completed.

Author Dictates Plays in Auto

Channing Pollock, author of "The Fool" and a newer play, "The Enemy," saves time in his daily motor trip between his New York office and his home at Shoreham, Long Island, by installing a dictaphone in his Reo sedan. He is pictured dictating part of a new play. He turns the rolls over to a stenographer on arrival at his office.

tent driver. For years he killed and maimed, and met punishment only through the imposition of a fine that meant little or nothing to him.

"During 1925 we suspended and revoked nearly 11,000 driving licenses and I believe suspension or revocation to be the one effective remedy if the loss of life due to the operation of motor vehicles is to be reduced to any appreciable extent.

"During the calendar year 1925, we took 11,000 careless and incompetent drivers off the highways of this State. During the same period we licensed 206,000 more cars and 207,000 more drivers than we had in 1924. Still, and notwithstanding the increased hazards due to more vehicles and more drivers, 200 less persons were killed through the operation of motor vehicles during 1925 than during 1924.

"I accept this as concrete—and even the most skeptical must accept it as apparent—evidence that suspension or revocation is the one effective remedy in our effort to curb the careless or incompetent driver.

"Let me make it clear here, however, that I am thoroughly appreciative of the value of educating the motorist as to what is expected of him by way of compliance with the law governing the operation of motor vehicles. In accordance with the rapidity with which he responds to this education depends the reduction in number of the suspensions and revocations resulting from an application of this remedy.

"If the first two months of 1926 may be taken as a criterion, our suspensions and revocations for the current year will easily reach 25,000. I might also mention in connection with this particular phase of my administrative work that I have yet to feel the slightest pressure or experience any intercession from an automobile club or association, in behalf of an individual who has lost his license through suspension or revocation. An attitude of this kind breeds safe and careful drivers within and without an organization."

HUDSON AND ESSEX SALES INCREASE ALL OVER U. S.

Reports from all over the country of 100 per cent increases in sales of Hudson and Essex cars over the first quarter of 1925 are borne out by the same increase in the St. Louis district, according to the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. R. C. Frampton wires the same statement from Georgia, where he is visiting. In March, 998 Hudson and Essex cars were delivered in Wayne County, Mich., which includes Detroit.

NOTED RACINE CAR BUILDER NOW DRIVING AUBURN EIGHT

J. M. Crawford, chief engineer of the Auburn Automobile Co., says he is proud of the fact that Harry Miller, builder of racing motor cars holding many world's records, recently purchased an Auburn 8-88 sedan. "I feel that this is the highest praise that the engineering and construction of Auburn cars could possibly be given," says Crawford.

rear springs are quarter eliptics, mounted in the usual manner. There is no differential.

M. Rosengart has taken the Peugeots to Detroit, where they are to be exhibited at the Hotel Statler. He also brought over a five-ton truck fitted with the Peugeot oil engine, which is built under the so-called Tartrais patents. It is of the two-stroke, two-cylinder type, with fuel injection under pressure and ignition resulting from high compression. Its bore and stroke are approximately 3¾x6 inches, and it develops about 53 horsepower at 1550 r. p. m., using half a pound of gas oil per horsepower hour. The engine weighs 550 pounds.

M. Rosengart is quoted in New York dispatches as saying: "I am surprised that Americans have not realized the possibilities of relieving street congestion by using smaller cars. In Paris, 60 per cent of our cars are quite small, and the effect on traffic is apparent. In New York, enormous sky-scrapers are built in the effort to conserve space, but by that very fact you crowd your streets to the limit. The streets are crowded with huge cars, some containing only the driver or perhaps one or two passengers and occupying so much street space. Think what a saving in space could be effected by the use of the small car, which occupies half of the space of the cars now seen on American roads."

Public faith in Cadillac is as old as Cadillac, and as new as the new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac itself.

This abiding sense that the Cadillac was a thing apart first came into being twenty-three years ago. Eleven years ago Cadillac added immeasurably to its prestige by developing the first eight-cylinder American car.

More than 200,000 of the world's most critical motorists have owned more than 225,000 eight-cylinder Cadillacs—the widest acceptance of the eight-cylinder principle in all the world.

Today's unexampled demand for the new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac is making motor car history all over again. It is doubling Cadillac sales, which already exceeded that of any other car in its field.

The new Cadillac is years ahead of the times—and new thousands each month turn to it with deepest satisfaction.

The vast General Motors Proving Ground at Milford, Michigan, where the Pontiac Six was tested and perfected.

NEW . . yet three years old

In the sense that it combines elements of stamina, size, beauty and power heretofore undreamed of at its price, the Pontiac Six is an entirely new car.

Yet in actuality it offers to buyers, principles of design and construction that are years past the experimental stage and proven beyond all peradventure of doubt.

That this is true—and, what is more important—that the motoring public has accepted it as true, is revealed in the spectacular nationwide reception the Pontiac Six has enjoyed from the day of its public presentation!

Three years ago General Motors set out to develop a six that would provide a new basis of ownership in the field of low cost sixes—quality instead of price.

To that end were devoted the corporation's almost limitless resources in research and engineering.

Months after the Pontiac Six was designed—months after many engineering staffs might have pronounced that design ready for the public—it was further refined and developed, first in the great General Motors Laboratories and later at the General Motors Proving Ground.

Here, on the finest natural testing field in the entire industry, the Pontiac Six underwent, for week upon week, tests that called for heroic stamina. Brutal, unremitting, searching—carried out under every conceivable weather and road condition—these tests made possible the ultimate presentation of a car without an element of uncertainty.

Obviously, such a conservative procedure involved millions of dollars, in that it delayed the day on which General Motors might enter the field of low cost sixes with a quality car at a price of nationwide appeal.

Yet only such a procedure could have been consistent with the position of General Motors and the principles of sound value it has publicly advocated.

At the outset, it was recognized frankly and fearlessly that some buyers, on the basis of previous experience, might question the advisability of buying a "first year" car. And General Motors has met that attitude by a course of development and refinement, the like of which no other new car ever underwent before!

Arrange to inspect the new Pontiac Six today. Make a personal investigation of its breath-taking performance and the exceptional beauty and roominess of its superior Fisher body. Learn for yourself the reasons underlying the wildfire reception that has been accorded this low priced quality Six that is NEW—yet three years old!

COST OF MOTORING IN CALIFORNIA IS RISING

Gasoline Price Is Increased—Added Tax on Car Owners Proposed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17.—Not only has the price of gasoline in this oil State been advanced, but also the California State Automobile Association has recommended that each of the million and a half motor car owners in the State be taxed an additional $3 a year to provide a road building fund.

The increase in the price of gasoline is based on an increase in crude oil prices, the lead being taken by the Standard Oil Co. The reason given by the oil companies is the scarcity of crude oil and the demand for fuel oil for export. The scarcity is foreseen for the future, however, rather than now, for stocks of crude on the Pacific Coast have been climbing rapidly during the last year and a half until they amount to about 150,000,000 barrels. The new price of gasoline is 22 cents, including a two-cent State tax.

The old price of five gallons for a dollar had been in force for so long that motorists in this State had grown to believe that it was fixed by nature, or Federal law, or something like that.

The plan of the automobile association for a $3 tax on automobiles, in addition to the present $3 charge for a State license, has resulted from figuring on a way to increase good roads mileage in the State. The Legislature at its last session failed to appropriate any funds for new highway construction, and its proposition to increase the gasoline tax to provide such funds was vetoed by the Governor

Bus Trips From St. Louis

By JEAN CAMERON.

A comparatively short bus trip, not only advantageous for business purposes, but especially attractive for picnickers, campers and week-enders, is to Pacific, Mo. The busses leave the Seventh and Walnut street garage, going out Walnut to Twelfth, Locust and Lindell boulevards to a stop at Hotel Melbourne. The next stop is at the City Limits Loop in Maplewood, and beyond this passengers are picked up on signal as the bus continues out the Manchester road, past multitudinous roadhouses, refreshment stands and real estate projects and subdivisions.

Many Pretty Scenes.

The bus passes through Des Peres and Kleinville, swinging left from the pavement of Manchester road to the graveled Barrett Station road. Ten minutes later the entrance to Lake Hill is passed and five minutes more land pasengers in Valley Park, where the Meramec is crossed. Leaving the Smither Mill road and the Hawkins road to the left, the Antire road is followed for the eight miles between Valley Park and Eureka. Most of the distance is along a charming little valley, only a few hundred feet wide in places, with wooded hills on either hand where little passages wind, some of them showing in wagon trails, but all inviting the country lover to leave the bus and climb and explore their secrets and spread his picnic luncheon on their table-like rocks. Gradually the valley narrows and ends as the road climbs a gentle grade and drops down quickly into the valley of the Antire and the Little Antire Creek.

Just beyond the foot of the grade, to the right, is Rankin Cave, well known to hikers and picnickers, but somewhat difficult for a stranger to find, being marked only by a faint foot trail to the entrance and by the scattered paper and debris left by many a last year's picnicking party. Beyond the next curve, on the left, is a spring of clear water, furnishing passersby with water for the asking. At any time of the day one to a dozen cars are to be seen halted there. To the left is rich bottom land; to the right, timbered hills, on the slopes of one, an old-time cemetery, sheltered by shrubbery and cedars. Just before crossing the Meramec a second time, a road to the right climbs over the hills to Crescent and beyond, but the bus crosses the bridge and follows the Blakely road to Eureka.

On to Pacific.

At Eureka, the route turns west between the tracks of the Frisco and the Missouri Pacific to St. Stephens, where it crosses the track to the left, and continues to parallel the railroads to Allenton. Roads to the left head to Hunters Ford, and, beyond Allenton, Fox Creek is crossed on a narrow bridge; here the Fox Creek road branches to the right following the creek north to the Manchester road. Dozier station is passed, and a few minutes later the quarries and sand pits of the Silica Sand Co., which marks the entrance to Pacific.

Pacific is one of the older places in Franklin County. It was laid out in 1852 under the name of Franklin, and in February, 1859, voted to change its name to Pacific. The first house completed was a log structure at Second and Osage streets. This was in 1854. Afterward the house was covered with boards, to resemble a frame house. The first hotel, the Franklin House, was started before this house, but was not completed until later. The first frame house was built at St. Louis and Third streets, the first brick building at First and Union, and the first school in 1855, at Osage and Fourth.

At present there are four bus trips each way between St. Louis and Pacific the first bus leaving Pacific at 7 in the morning and St. Louis at 9:15. Beginning May 1 the service is to be increased, the first bus leaving St. Louis at 8 in the morning, and every two hours during the day until 6 in the evening.

On Saturday and Sunday the service is to be increased still further and continued until 10 o'clock in the evening. Bauer Bros. of Pacific, who own and operate the fleet of Reo busses used on the run, have kept the line in continuous operation since the service was started 15 months ago. The trip between St. Louis and Pacific is made in 2 hours and 15 minutes.

BEST PRESSURES TO USE IN BALLOON TIRES ON FORDS

Under-inflation of a balloon tire costs the owner 700 miles of service per pound under the correct pressure, according to the results of a series of experiments by the Ford Motor Co.

To determine at what point the Ford sized balloon tires—29x4.40—yield maximum comfort to passengers consistent with maximum mileage, all makes of tires were tested. At the end of the test period, the exact loss per pound of under-inflation was calculated in terms of mileage and a bulletin was sent to Ford dealers and service stations advising the correct pressures.

A number of common tire ailments were traced directly back to under-inflation. Among the most common are rim cuts, tread separation, over-heating and stone bruising in addition to a more rapid rate of natural wear and deterioration.

On the other hand, every pound of over-inflation takes its toll of comfort and the fundamental value of balloon equipment is lost. Other advantages of low-pressure tires, including greater traction, ability to travel over soft ground without sinking and quick stopping without skidding, are nullified in a direct ratio to the extent of the excessive air pressure.

The following inflation table has been proven best to combine riding comfort with long life in 29x4.40 balloon tires:

TYPE.	Pounds Inflation Front.	Rear.
Roadster	27	27
Coupe	27	27
Touring car	27	27
Tudor	27	30
Fordor	27	30
Runabout with pickup body	27	30

HUP SIX AND EIGHT SALES ARE BREAKING ALL RECORDS

March was the largest month in the history of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, both in number of cars manufactured and in sales volume in dollars. It surpassed November, 1925, hitherto the record month, by 8 per cent in number of cars and by a still higher margin in dollar sales volume.

The company announced that its shipments in the first three months of 1926 exceeded those in the similar period in 1925 by 45 per cent. Domestic shipments leaped 47 per cent ahead of those in the 1925 first quarter, while those for export ran 38 per cent larger.

Despite its record business, the company on March 31 carried over unfilled orders for more than $1,300,000 worth of cars. Its orders received April 1 aggregated more than 1000 additional cars, giving it more than $2,700,000 worth of unfilled orders as of April 1.

PEERLESS DISTRIBUTOR MADE DIRECTOR OF THE COMPANY

The Peerless Motor Car Corporation has increased its directorate from 11 to 13 members to allow Charles H. Ladson, its largest distributer, a place on the board. Charles A. Tucker, general sales manager of the company, also was elected to the board.

Larson, as controlling head of the Cutting, Larson Co. of New York City, is known as one of the leading automobile merchandisers of the country. He has been in the automobile business since its pioneer days and before that sold bicycles.

JURY OF EXPERTS DEFINES MEANING OF 'GOOD DRIVER'

They Outline Six Essential Characteristics as Result of Analysis Made for the A. A. A.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The American Automobile Association officers here announce the verdict of a jury of nationally known traffic and safety experts on "What are the characteristics of a good and safe driver?"

The seven men to whom this question was submitted are in accord on six major essentials, as far as good driving is concerned. These are:

1. The good driver has a high degree of self-control at all times, this control manifesting itself in various ways.

2. The good driver always maintains his car in such shape that it responds easily and quickly, thus assuring control of the car as far as the purely mechanical equation is concerned.

3. The good driver regulates his speed in accordance with the conditions of the road over which he is traveling, and never travels at such a rate that he cannot stop it within the "clear course" ahead.

4. The good driver invariably exercises due regard for the rights of others and always applies the simple axioms of courteous behavior.

5. The good driver accepts the safety of the pedestrian as a primary consideration.

6. The good driver keeps his mind on the road ahead, as day-dreaming or chattering at the wheel causes many more accidents than are caused by bee stings.

The jury included:

Ray McNamara, service engineer of the Chrysler Motor Sales Corp., who has driven more than 1,000,000 miles without an arrest, without an accident and without an insurance claim of any kind.

Bennett Hill, one of the greatest speedway drivers.

George M. Graham, chairman of the Traffic and Safety Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Col. A. B. Barber of the United States Chamber of Commerce, director of the Hoover Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Dr. H. C. Dickinson, of the Heat and Power Division of the Bureau of Standards, who has made a special study of safe driving.

Dr. F. A. Moss, of George Washington University, a nationally known psychologist.

Officer E. W. Smith, who for 10 years has regulated traffic at one of the most congested intersections of Washington, and now is on duty at the White House.

U. S. CARS BEST SELLERS WHEN NOT BARRED BY TARIFFS

American automobiles today are outselling those of any other country in every nation in the world where they are permitted by tariff regulations to compete with cars of other countries on an equal basis, according to H. J. Holder, Hupmobile sales manager for Continental Europe and Northern Africa, who has just visited the Hupp Motor Car Corporation from his headquarters in Paris.

"Throughout Europe and Northern Africa, except in countries which have erected a high tariff wall against our product, American cars outsell those of all other makes together," said Holder. "English cars, because of the favorable British 33 1-3 per cent tariff, outsell American cars throughout the British Isles. Yet American cars sell well there. But in France and Italy an almost prohibitive duty restricts the sale of American cars to little more than a comparative handful."

Holder said the sale of Hupmobiles throughout Continental Europe in March were 200 per cent greater than in March, 1925. In the first quarter of 1926 they were 800 per cent larger than in the corresponding period in 1925.

COMMON SENSE THINGS TO DO TO PREPARE CAR FOR SPRING TOURING

AN American Automobile Association bulletin, based on experiences of "trouble men" attached to emergency stations of its affiliated clubs all over the country, gives the following counsel on putting a car in condition for spring touring:

"Drain the crank case.

"Clean out the cooling system, being sure that the fan belt and all hose connections are in good order.

"Inspect the bearings in the wheels.

"Tighten all chassis and body bolts.

"Flush radiator, and be sure there are no leaks in it.

"Insure proper lubrication of transmission and differential.

"Clean up the entire gasoline distributing system.

"Test the alignment of the steering gear and the wheels.

"Go over the tires and the rims.

"Test the batteries.

"Give the generator and starter a house cleaning.

"The average motorist cannot always do this himself. But the garage around the corner will do it for $10 or $15, rarely going above $20. In thousands of cases this expenditure of it would have saved $200 or $300 for major repairs later."

NEW YORK'S TRAFFIC POLICE GO TO SCHOOL

"Rookie" Street Czars Thoroughly Trained in Every Aspect of Their Duties.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Rookie traffic cops, soon to be stationed at busy corners of Manhattan's streets and points of heavy traffic throughout the city, are being instructed that the public, if not always right, is correct a goodly portion of the time, and that its rights as pedestrians and motor car drivers must be respected.

The instruction of all officers assigned to traffic duty in the various boroughs has been conducted intermittently since last August in three-day courses at the Police Academy, in the expectation that all traffice officers sent down for the special course will be more efficient in dealing with the problems they encounter when they return to their posts. Of over 13,000 police officers in New York City, more than 1700 are assigned to the traffic squad under the supervision of Deputy Chief Inspector W. A. Coleman.

Lieut. McCarthy, after studying conditions met in New York City traffic problems, teaches scores of traffic policemen assembled in the classrooms of the Police Academy.

Here come the rookie traffic cops and the men with two or three months' experience are to be taught how to handle their jobs properly, to be instructed in the minutest details of the rules and regulations of the department, and to acquire a wealth of information about the public and about what the public thinks of the traffic cop.

Lieut. McCarthy is in accord with the popular notion that traffic cops serve too many summonses, and so he tells his classes. "The best traffic men I know," the Lieutenant says, "do not serve more than two summonses a year. A good traffic man can regulate traffic without resorting to the extreme. It is only the traffic man who, having a date with some friend of his on Tuesday or Thursday, and trying to get a half day off, hands out a summons to someone so that he can keep his appointment.

"The only reason summonses should be issued is to improve traffic conditions. How often is that the real motive? Very seldom. Most of them are given out simply for spite, to show that the cop is boss of his own crossing.

"The failure of operators of motor vehicles to stop on signal is not the fault of the public," Lieut. McCarthy says in his class lectures, "but is due to the ineffective way the policeman gives the signal. A traffic cop shouldn't expect the whole world to stand on its head to comply with his signals, and he should not expect a vehicle to stop unless it can do so easily and conveniently."

Lieut. McCarthy inculcates in the rookie traffic cop a faith in the public. No man, when caught in a traffic violation, he says, will find fault with the complaint given him.

"There may be a great many things on the mind of a person driving a car. An operator might have business troubles, or there might be sickness in his family, and in such cases there may be a doubt as to his wilfulness in violating the regulations.

"Unless serious damage is done, it is advisable not to serve summonses in such cases. A trivial violation, or violations committed through carelessness or thoughtlessness, should not be punished by serving summonses, except, of course, if serious damage is done and sufficient grounds exist to take proper action. Under no circumstances must the operator be abused."

Strangers in the city are deserving of more attention and consideration than natives, according to the Lieutenant. The manner in which strangers are treated by traffic officers, he maintains, is frequently a topic of conversation when they return to their home towns.

Pedestrians, taxicabs, practical jokers, all these receive individual attention in the traffic course that forms the basis of the rookie's training. Pedestrians, he is told, have the first rights on the street, in accordance with the rulings of the highest courts of the State.

Each rookie is instructed in the calisthenics of his vocation. Definite positions and postures are designated for starting and stopping traffic. The policeman's right shoulder must always be nearest the heavy line of traffic on a two-way street, so that he may keep his eyes on the far crossing and warn the pedestrians not to cross.

RUSSIAN TRUCK ECONOMY TROPHY AWARDED TO G. M. C.

Official notification of first award for economical truck operation has just been received by the General Motors Truck Co. from the Russian Government. The award was won by a GMC heavy-duty truck in the 3300-mile run conducted by the Russian Government. A symbolic trophy of chased silver accompanied the notification.

The test run was held by Russian officials to popularize motor-truck transportation and to determine the qualities of various makes of trucks. A picked group of American and European motor trucks competed.

The exhibit will include the six lines of General Motors passenger cars: Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, Cadillac, GMC truck; and also the products of Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Co., Fisher Body, Frigidaire, the electric refrigerator, Delco farm lighting and power plants and various General Motors parts and accessories—the products of General Motors manufacturing plants, located in 37 cities of the United States and Canada.

SPEEDY RUN IN FRANKLIN CLOSED CAR IS REPORTED

John R. Brooks reports that he drove with two passengers from Columbus, Ga., to Jacksonville, Fla., 322 miles, in a Franklin sedan in seven hours and 30 minutes. The actual running time, he reported, was seven hours, an average of 46 miles per hour. For the first three and a half hours, he said, he averaged 50 miles per hour, but on account of darkness, traffic and a 12-mile detour, the speed thereafter was lowered.

MOON SALES RISE IN SOUTH

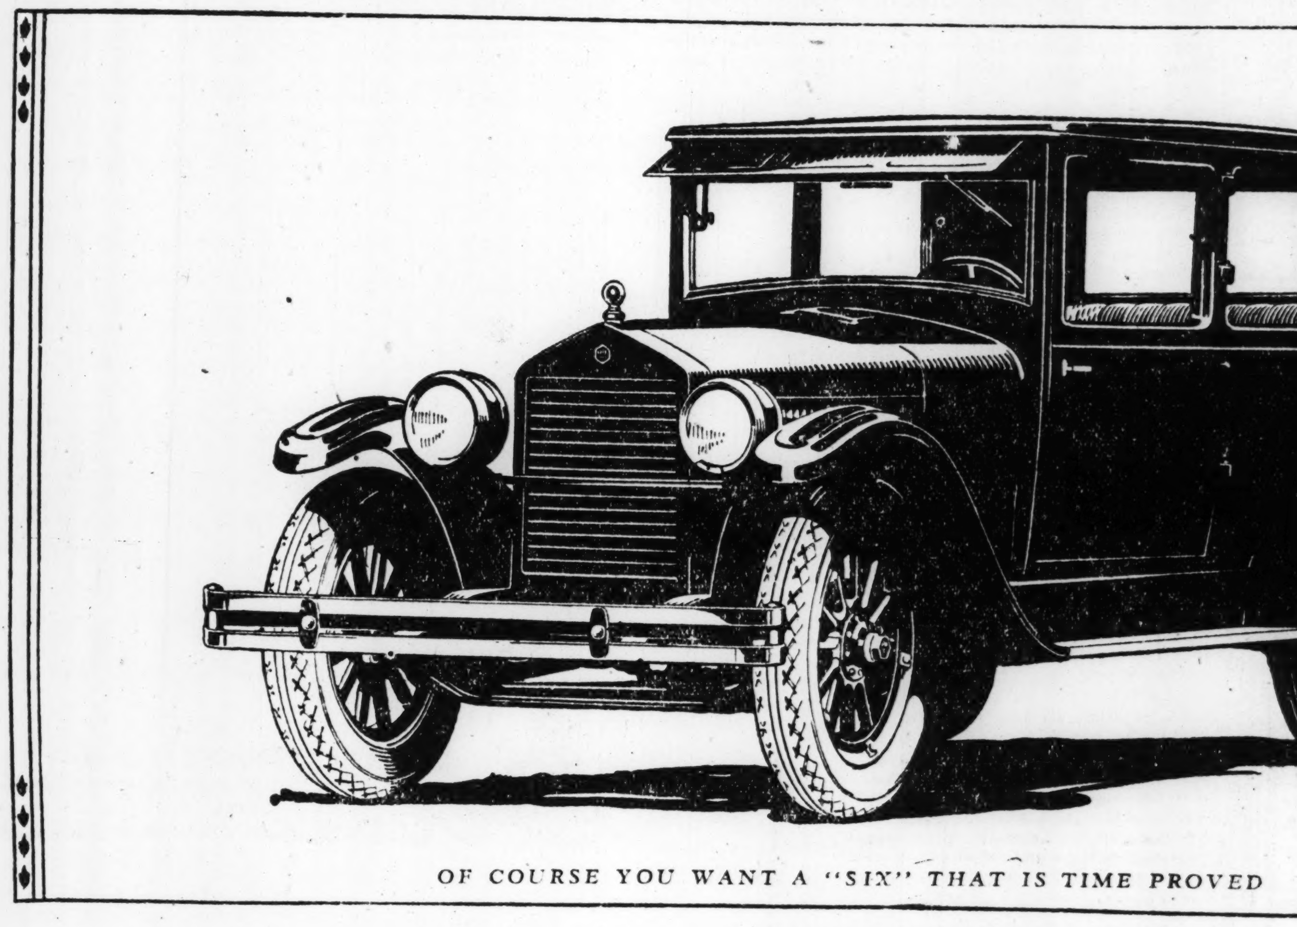
300,000 ESSEX OWNERS
They know its time proved value, its rare smoothness and performance, its sturdiness and economy



OF COURSE YOU WANT A "SIX" THAT IS TIME PROVED

Essex proved that everyone wants a "Six." But low price is not the only reason why 300,000 owners are praising it so highly nor does price alone explain the reason for its continued sales leadership.

Time proved qualities are what owners talk about. They speak of the little attention Essex requires and of how infrequent and small is the service cost. They tell of economy in fuel, oil and tires. And they praise Essex smoothness in performance, its nimbleness and its power.

They are the greatest sales influence we have.

Just see how Essex meets your desires. It is the ideal family and utility car. It is easy to steer and can be handled in traffic or backed in to small parking spaces without effort. It is easy riding and possesses unusual roadability.

The motor is built under Super-Six patents that gives a performance and quality exclusive to this famous principle. It is the best Essex ever built and because of its vast production and the constant development of economical and precision methods of manufacturing it is priced lower than ever before.

The cost is less than for most fours and little more than the lowest priced car on the market.

Can you ignore such facts in the choice of your car?

WHITE RIVER COUNTRY EXPECTS TOURIST HOST

All Lake Taneycomo Resorts Being Expanded in Anticipation of Record Crowds.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOLLISTER, Mo., April 17.—Extensive improvements for the accommodation of the thousands of summer tourists expected this year from all parts of the United States are being made by resort owners along the 28 miles of Lake Taneycomo in the White River Ozarks. Nearly every resort between Table Rock, the head of Lake Taneycomo, and Powersite, the lower end is being enlarged.

It is believed the approaching season will bring the largest number of tourists into the White River country since the region was opened as a resort country, possibly twice the number accommodated last year.

Already fishermen are reported to be coming into the lake region and to a number of the resorts on the banks of Taneycomo.

MARMON SALES INCREASE

The Marmon Motor Car Co. reports that its sales this year are running well ahead of the same period of last year. G. M. McWilliams, president of the Marmon Co., says: "We recently shipped three solid trainloads of Marmon cars—one to New England, one to the Southwest, and one to the Pacific coast—all this in addition to our regular flow of individual carload shipments. I am free to admit, in fact I am pleased to know, that other quality cars are selling at a corresponding rate."

PREDICTS NEW TYPE LIGHT AUTO IN U. S. THIS YEAR

British Manufacturer Tells What He Has Reason to Believe New Car Selling at $650 to $750 Will Be.

"The time is about ripe for a drastic change in the character of the light cars used by the masses of people in the United States," says Sir William Letts, president of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, Ltd., of England, and head of the British Willys-Overland organization. His ideas are embodied in a formal statement, substantially as follows: "I am taking particular account of what English and French manufacturers have done, and are still doing, in providing light cars capable of high speed, great economy of operation, very durable, and with added safety braking facilities. Further, I think that these cars will be sold at the same low cost of your present cars.

Plans Under Way Now.

"In the mass production of automobiles, America has given the world a valuable lesson in efficient industry. But it has been done at a sacrifice of development of the automobile. It has allowed European engineers practically to run away with what it now needs most—greater car efficiency and new body and mechanical design.

"Consciousness of this has been growing among the most farsighted in the industry, and right now I know plans are being developed to correct the deficiency.

"This to a great degree explains why lately great numbers of American motor manufacturers and their engineers have been crossing the Atlantic. They come to learn what the European automotive engineers have done and are doing and they are taking back with them the things which they have disregarded in the past, or with which they have been unfamiliar.

"It is on this certain evidence and personal contact with them that I can safely predict a new era for American motor cars in the immediate future.

Predicts New Type This Year.

"I do not mean by this that the cars of Europe are to be reproduced as is in your country. That would never do. What is suitable to Europeans would not go with Americans and what is wholly American would not fit the requirements of the European.

"For instance take the matter of tread. Road and traffic conditions in the United States make necessary the standard 56 inches. That allows for wide, comfortable bodies which European light cars do not have. There will be other adjustments and new applications, and this will give birth to an entirely new type of motor car which will embody the best principles and features of the motor cars of both sides of the water.

"I think from what I have learned from visiting manufacturers and engineers that this new type will probably be produced this year.

"With but a few exceptions, the cars of America are motored by uniform types of engines, which, frankly, are not as highly developed as the European engines. This holds equally true with the other moving parts. The American motorist, as a result, pays a higher operating cost on every mile than do Europeans.

"European motors have changed much more rapidly, and are today more refined and quite more efficient than are the American products. I might almost say that the European car is hand-built, while the American car is machine built. And I think that on the whole they are, from a mechanical standpoint, better cars and will outlast the average American car. Your new type car will probably be a 10-year car.

Confident Changes Impend.

"Because I am more familiar with British cars, I am better able to use them for comparisons. Your engineers have found that, aside from certain mechanical features, they are not suited to American requirements. They are far too small to fit your supposed needs. Your vehicles are roomier and there is much greater comfort all around. British bodies, therefore, will not do in America, but on the other hand American bodies, with only slight modifications, will do in Great Britain, and I should say, the whole of Europe. The length of your cars is a bit too much for us and I think that if you were to make a real serious effort to capture European market, something which you really haven't done on the right lines, you would compromise on length. Then as to body styles I think you would go to European designers more than you do, although I must admit that you have been rather alert in this direction.

"I have discussed the problem of a real universal car with many American manufacturers, and that is why I am so confident that changes are imminent in America.

"Here is what I think the new car will incorporate: It will have to a large degree economy of operation in fuel without sacrifice of horsepower and with the added advantage of greater torque. That will mean the same freedom from excessive gear shifting that you have enjoyed so long. The engine will be better built and will contain refinements heretofore not thought possible in mass production.

"The problem of incorporating many of the European refinements has been studied these past few years and from what I gather, an honest solution has been found. You'll like these engines, and so will we.

"The car will be sturdier and better suited to all around purposes, for it will embody the lessons we have learned from road racing, which teaches so much better than does track racing, for the road is the normal testing ground and not the special track built for speed.

"It will set lower to the ground, as the roads of your country today do not make necessary such high axle clearance, and it will be equipped with brakes on all wheels to conform with the ever-growing safety demand.

"Such a car will probably sell in the neighborhood of $650 to $750. A similar vehicle in Europe sells for around $1200.

"By these cars you will be able not only to meet home demands but more successfully compete overseas. And the European manufacturers will adapt their cars to meet this competition and this competition will tend further to develop the automobile.

"A new era is dawning for Europe as well as America, and we are going to taste new joys in motoring."

RECENT FOREIGN SPEED AND ENDURANCE RUNS

British Driver Does 152 M. P. H.—Attempt at Mile Record Deferred Till Fall.

Because of the tides, attempts of British automobile drivers to set new world's speed records for the mile on the Pendine Sands, on the coast of Wales, have been abandoned until the fall. Maj. Seagrave, driving the new 12-cylinder Sunbeam, set a new record for the kilometer in both directions, covering the distance at an average of 152.336 miles an hour. The previous record was 150.869, made by Capt. Malcolm Campbell in an older 12-cylinder Sunbeam.

Seagrave's attempt to beat "Tommy" Milton's mile record failed when his supercharger broke.

The semistock 45-horsepower Renault, with stream-lined sedan body, which was pictured in this automobile section last Sunday, has just been driven by M. Gartfield 500 kilometers (310.85 miles) in 2 hours 48 minutes 11.06 seconds, the speed averaging 110.5 miles an hour. The Renault went after the European three-hour record and in that time did 536 kilometers and 699 meters, or approximately 334 miles.

A British Invicta car, driven in turn by six drivers, including Miss Violet Cordery, has just completed 25,000 kilometers (15,542 miles) on the Monza track at an average speed of 53¾ miles an hour. In 20 days, which included a five-day stop to repair damage caused when one of the drivers fell asleep on the track and the car left the course, the Invicta covered some 20,000 miles.

The Invicta is a six-cylinder car, with bore of approximately 2⅝ inches and stroke of 4¾ inches. It is exceptionally good in high gear performance and in acceleration.

STANDARDIZED QUALITY ANNOUNCED BY CHRYSLER

DETROIT, Mich., April 17.—The consummation of a policy of standardized quality, uniform in all sizes and classifications of Chrysler products, is announced by Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler Corporation.

"Chrysler cars are built in a number of chassis sizes, in a variety of performance capabilities, and with body types to meet public demand," he said. "Size and performance regulate price, but quality is standard.

"It has never been clear to me why the purchaser of a car in the $1000 class should receive less quality and fine workmanship, in proportion to size and performance, than a purchaser in the $3000 class.

"Pound for pound and inch for inch, every Chrysler chassis is standardized in quality of materials, design and craftsmanship.

"In other words, from our lowest priced car to our most expensive, there is one quality only in engineering, manufacturing and inspection."

KENTUCKY HIGHWAY PASSES THROUGH 752-FOOT TUNNEL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 17.—Fifty miles southeast of here, near the Powell-Menifee County line, a highway runs through a tunnel 752 feet long, 17 feet wide and 15 feet high. The tunnel was constructed some years ago by a lumber firm for a railroad to connect its mills at Clay City and Nada. After the railroad was abandoned, the tunnel and right-of-way were donated to Powell County.

This hole cut through the mountain, without the supervision of a civil engineer, has a two per cent grade. Engineers wonder how it could have been cut without the use of instruments by experienced engineers. It is said that the builder used only a few "sticks" in laying out its course.

The road through this tunnel is one of the state highways. Plans are now being made to make it a first-class road to connect with the Appalachian Way.

PONTIAC SIX SETS RECORD FOR RUN OF 1836 MILES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, April 17.—A Pontiac six has just broken all records for the 918-mile run between this city and Albuquerque, N. M. It made the distance in 23 hours 29 minutes, averaging 39.07 miles per hour. Its average was 42.07 miles per hour for actual running time of 21 hours 49 minutes. It made the return trip in 27 hours 29 minutes. So the round trip time was 50 hours 58 minutes, which again set a new record. The run was officially timed by the Western Union. The car was certified as strictly stock. Three hours of the 50 hours for the round trip were lost in Albuquerque. The car encountered rain, mud, fog and a snow squall. Only 112 of the 918 miles each way were paved.

SALES OF STAR CARS TOTAL 31,695 IN THREE MONTHS

Colin Campbell, vice president of Durant Motors, Inc., announces that Star car sales the first quarter of 1926 exceed those in the first quarter of 1925 by 57 per cent. Sales in the three months were 31,695 cars, an increase of 11,498 units.

Busses and Trucks Help Railroads More Than They Hurt Them, Budd Asserts

President of Great Northern System Voices Belief on Which Railway Executives Are Making Transport Plans.

By J. C. ROYLE.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, April 17.—Motor bus production and sales are running 20 to 25 per cent ahead of those in the corresponding period of 1925. The bus and truck output this year is counted on to exceed that for any previous year.

Local travel, to a large extent, is leaving the railway train for the automobile, but President Ralph Budd of the Great Northern Railway says that the bus and truck industries are providing more traffic for the railroads of the country than they take away from them.

It is becoming increasingly evident that far-sighted railroad executives are taking over the truck and the bus, rather than trying to elimintae or fight them. Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, says:

"Both truck transport and motor transport have their proper place and to oppose them, when they have clearly demonstrated to have those advantages, is to run counter to a natural law. Up to this time most of the paving has been done on highways which parallel railroad mileage. Future highway improvements will tend toward lateral, instead of parallel, roads, which can conceivably become feeders, not competitors, of rail carriers."

Budd, whose road operates two $1,000,000 motor bus systems, declares the investment in motor vehicles and improved highways now exceed the investment in the railroad system of the country. He places the latter at $25,000,000 and the former at $25,625,000,000.

"The extensive ownership of automobiles," he added, "and the large mileage of improved highways, have resulted in the loss of most of the railroads' local passenger business, except in the vicinity of large cities. The canceling of local trains has left many communities with comparatively little railway passenger service. The small amount of local travel may not warrant more rail service, but does warrant bus operation at frequent intervals. The station to station, and even shorter haul, passengers make up a considerable part of the bus traffic.

"The bus business promises to increase if better service can be given and operating costs reduced. Busses may supplement railway transportation in some localities more effectively if managed by the railways than if operated independently. Motor trucks relieve terminal congestion, and terminal costs, increased by congestion, frequently absorb all profit on local freight. The field of the privately owned truck is wide, much more so than the common carrier truck."

Marcus L. Bell, vice president of the Rock Island system, also stresses this aspect of the situation.

"For short haul traffic and convenient delivery," he says, "the motor truck can offer the railroad carrier something that will relieve the latter of a very burdensome and expensive problem. I mean terminal service."

The real difference between rail and motor transportation, according to Vice President Lee of the Pennsylvania, is that between wholesale and retail.

"Such profits as the railroads are able to make," he says, "come practically from mass transport of freight and passengers over considerable distances. On the other hand, those forms of transportation in which the truck can and does make money are almost invariably the strictly 'retail' forms, in the rendering of which railroad operation virtually always involves losses."

One of the rail carriers most actively engaged in short-haul and commuter passenger transportation is laying out bus lines.

MISSOURI U. TO ASSIST SEEDING DIRT SHOULDERS OF THE STATE HIGHWAYS

THE Missouri College of Agriculture is to co-operate with the State Highway Commission in seeding shoulders of hard-surfaced roads.

The department of field crops of the Univeristy of Missouri will make a general survey of soils and conditions this spring and summer, and will recommend selection of seed. Special care will be taken in the purchase of seed to prevent introduction and spread of weeds along the roadways.

Prof. C. A. Helm of the department of field crops departed recently for Southeast Missouri to start work. He will consult each of the six engineers south of the Missouri River to start work on definite plans for seeding the mileage now ready. The chief benefit from the work will be prevention of soil erosion along the earth shoulders on the roadways.

Facts for the automobile buyer of 1926

THERE are many 1926 cars now upon the market. Cars designed in accordance with the usual conventional practise of 1926—which was also the usual conventional practise of 1925 and 1924.

There is only one automobile that you can buy in 1926 which is really a 1927-1928 automobile. For it is designed, not in accordance with the common practise of the past nor the general practise of the present, but with foreknowledge of the practise of the future.

This automobile, concededly far in advance of today's conventional design and as concededly representing tomorrow's trend in fine car engineering, is The NEW STUTZ—with Safety Chassis.

The NEW STUTZ is the only American passenger car on the market today in which a radically lowered center of gravity has been achieved while preserving full road clearance and headroom through the adoption of the worm-drive. A year ago the only orders placed for passenger car worm-drive axles were for The NEW STUTZ. Since the appearance of this advanced car, more than a dozen other important car manufacturers have ordered sample worm-drive rear axles for experimental purposes.

Again, only in The NEW STUTZ can the motorist secure today the further features of advanced type of engine construction, self-equalizing hydrostatic brakes, Myers lubricating system, long, low-rate, shock-compensated springs, etc. These are advantages, now exclusive in The NEW STUTZ, which are sure to be adopted or imitated in the designing of future models by competitive builders of fine cars.

All this can mean but one thing. The automobile of conventional 1926 and previous design is doomed to obsolescence in 1927-8. The process began with the introduction of The NEW STUTZ; its exclusive engineering ideas will be taken up and carried on by numerous motor car manufacturers in the near future.

The car investment that you make this year, if put into an automobile of a type that is destined to become obsolete, must suffer serious depreciation. If that same investment is put into the car of the future—The NEW STUTZ—it is conserved and protected. Which would you rather buy, a type of car that is passing out, or the type that is coming in?

This year, it behooves you to choose your car carefully.

NOT ONE AMERICAN
AS LONG AS REO
Not One

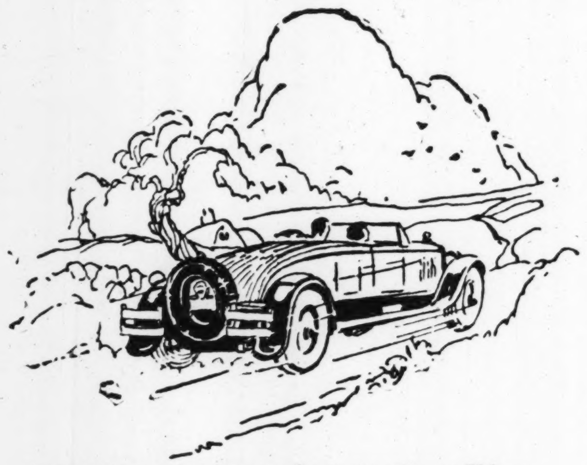
Why Reo's Top Speeds Cannot Be Less Than 62 to 65 Honest Miles

Reo subscribes to each of the 12 reforms advocated by the National Safety Council recently convened at Secretary Hoover's call. Reo regrets that exceedingly high speed is a natural and inevitable by-product of the superior design and construction of Reo Motors. Reo dealers are constantly urged to advocate greater caution in driving, and to point out the greater distance traveled by MAINTAINING a moderate speed steadily, hour after hour. April 18 to 25, Reo is holding National Demonstration Week, emphasizing Reo's exclusive safety features.

A Reo traveling 62 miles per hour easily passes some cars whose drivers think they are going at the rate of 72 miles.

The actual top speeds of Reo cars have never before been published because we have always regarded them as merely an incidental and necessary by-product of other, and more important, qualities of the Reo motor.

The surging acceleration of the Reo makes the capacity for these top speeds unavoidable.



As Reo's honest speedometer shoots over 60, you'll have a new sense of what more than a mile-a-minute really means

The unflagging ability of the Reo to climb swiftly up long and steep grades makes the capacity for these high speeds necessary.

The Reo motor's great reserve power, necessary for maintaining a high average mileage over all kinds of roads, under any conditions, makes these high speeds inevitable.

In short, swift acceleration, fast hill-climbing, and great reserve power go hand-in-hand with the capacity for exceptionally high speeds.

Are "Trick" Speedometers Safer?

Of the stock cars of a number of makes, tested by the Reo engineering department, some have speedometers which read 35 miles per hour when the actual speed is 32. The same speedometers display 45 miles per hour at an actual speed of 41, 60 miles at an actual speed of 54, and 74 miles at an actual speed of 62.

If such speedometers were honest and merely faulty, they would not show more error at high speeds than at lower speeds.

The speedometers on Reo cars are honest; they tell the actual speed of the car.

It has been suggested that the driver with a fast speedometer is safer than the driver with a fast car—because the driver with the "trick" speedometer isn't driving as fast as he thinks.

We doubt it. "Trick" speedometers demoralize the standards of safe driving.

Thoughtless drivers like to "show off." Too often they try to make their speedometers "hit" 70 or more. That means they careen down streets and highways at from 54 to 65 miles per hour.

Even that is too fast, and far too dangerous, not only for the driver, but even more so for the public.

With the honest Reo speedometers there is not so much temptation to "show off."

Yet there is the same or greater actual speed and the same or greater reserve power for maintaining exceptional mileage hour after hour after hour—over all kinds of roads.

And there are Reo safety features found on no other car.

Safety Features, Found Only on Reo

Split-second steering makes possible quick and easy control of balloon tires.

Split-second braking plus standard control, means that on a Reo the motorist has the only emergency brake really available in emergencies—available faster than any other brakes on any other car.

April 18 to 25 is Reo's National Demonstration Week.

Come in and ride in a New and Improved Reo—and try split-second steering and braking for yourself.

You will be interested in the features which have enabled this moderate-priced car to outlast far more costly cars.

You will find in this new Reo split-second features which make its owner safer than he could be in any other car.

You can try its speed, its comfort, its easy handling.

Your own good judgment will approve the design and construction which makes Reo travel care-free, economical, and dependable.

Come in and see America's longest-lived car.

It's Reo National Demonstration Week.

RACE OVER BAD ROADS IN SOVIET TRUCK TEST

First Description of Wild Contest Over Bumps and Through Seas of Mud.

A description of the Soviet Government's international automobile truck endurance test, held several months ago, has been brought back to America by J. G. Shelley, who had charge of the Graham Brothers entry.

Trucks were required to cover a course of 1300 miles, and, according to Shelley, this country has no such roads as those passed over during this grind. Each truck had a representative of the Government aboard as an observer.

"Before starting on this trip the trucks were supposed to be prepared and turned over to a technical committee of the Automobile Club of Moscow for comparison and inspection, and to note anything new or unusual in automobile and truck construction," Shelley said. "They also checked dimensions, which were checked after the run, and there was just one point on which there was any variation in our truck from the original measurement. That was a spread of about three-sixteenths of an inch between the front tires. Otherwise, the Graham Brothers truck was in perfect condition.

"Our showing came pretty close to being perfect, compared with what happened to some of the others. A German truck had an increased spread between the front tires of more than an inch. Two Italian trucks went almost completely to pieces. Two Russian trucks had to have new axles when they got back to Moscow.

Wild Race Over Bumps.

"The test run was 1300 miles, and we average about 26 miles an hour, with gas mileage of about ten.

"Any adjustment incurred a penalty. Each truck was given 200 points to start wfth. If your steering geer broke your entire 200 points were gone right then, and you were eliminated. The same was true if the frame cracked. Penalties ranged from the 200 points to 10. This was a good plan, as the Russians wanted to eliminate the trucks that couldn't be operated over their roads. We must give them credit for figuring out a way to find out which were the good trucks. Our only penalty was a 10 for filling the radiator.

"Our start was made with a load of about 3600 pounds, including parts, spare tires, 2200 pounds of sand and three men. We ran between 750 and 800 miles with the load and then took the load off. The idea back of this was to shake the trucks to pieces, if possible, by running them empty over the bumps.

"It was a wild race all the way, a case of dog eat dog. For the last 60 miles there were five of us in front, and a blanket 250 feet long would have covered us all. There were the two Russian trucks in the lead, two German trucks and the Graham Brothers truck. Through a misunderstanding, we had entered only one truck, which automatically eliminated us from a chance to get the grand prize.

An Exciting Finish.

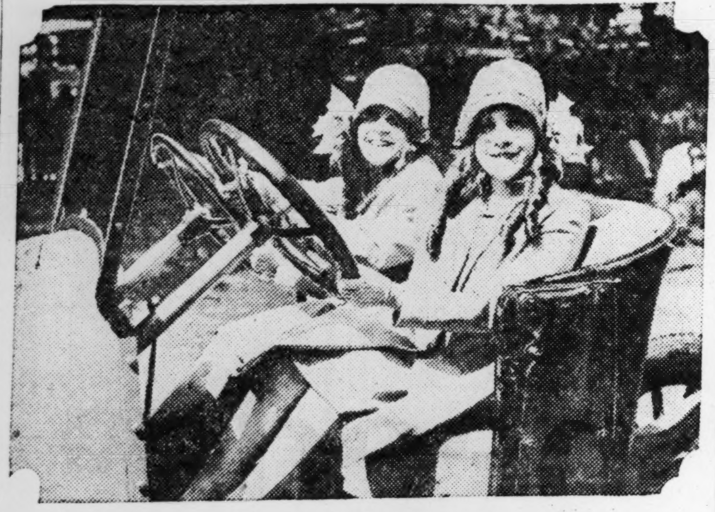
"That last 60 miles was the most exciting run I expect ever to make. We were doing 40 to 45 miles an hour over a frightful road. We were fifth, within a few feet of one of the German trucks, which suddenly began to slow up. Within three miles of the finish it had thrown a connecting rod and had to pull out. We swung out and passed at full speed. There was another German truck right behind us that had been trying for miles to get us, and we did not dare to slow down. We tore down a long hill with a sharp curve and a railroad track at the bottom, and that German truck behind us went at least three feet in the air when it hit the track.

"We finished fourth, right on the tail lights of the two Russian trucks and the one German car.

"After the long run we had a 'bad roads' contest, a trip around Moscow, they called it. The Russians had picked out the worst roads they could find for this test. There was one particularly bad place. The Russian trucks had been over the route before and knew how to avoid it. We had to get off the road and go over the hill through the woods. This was the slipperiest mud I ever have seen, and at one place we had a slant of 40 degrees to one side. Some of the trucks simply couldn't make it. One American truck had to be pulled out. The two Italian trucks were completely done.

"Here the Graham Brothers truck certainly showed what it could do. There was a 25 per cent grade, and we put on our chains and made it with the full load."

Twin Drives Car for First Time



One of these young women is driving an automobile for the first time in her life. She is Daisy Hilton, one of the Texas Twins. She and her sister, Violet, have been joined together since birth at the bases of the spines. Because Daisy is the right hand twin, she always has had to sit in the passenger's seat while Violet drove. But recently, in California, the Howard Automobile Co., Buick distributer, solved the problem. The Buick used by the twins has double control, and is used to teach new drivers how to handle a car. Violet is seen giving Daisy her first lesson in driving at the wheels of the double-control Buick.

CONCRETE ROADS GROW TIRED AS PEOPLE DO

Real Fatigue Develops Under Too Heavy Traffic and Pavement Cracks.

Like motorists who ride over them, concrete roads get "tired" and require periods of rest that they may recuperate, Prof. S. S. Steinberg of the University of Maryland and assistant director of the Highway Research Board of the National Research Council, has discovered.

"Considerable attention is being given to determining the causes of cracking in concrete roads," said Prof. Steinberg. "The extent of cracks in a slab is dependent on the underlying soil, the quality of the concrete and the loads the pavement must bear. When a vehicle passes over a concrete pavement the slab is deflected. The result is that under traffic the road is subjected to a wave action, the slab rising and falling with each passage of a wheel. On roads under heavy traffic at high speeds this motion may be repeated many hundred times an hour.

"Experiments simulating these field conditions result in the discovery that concrete is subject to fatigue, which, in many respects, is similar to muscular fatigue in human beings. After continued rapid application of load the normal elastic properties of the concrete are overcome and the fatigue limit is reached. The result is a break in the concrete and the appearance of a crack in the road.

"The similarity to muscular fatigue is further evidenced by the fact that if before failure the concrete is permitted to have long periods of rest, it recovers its ability to resist the applied forces, and the fatigue limit, or life of the slab, is extended."

A recent improvement described by Prof. Steinberg is a new kind of cement which gives to concrete greater strength in 24 hours than is developed by the ordinary cement in 28 days. This opens up remarkable possibilities in hurrying road construction.

HOW 1906 CAR PROVED IT BEAT 'MULE POWER'

Derisive Fair Crowd Changed Tune When It Outpulled Team of 20 Mules.

Twenty years ago the people of Michigan had to be shown just how much real horsepower an automobile could generate. At the Central Michigan Fair, in 1906, the Olds Motor Works staged a demonstration which went the horsepower one better by substituting mules. Before a crowd that was at first composed of scoffers but later became convinced believers, a four-cylinder Oldsmobile pulled 20 mules off their feet.

At that time the fair grounds adjoined the plant of the Olds Motor Works. The horse-loving citizens who attended the fair derided the adjoining auto factory and its chug-chugging product.

Factory officials heard the jibes and decided to teach them a lesson. Twenty mules were obtained and hitched to the rear of the automobile. Four passengers, including the driver, got in the Oldsmobile and, as the last bet was being made, the starter gave the word to go.

At the word "Getup," accompanied by touches of whips, the 20 mules leaned on their collars and pulled. At the same time the Oldsmobile driver let in his clutch and turned on the gas. Slowly but surely the 20 mules started slipping backward, despite their efforts to go the other way.

That was one of the ways automobile enthusiasts had to prove cars had real "horsepower" to the doubting Thomases 20 years ago.

KELLERMAN CHIEF SPEAKER BEFORE MEMPHIS DEALERS

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 17.—Joseph N. Kellerman of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. of St. Louis was the chief speaker at the annual banquet of the Memphis Automobile Dealers' Association Monday night.

The whole sales structure of the automotive industry, said Kellerman, is settling down on a basis of solid facts. The right price, the right product, the right financial accommodation — these are the present day necessities. Kellerman emphasized the need of organization by automobile dealers, saying that the dealer who was willing to accept its benefits, but would not do his share of organization work was a poor sort.

He discussed ways and means to meet automobile merchandising problems, especially the trading and disposal of used cars, then took up the proper mode of compensation for automobile salesmen which he declared was, as a rule, handled in the poorest way.

Kellerman expressed the opinion that while no one plan could meet all situations, yet it was possible to work out compensation methods that would be fair to employes and employers alike. Such a plan, he said, would result in directing the greatest effort where it was most needed to solve sales problems.

Harter B. Hull was elected president of the Memphis dealers' association.

MIDNIGHT SALE OF AUTO IN ST. LOUIS TO NORWEGIAN

An unusual automobile sale was made Wednesday night at 11:30 o'clock by F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., liver oil in the world. Isdahl was in Ltd., Bergen, Norway. Isdahl & Co., Ltd., is the largest manufacturer, presser and refiner of cod liver oil in the world. Itdahl was in St. Louis on his annual visit, and was the guest of Carl F. G. Meyer, president of Meyer Bros. Drug Co., with which Isdahl & Co. has done business for 75 years.

Wednesday evening Meyer entertained Isdahl and a party at the University Club and Vesper was among the guests. Isdahl had ridden in Meyer's new Buick sedan—and was impressed with its performance. During the evening he discussed Buick automobiles at some length with Vesper and decided to buy a car like the one Meyer is driving—a Master Six five-passenger sedan.

When the party broke up he and Vesper walked to the Vesper-Buick showroom and after an examination of the models, Isdahl placed an order and gave Vesper a check in full.

The car will be delivered to Isdahl in Bergen through the General Motors Export Corporation.

MANY CHEMICALS USED IN BATTERY WITHOUT ACID

Special chemical coating on the plates and use in the plates of ferrous oxide, oxides of lead, copper sulphate and other chemicals not used in plates of wet batteries are responsible for long life and recuperative power of the Howland battery, which requires neither acid nor water, according to W. H. Burke, president of the Howland Battery Corporation.

The electrolyte, which replaces the liquids used in wet batteries or the gelatinous substance in the so-called "jelly" batteries, contains a considerable amount of ground glass, together with acetic acid, tanic acid, silicate of soda, barium sulphate and nine or ten other chemicals. This compound is poured into the rubber case in plastic form and into this the plates are forced. Throughout the life of the battery, this substance remains in this solid form; preventing "shorting" of plates, eliminating the use of liquid acid and the necessity of adding water.

This battery construction is patented. Before patenting, the Howland battery was given a road test for five years as well as exhaustive laboratory tests.

'WATCH CASE' VULCANIZING UNITS FOR COOPER TIRES

An addition is being made to the Cooper tire factory at Findlay, O., to house a battery of watch case vulcanizing units, a new method of making tires, especially the smaller sizes. A "watch case" unit consists of two steam jacket molds, combined on one stand and held in a vertical position. The workmen are never required to handle the iron mold, but, instead unfasten four bolts which allow half of the mold to swing out on a hinge, like a watch case. The tire is removed and another tire placed in the mold, the open half is swung shut and the four bolts again tightened. A vulcanized tire can be removed, an unvulcanized tire placed in the mold and the mold bolted shut in less than two minutes. The mold is always hot, the steam never has to be turned off nor the mold cooled as was the case in former vulcanizing processes.

NEW APPARATUS DEVISED FOR CLEANING RADIATORS

A new method of cleaning the interior radiators is in use by E. F. Maurer, Inc., 1916 Olive street. The apparatus used, according to Maurer, has been installed heretofore only in shops in Dallas, Tex., and Oklahoma City. It consists of a tank of alkali solution and a powerful centrifugal pump. Connection is made with the bottom of a radiator and the solution is driven through the radiator backward, flushing and cleaning it of dirt, scale, rubber fragments and grease. Then the radiator is flushed over and over again with clear water. The new method, according to Maurer, is far superior to any other he has used or seen.

STATE HIGHWAY ENGINEER TALKS TO ACCESSORY MEN

S. M. Rudder, chief engineer of the Missouri State Highway Commission, and J. H. Rabe, general sales manager of the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., were speakers Thursday night at a dinner meeting of the Automotive Accessory Association of St. Louis, at Hotel Claridge. Dan T. Hyland, president of the association, presided. It was announced that the annual boat excursion would be held July 27. The Evwalt Sales Co., Spaulding Bros. Standard Auto Parts Co., Johnston Bros. Tire and Service Co., Heintz Steel and Manufacturing Co. and Auto Parts Co., were admitted as members.

TATE CO. HELPED MANY CAR OWNERS GET LICENSES

Notice was given by mail to all Dodge car owners in the city that the Tate Motor Co. would get for them their new city and State licenses, to save them the annoyance of fighting through the crowd at the City Hall.

Considerably more than 1000 Dodge car users took advantage of this offer, which involved over $22,747.

In addition, over 600 new cars sold after Jan. 1 were fitted with licenses purchased by the Tate Motor Co., Inc., for the customers. This involved $13,500 additional cash outlay.

AUBURN SALES CHIEF HERE

Neil McDarby, general sales manager of the Auburn Automobile Co. of Auburn, Ind., was in St. Louis the past week to see Joseph A. Schlecht, head of the Mound City Auto Co., Auburn distributer. McDarby, who was on his way to Memphis, said that business conditions were good and that the demand for automobiles was unusually strong for the first part of the year. Auburn car sales, he said, had been 300 per cent larger the first quarter than for the same three months last year.

What's New in Cars

New Champion Sedan Body for Ford Chassis

An attractive new de luxe sedan body for Ford chassis is being shown by the Champion Body Co., 3147 Locust boulevard. It is elaborately appointed, the upper part of the body and the cowl being done in black weather-proof glove finish fabric, while the rear quarters are ornamented with landau irons. Running boards and fenders are wide, the hood is high, and the whole body is streamlined, while there is an aluminum bead moulding. The visor is integral with the roof, as is custom built practice on a number of costly cars. Barrel type headlights are included. The hood is fastened with big car type fasteners.

Upholstery is velour, while the interior trim is in walnut finish. A dome light, a rounded fabric finish inner cowl, and attractive hardware, are features.

On the rear is a large trunk, in the upper half of which is a gasoline tank whose botto mis full 16 inches higher than the carburetor. The lower part of the trunk is for luggage.

This new sedan body is said to weigh the same as the standard Ford coupe body, the fabric finish enabling the saving of considerable weight.

CAR ARRIVES IN MOUNTAIN TOWN ON BACKS OF MULES

Cecilville, a mining town in Siskiyou County, California, has its first and only motor car, which arrived recently on the backs of nine mules and is now making frequent trips over the only available stretch of road of seven miles between Cecilville and Summerville, the home of the Farnsworth brothers, who own the car.

When the Farnsworths bought their Star touring car at Eureka they started home over the Pacific highway. Up the Klamath River Highway and over Bald Mountain they sped. Even when they arrived at Sawyer's Bar, they had a branch road that had just been built by the forest service. Up this they drove until it ended, then for two miles they clambered over a trail through the hills, but driving ended there.

They were still a long ways from Cecilville and no wheeled vehicle was ever driven there from the outside.

A pack of mules still carries in the supplies and the mail three times a week in Western style of the days of '49. They took the Star to pieces and the pieces had to weigh not more than 350 pounds each for that is the limit that a good mule can pack over the Cecilville trail. The body was too big, so it was sawed in two pieces.

BUILDING HEALTH
SINCE 1873

The human system demands certain foods rich in health-building vitamins to assure health and normal growth.

Eminent scientists agree that cod-liver oil is one of the greatest forms of concentrated medicinal food ever discovered.

Scott's Emulsion contains cod-liver oil, also glycerine and hypophosphites of lime and soda, a combination that seldom fails to bring the desired result. Millions have successfully used this vital food-tonic since 1873. It is a creamy, white, easily taken health-builder—just what is needed for those who are run-down.

You will never regret your having taken Scott's Emulsion of invigorating cod-liver oil yourself or having given it to your child.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 478M Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

PUBLIC INTEREST IN AUTOMOBILES KEENER THAN EVER

Enthusiasm Over Cars and All Aspects of Motoring Continues to Increase Rapidly.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The man who said the automobile would settle down to become a commonplace of daily life like the street car or the telephone has taken a back seat with the group that once talked about the saturation point. This is the conclusion reached by those who have observed the increasing wave of enthusiasm over automobiles and all aspects of motoring.

One of the most striking evidences of the continued enthusiasm for automobiles is the willingness of the public to trade in cars that still are good. The motorist wants the latest and the best value. He is willing to assume a loss on the old car, or to scrap transportation value, to avail himself of the newer advantages.

This one trend has banished fear of a saturation point in sales and production of new motor cars. For years economists have said that there would come a time when all who could own cars would have them. New sales would then be slowed down until the old cars were worn out, they maintained. The fact is, however, the motorist does not wait until the old car wears out. A new one comes along with certain new features which he desires. He buys a new car and figures the investment a paying one.

Safety features are making an irresistible appeal to the motorist this year and are serving to stimulate enthusiasm. There are many things he used to avoid because he feared cars were not safe enough. He left the car at home in rainy weather because he feared a skid. He avoided traffic because he could not stop quickly enough for comfort. He kept down the speed on long trips, even though he needed to reach his destination as quickly as possible, because he was afraid of the consequences of a collision.

One close observer of conditions says that this year many persons have gone on the closed-car basis because it has been demonstrated to their satisfaction that closed cars are among the safest cars on the road.

With stronger frames, bumpers all around, front, back and sides, and with brakes that always are in adjustment and invariably reliable, collisions are becoming less and less serious. The element of fear is disappearing, and even the timid are taking the wheel in an effort to satisfy the age-old desire for personal transportation.

Fads come and go, this observer says, but the appeal of the automobile becomes stronger and stronger. This is demonstrated convincingly by the fact that in the face of one of the greatest developments and diversions the world has ever known—the radio—automobile sales have increased at a rate hitherto unknown.

The appeal of the automobile is being analyzed. A preliminary report sheds much light upon the present increasing wave of motor popularity. It reads:

"Automobile ownership is a sign of personal prosperity, since it indicates earning power.

"The automobile satisfies wanderlust.

"The automobile satisfies, with the greatest degree of safety, the inborn desire for speed.

"With an automobile, a family can progress socially, physically and mentally.

"Independence is satisfied through car ownership.

"Human beings want playthings. The automobile is the most interesting plaything of all time.

"Through the automobile, the public obtains many outstanding advantages. Good roads, modern hotels, suburban home developments all came with the automobile.

Families are kept closer together because of the automobile and the transportation it affords.

"The automobile affords employment for millions, stimulates and assists business."

The price cuts following the record business in 1925 have served to remind the public that values are in direct proportion to the demand for cars. Many are buying cars this year, taking advantage of the prosperity of the automobile industry last year, confident that their buying now will be reflected next year in still greater values and more complete cars.

It first was thought that the plan adopted by several manufacturers of discontinuing the practice of bringing out yearly models would stem the tide of interest in cars, but now it seems that the slightest change in car construction or design attracts attention. When a conservative company changes the type of wheel or makes even a minor improvement in the engine, interest is aroused.

The idea that nothing new is possible in car construction or in motoring has been shelved and in its stead has grown up a new enthusiasm and determination to have even more radical improvements. Current models show what has been accomplished within the past few months, and motorists are eager to keep the automobile industry prosperous so that they, in turn, can benefit by the inevitable improvements as time goes on.

The biggest improvements in all automotive history have come about since the rise of the great wave of car popularity. Four-wheel brakes, balloon tires, closed cars at open-car prices, automatic chassis lubrication, economical yet tremendously powerful engines, perfected clutches, indestructible body finishes—all are the products of the past two years. Enthusiasm for the automobile is unquestionably the underlying reason.

Plainly, the motoring public wants more improvements, and knows how to get them.

Evansville-Indianapolis Busses.

A regular bus line between Evansville, Ind., and Indianapolis, a run of about 200 miles, has been started.

Kansas Plans Much Paving.

Kansas will have 8640 miles of paved highway in 1940, according to Walter Van Buck, State Highway Engineer.

DEALERS ASSERT TIRES ARE MADE IN TOO MANY SIZES

To substantiate his assertion that the sizes of automobile tires may be standardized and materially condensed, George J. Burger, secretary-treasurer of the National Tire Dealers' Association, has compiled figures which show that there are 23 different sizes of balloon tires, but that on 46 out of 93 makes of cars using balloon tires only three sizes are used. Furthermore, five sizes are used by 54 makes and six sizes by 61 makes. In other words, there are 17 sizes of balloon tires made for one-third of the cars using this type of equipment. There are 17 sizes and 32 cars on which they may be used, less than two cars for each size. As a matter of fact 10 sizes are used on only one car each, while five more are used on only two cars.

Conditions such as this, Burger says, represent an economic waste in every department of tire production and distribution.

In February 82 per cent of all cars sold by General Motors were closed cars, compared with 54 per cent in February, 1925, 38 per cent in 1924, 35 per cent in 1923 and per cent in 1922.

I Am Going To Find Out

I hear a lot these days about Dilution Eliminators . . . Air Cleaners and other jim cracks with funny names in automobiles . . . what do they mean? . . . what, if anything, do they do? . . . why are they? . . . who has them and who has not? . . . and what's the difference anyway?

I am going to find out.

Jack, who drives a Rickenbacker . . . and who is a hopeless bug on the subject . . . tells me Rickenbacker was first to discover . . . and to incorporate . . . all these devices in his car.

He insists that Rickenbacker was first to introduce all the really important refinements in automobiles since the war . . . and of the lot, he says the Air Cleaner and Dilution Eliminator do more to reduce upkeep cost and prolong the life of the engine than anything else that has been done since Otto built his first gas-engine.

I have had my doubts as to the genuineness of these things . . . but then, I had my doubts about 4-wheel brakes when Rickenbacker came out with that improvement . . . that was three years ago.

Get sore every time I think about that . . . Skeptical myself, I was an easy mark for a dealer who told me brakes on the front were the bunk . . . Bought a two-brake car just before that very maker changed to 4-wheel brakes . . . took a loss of sixty per cent in a year on that deal.

Didn't do much better next time . . . Bought a car with four brakes . . . but they didn't always act on four wheels at the same time! . . . Have a bad habit of grabbing, too . . . Jack says the only kind that never grab and always take hold evenly, are internal expanding, rigid-shoe brakes . . . quite a mouthful that . . . not sure just what it all means . . . going to find out though.

Jack tells me so many things about this Rickenbacker . . . it's hard to believe any one car can possess so many points of superiority over all others . . . but I'm going to find out.

My curiosity is aroused . . . going to satisfy it before I let anyone sell me any car.

Need one right now, too . . . Old boat is costing too much for upkeep . . . needs a lot of new parts . . . complete overhauling, the garage-man says . . . and after all that expense it will still be an old car . . . out of date in a lot of ways . . . especially in the body.

I like that new Rickenbacker Sedan . . . stopped and looked into one today standing in front of the club . . . exquisitely finished . . . she will go crazy over that one . . . every last detail done to the queen's taste . . . that's her . . . Best cloth I ever felt . . . and I know silk mohair when I see it . . . none better made.

Jack says that's true of the car all the way through . . . he ought to know . . . Jack can afford the price of any car he takes a notion to . . . says he bought his Rickenbacker without thinking of price . . . on performance and quality . . . saved two thousand dollars, too!

I've had a leaning toward that Rickenbacker for several years now . . . liked it, first time I ever saw it.

Aggravates me sometimes, though . . . glides past me on the road like greased lightning . . . a swish and she is gone! In traffic too, . . . gets away from scratch like a thing possessed.

When one does that . . . or slides up a hill . . . passing me as if I were standing still . . . I ache to get my own hands on that wheel . . . that is my kind of a car.

Going to find out about this . . . going to drive a Rickenbacker myself . . . nobody but her along . . . she knows cars, too . . . between us we can do our own buying without help from any salesman.

Want no trick demonstrator, either . . . I've been kidded by experts in that line . . . I want a car that will do as I want it to do . . . with my own driving . . . going to phone the Rickenbacker dealer to have a car ready for me to drive . . . right now.

Let's see . . . Rickenbacker St. Louis Company . . . represents Rickenbacker here . . . salesroom is at 2218 Locust St. . . . Phone number is . . . CEntral 1852.

Rickenbackers are made in "Sixes" and "Vertical Eights"—all popular body types—prices range from $1695 to $2595—f. o. b. Detroit, plus tax

NOTED OPERA SINGERS IN KSD OFFERINGS

"Rhapsody in Blue" Will Be One of Several Features on the Studio Programs.

Mme. Frances Alda, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and John Corigliano, violinist, will share honors in tonight's Atwater Kent program to be broadcast from New York through Station KSD. This is the outstanding event of the week in the remote control schedule of broadcasting through Station KSD. The "Marriage of Figaro," the old Mozart opera, which is to be presented by the WEAF Grand Opera Company tomorrow night under the direction of Cesare Sodero, also will be of much interest. Giuseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Elvira Boni, soprano, and Carl Rollins, baritone, will have the usual leading parts, and Nino Ruisi, basso, will sing the role of "Figaro." In the Eveready Hour which will be broadcast through KSD on Tuesday night "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" will be the entertainment offered. The story as depicted in Robert Browning's poem will be given, accompanied by the Eveready Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Max Jacobs, and the singers will be Betsy Ayres, soprano; Rose Bryant, contralto; Charles Harrison, tenor, and Wilfred Glenn, basso.

Locally the outstanding feature will be the sensational "Rhapsody in Blue" by Gershwin, which has created such a furore in the East in the last few months. This will be presented in the KSD studio Thursday night at 7:30 by Esmeralda Berry Mayes, assisted on the second piano by Rose Hall. Tomorrow night, beginning at 7 p. m., KSD will broadcast a Daughters of the American Revolution program from Washington, D. C. An address by President Coolidge is scheduled for this occasion. At 10 o'clock the Business Men's Glee Club of Centralia, Ill., under the direction of Ralph A. Pixley, director of the Centralia Conservatory of Music, will give a program, assisted by Fayette Rexford, baritone; Gladys E. Everts, violinist, and Helen Wilson, soprano.

Eugene Enzinger, one of the favorite St. Louis choir singers and concert artists, will give the "Commerce Hour" program on Friday night, assisted by Mrs. Frank A. Habig at the piano. There will be a program by Hotel Statler Concert Orchestra in the interval between two New York programs on Wednesday night and the Grand Central Theater program will be broadcast from 7 to 7:45 on Saturday night.

CHOPPING THE SIGNALS

A small split-phase motor operating a sausage grinding machine in a meat market in Tucson, Ariz., was found to be the cause of a considerable amount of the radio interference reported by fans in that locality, according to a report received by the Commerce Department from its radio inspector who covers that region. The inspector reported that the proprietor of the market complied with the inspector's suggestions and as a result all of the interference in that locality was eliminated.

The Straight Line Condenser.

The effect produced by the use of the straight line frequency condenser is that all stations are found equally along the dial. This is accomplished by designing the shape of the condenser plates according to a formula involving a series of hyperbolic spirals.

NOTED OPERA SINGERS IN KSD OFFERINGS

"Rhapsody in Blue" Will Be One of Several Features on the Studio Programs.

Mme. Frances Alda, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and John Corigliano, violinist, will share honors in tonight's Atwater Kent program to be broadcast from New York through Station KSD. This is the outstanding event of the week in the remote control schedule of broadcasting through Station KSD. The "Marriage of Figaro," the old Mozart opera, which is to be presented by the WEAF Grand Opera Company tomorrow night under the direction of Cesare Sodero, also will be of much interest. Giuseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Elvira Boni, soprano, and Carl Rollins, baritone, will have the usual leading parts, and Nino Ruisi, basso, will sing the role of "Figaro." In the Eveready Hour which will be broadcast through KSD on Tuesday night "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" will be the entertainment offered. The story as depicted in Robert Browning's poem will be given, accompanied by the Eveready Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Max Jacobs, and the singers will be Betsy Ayres, soprano; Rose Bryant, contralto; Charles Harrison, tenor, and Wilfred Glenn, basso.

Locally the outstanding feature will be the sensational "Rhapsody in Blue" by Gershwin, which has created such a furore in the East in the last few months. This will be presented in the KSD studio Thursday night at 7:30 by Esmeralda Berry Mayes, assisted on the second piano by Rose Hall. Tomorrow night, beginning at 7 p. m., KSD will broadcast a Daughters of the American Revolution program from Washington, D. C. An address by President Coolidge is scheduled for this occasion. At 10 o'clock the Business Men's Glee Club of Centralia, Ill., under the direction of Ralph A. Pixley, director of the Centralia Conservatory of Music, will give a program, assisted by Fayette Rexford, baritone; Gladys E. Everts, violinist, and Helen Wilson, soprano.

Eugene Enzinger, one of the favorite St. Louis choir singers and concert artists, will give the "Commerce Hour" program on Friday night, assisted by Mrs. Frank A. Habig at the piano. There will be a program by Hotel Statler Concert Orchestra in the interval between two New York programs on Wednesday night and the Grand Central Theater program will be broadcast from 7 to 7:45 on Saturday night.

CHOPPING THE SIGNALS

A small split-phase motor operating a sausage grinding machine in a meat market in Tucson, Ariz., was found to be the cause of a considerable amount of the radio interference reported by fans in that locality, according to a report received by the Commerce Department from its radio inspector who covers that region. The inspector reported that the proprietor of the market complied with the inspector's suggestions and as a result all of the interference in that locality was eliminated.

The Straight Line Condenser.

The effect produced by the use of the straight line frequency condenser is that all stations are found equally along the dial. This is accomplished by designing the shape of the condenser plates according to a formula involving a series of hyperbolic spirals.

THE COUZENS IDEA

The creation of a commission on communications, which would take over the regulation of radio, telephones and telegraph, is sought in a bill which will be introduced in the near future by Senator James Couzens of Michigan.

Senator Couzens does not believe that the Secretary of Commerce or any other one man should have control of the regulation of broadcasting. He thinks that ultimately a communications commission will be necessary, and he is in favor of its immediate creation.

"I think Hoover has done a mighty good job of regulating broadcasting with the limited authority he has had," said the Michigan Senator. "But at the same time radio is growing so fast that nobody can tell where it will end up.

"I am not in favor of the commission proposed in the White bill. I think it is a makeshift proposition. Nor do I favor placing radio with the Interstate Commerce Commission. That body already has its hands full with the railroads.

"If we are going to pass a bill at all, we should make a good job of it. Too much is at stake for us to gamble with the public interest by enacting a haphazard, makeshift bill."

Eighty Feet Best for Aerial.

The usual length of a single wire aerial for the reception of radio broadcast signals is about 80 feet, while the usual length of a two-wire antenna is about 60.

1,000,000 SETS ON FARMS

In a report issued by the Department of Agriculture it is estimated that nearly 1,000,000 radio sets are now in use on farms throughout the country, based on investigation reports compiled during the last five years. The department estimates that in 1923 approximately 145,000 sets were in use, 365,000 in 1924 and in early 1925 about 553,000.

Farmers have bought during this period, the report says, sets selling at around $175 complete, with the tendency swinging to the lower-priced models because of improvement in this type.

The demand for market reports and other agricultural broadcast programs has so greatly increased that arragements have been made for the regular broadcasting of these features from about 60 stations since the first of the year. This increases the number of stations co-operating in the farm programs to about 160.

Ammonia water, quickly applied, will prevent damage from acid that may be dropped while taking a hydrometer reading of a wet battery.

EFFECT OF LONG LEADS

Not so long ago, a peculiar complaint came in from an owner of a six-tube, tuned radio-frequency set located several miles distant from the nearest broadcasting station. Without the antenna connected the set functioned fairly well, but with no startling volume. When the antenna was connected the receiver refused to work and the stations could barely be heard on the phones. After a careful check up of the tubes, B batteries, antenna, etc., it was found that the owner had located his storage battery at least 100 feet away in a small shed. The reason for this was that it made it easy for him to charge it on the Delco system which was used for lighting.

After some argument, the battery was brought into the house and connected directly to the set. The volume came up to what it should be and the antenna functioned perfectly. Apparently the long battery leads were acting as an antenna which was opposed to the regular antenna on the set and and the signal from the station was wiped out.

PREVENTING DAMAGE FROM BATTERY ACID

Quick Application of Ammonia Solution Will Often Check the Ruinous Corrosion.

If your radio has a storage battery, read this. It will explain what to do if battery liquid is spilled on carpet, rugs or clothing.

Liquid in a storage battery is diluted sulphuric acid. It will burn a hole in fabric the full size of the spot if not taken out immediately. And be certain the entire stain is out before pressing again.

When moving a storage battery in the house, do not carry it across rugs or carpet or place it where curtains and draperies will touch. Should some of the liquid be spilled on clothing or any fabric, carry out the following instructions immediately.

Mix household ammonia with cold water in equal parts. Place a white blotter under the spot where the liquid soiled the garment. Use a medicine dropper (like the kind once used to fill fountain pens) to saturate the portion covered with battery acid. The blotter beneath the spot will attract ammonia water through the fabric, washing out the acid. Tamp the top of the spot with cheesecloth to also absorb liquid from the cloth. Continue until certain the threads have been thoroughly washed clean of acid. Blot as dry as possible then hold before an electric fan until completely dry.

Battery acid is treacherous in its damage to fabric. A heavy acid stain may go unnoticed until the garment is laundered or dry cleaned and is ready for pressing. When heat of the iron or moisture from steam in pressing penetrates the cloth, a corrosive action starts immediate destruction of the fibers. If this happens, it is too late for laundering or dry cleaning—the cloth is ruined.

Where the color of the rug, carpet or garment is black or blue, don't consider because the shade is dark a spot or stain will not show. Later it will. Stains from battery acid will change blue or black to red when heat and moisture are applied.

A reputable dry cleaner may be able to restore "changed colors" by an alkali treatment if the fabrics is dry cleaned immediately. But tell him what caused the color to change—just say, "battery acid was spilled on it."

POWER COMPANY CO-OPERATES

Investigating a series of complaints from owners of radio sets in a Western city, radio inspectors of the Department of Commerce found that practically all of the reported interference was caused by leaky telephone ringing machines, power and telegraph lines, pole transformers and small motors, etc.

Complying with the trouble eliminating suggestions of the department's inspectors, one of the leading power companies volunteered to rebuild one of its 60,000-volts transmission lines. In addition, the company authorized the purchase of a superheterodyne radio set in order to patrol its lines in an effort to reduce to a minimum any interference which might be caused by its equipment.

COVERS CONTINENT ON 13-METER WAVE

Daylight Record of 3000 Miles Is Made by Navy Research Laboratory Set.

Recent radio tests between the naval stations at Bellevue, D. C., and Mare Island, Cal., have demonstrated that the use of the short wave lengths 13.1 and 13.4 meters is practical in daytime transcontinental radio communications, according to naval radio engineers. This is believed the first time signals have been transmitted successfully for 3000 miles in daylight on as low as 13.1 meters. Although the navy is proud of its achievement, it is planning to try out even lower channels to ascertain what short waves can be used practically.

The aim of this particular experiment at the naval research laboratory is toward economy, since short-wave messages can be transmitted with less power than when long waves are employed. The naval Annapolis arc station, for example, uses about 350 kilowatts in its long-range transmissions, whereas the recent tests succeeded in shooting code messages to San Francisco with around 250 watts. If this research work proves practical, it is hoped that eventually the navy may erect one-kilowatt transmitters, which can carry long distance on short waves. They would cost around $10,000 as against the present cost of high-powered long-wave stations approximating a million dollars. Such a saving would be far in advance of any practical economy plan contemplated and would be reflected also in the maintenance of stations, if only a hundredth or even a tenth of the power was required.

The naval radio engineers are seeking even shorter waves available for practical use in daylight. They are attempting to disprove a theory that the channels between 10 and 14 meters are useless for this type of service. Their present plans include tests with wave lengths around 10, 11 and 12 meters. These channels are being tested out experimentally, to pick out a practical short-wave route for day traffic. They are not assigned exclusively to the Navy. The present short waves allocated to the naval service lie within the 16.6 to 18.7; the 21.4 to 26.3; 33 to 37.5 and 66.3 to 75 meter bands.

Naval experts point out, however, that these short channels are useful only in point-to-point service. The vagaries of the short waves with their strange inaudibility at some points, make those channels impractical for broadcast purposes or transmitting general dispatches to the fleet, the ships of which are at different distances from the transmitting station. For service between certain points or to ships in known localities they prove very useful. When short-wave messages must be sent to several points or to a number of vessels at different distances from a station, four separate wave lengths are used simultaneously. At least one of the four wave lengths, it is calculated, will be available, so that every station and ship can pick up the general dispatch. Each operator figures out the most desirable channel for his location and distance and listens in on that alone.

The life of a "B" battery depends on the number of hours used, the number of tubes used and the way the grid return is connected.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. What can I do to take a loud hum out of my two-tube reflex set? F. W.

A. To tell you what to do to take the hum out of any set I would need more information than is given in your letter. The hum might be outside the set or in the set itself but the chances are as you make use of the reflex circuit the trouble is with the set. Most of the questions regarding howls and squeals that are received here are from owners of reflex sets. When you start to fool with any set that makes use of reflex, counterflex, introflex, duplex, biplex and all other "flexes" you are letting yourself in for a lot of trouble. There are some successful circuit reflex that have been developed by the leading radio engineers. The biggest trouble with most people who attempt to duplicate any of the successful reflex circuits are that they deviate in some way or other from the exact circuit and wiring as used by the engineer. To get results equal to those obtained from a successful reflex set you have to follow instructions to the smallest detail.

Q. What is meant by DX? 2. How can I reduce body capacity? 3. How can I make a simple loud speaker? 4. Give diagram of cheap one-tube set. 5. How can I make a two-tube set from my present one tube receiver? E. M. W.

A. The terms DX is used to indicate distance. A DX station is one that is a long distance away. 2. To reduce body capacity see that the movable plates of the variable condensers are connected to the ground side of the circuit. Also body capacity can be reduced by shielding the panel with copper or tin foil. 3. A loudspeaker can be made by attaching a horn to the receiver of the headphone providing there is enough volume coming from the phone. 4. Look over the back copies of the radio section of the Post-Dispatch. Several one-tube circuits have been given from time to time.

5. To make a two-tube set of your one-tube set, add one stage of audio frequency amplification.

Q. What kind of solution shall I put in rectifier jar for a battery charger?—R. D.

A. Use a solution of borax. The 20-Mule Team brand as sold in the neighborhood store is O K. Dissolve borax in the water until you reach the saturation point.

Q. On my crystal set I can only hear KFUO and KSD. What can I do to enable me to tune in the lower wave stations?—A. S. A.

A. Put a .001 MFD fixed condenser in series with your antenna lead.

Q. Is it possible to construct a fixed condenser of approximately 1 MFD capacity suitable for a battery eliminator? If so, please give proper constants. 2. Give constants for the construction of a 5 henry choke coil 3, etc.—F. S.

A. Yes, the condenser and choke coil and condenser can be constructed, but it is not advisable to do so. It is impossible to make them unless you have the use of laboratory instruments. Evidently you are thinking of building a B battery eliminator and making all the parts yourself. If you want to get good results, buy a good B battery eliminator kit, which contains all the parts necessary. If you would like to obtain better results, buy a manufactured B battery eliminator.

Q. What are the advantages, if any, of the flatwise wound inductance when used in a transmitting inductance? J. B.

A. The flatwise wound ribbon inductance has a lower distributed capacity than one wound edgewise.

Q. Is WDAF, Kansas City, now part of WEAF'S regular chain, or was it just connected to the circuit for one or two programs last week? G. H.

A. WDAF has contracted to take WEAF'S programs on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 to 10 p. m. Central Standard Time.

Q. What does the voltage of cell depend upon? J. R.

A. The voltage or emf of a cell depends upon the materials chosen for the electrodes and to some extent on the electrolyte, but not upon the shape or size of the electrodes.

Q. What size rheostat should be used to take care of three 20-A type tubes on one rheostat and two 201-A type tubes on one rheostat?

A. A six-ohm rheostat will do the work in both cases.

In charging a battery from an outside source the current should be limited to the proper rate in amperes by connecting a suitable resistance in series with the battery.

BOOTLEGGING WAVES MAY LEAD TO CHAOS

Action of WJAZ and KWKH in Seizing Channels Without Permit Is a Menace.

Possibly there was once only one bootlegger, but who can count them now? If the first bootleggers of the ether are successful in usurping channels assigned to other stations, many will follow and then chaos.

Stations WJAZ and KWKH are operating on a radio channel not assigned to them but allocated to Canada. How many more offenders there are is difficult to determine, but the Department of Commerce inspectors are listening in and logging all radio "bootleg" stations.

Much depends upon the decision of the Federal Judge in Chicago handling the WJAZ test case which is expected soon. If the decision is favorable to the Department of Commerce, upholding its right to designate specific wave channels to stations so that order in the air may be maintained, the situation may not get any worse, but if an adverse decision is handed down, dire results are expected. Many disgruntled station owners will probably start using such channels as they think most desirable, regardless of the department's assignments or regulations. This would soon create terrible interference among the existing stations. Such a move would undoubtedly inspire many of the [illegible] odd stations whose applications for licenses are held up because of the lack of open broadcasting channels, to turn on their transmitters and utilize any wave they saw fit. Such a condition would end broadcast reception for some time to come. As about half of the applicant stations are already equipped with apparatus, it is seen, that the situation is threatening, unless Congress in the next few weeks enacts controlling legislation.

Without the backing of the courts or Congress, Secretary Hoover fails to see how he could control the situation, if the stations started running wild. There would be bedlam in the air, without a semblance of aerial traffic control and some 700 stations would interfere with each other, on the [illegible] regular channels so that we could get nothing but whistles and howls as they clashed all over the country. This result would be practically the same even if only part of them broke over into other channels or the spaces in between them. Without a system, there would be dozens of broadcasters on the same wave length, and those located within about 500 miles of each other would interfere, preventing the reception of anything except local stations. We would then have the choice of tuning to it or packing our sets away.

One thing is certain: this state of affairs could not continue for long. It would defeat the very purpose of broadcasting, which, of course, is to insure general reception in all directions. The stations of consequence would have to get together to try to straighten out the tangle. High-power stations carrying advertising would be the first to demand a truce, fearing a loss of their advertising contracts.

In such a dilemma, some foresee the uniting of all the important high-power stations into a combination which would redistribute the wave lengths to suit their needs and proceed with their programs. They would blanket the small or less powerful stations trying to transmit on the same frequencies and create a virtual monopoly of the ther. This would probably please many and out would come the receiving sets again. However, before this was achieved there would be a period of non-reception worse by far than the recent spell this winter when we could not get anything. It would be different though; we could get everything—but nothing clearly or satisfactorily.

Some optimists remain who "pooh-pooh" anything like general piracy on the high etherial seas, believing that broadcasting has come to mean so much to all that few if any more stations will seek to disrupt the present fairly open highways of the air by usurping channels assigned to other stations even if the lid is blown off in Chicago and Congress is not sitting to hold it down.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR ST. LOUIS SHOW

Reports at Meeting Show That Half of Available Space Is Already Taken.

At a meeting held at the Claridge Hotel last Tuesday evening the St. Louis Radio Trades Association discussed and formulated plans for the annual Southwestern Radio Show to be held at the Coliseum in St. Louis next October.

The show this year will be under the direction and managership of a committee, headed by Robert W. Bennett, chairman appointed from the members of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association. Many reservations for space have already been received from prominent manufacturers and at the meeting several more booths were signed up for local representatives of radio mnaufacturers. More than half of the 116 booths available have been taken. It was decided to make May 1 the deadline for contracting for space and at that time to hold a drawing for the distribution of the most desirable booths.

The actual expenditures for running last year's show were $17,000 and the budget for this year was fixed at $17,500. It is hoped to make a profit over the running expenses by the sale of booths so that the receipts from ticket sales will be a clear gain for the Association. The show this year will be held at the Coliseum and immediately following the Veiled Prophet and the Chicago Radio Show which is to be held in the week of Oct. 11.

OPERATORS WATCH VOLUME CONTROL

Broadcasting Stations and Receiving Sets Employ Same Principle to Maintain Qualtiy.

By WILLIS P. CORWIN.

Volume control is one of the most important phases of the operation of a broadcasting station. Every moment during the broadcasting of a program a control operator has his eyes on a group of meters and measuring instruments and his hand on a knob which regulates the amount of amplification through the input amplifier to the radio transmitter. Too much amplification means poor quality and too little permits the tube and static noises to predominate.

Volume of signals may be measured directly in terms of either voltage or current and a device that works on this principle, known as a volume control indicator, is used by the most modern broadcasting stations to accurately check the signal strength. The unit used in measuring volume is in terms of the loss caused by the resistance in a mile of standard telephone cable. However, the term is rather difficult to understand without making a study of details that have no particular bearing upon the subject of volume control. So for the sake of simplicity let us use one as a unit of signal strength.

Assuming that the maximum amount of volume that can be put into a radio transmitter without causing distortion is 100 the first level above zero is that caused by microphonic tube noises. This is shown in Fig. 1 by the first line above the base line and as having an intensity of 5. Generally the tube noises are on such a low level that they need not be considered, though a bad tube is encountered occasionally which causes a noise that rises above the maximum noise level and must be replaced.

The next level above that of the tube noises is the commutator ripple or alternating current hum at 10. After this comes the noise level of the microphone with an intensity of 15. If broadcasting is being done from a remote control station line noises enter into the problem and may be above or below the other levels depending upon the length of the line used. On the chain broadcasting from New York this level is usually higher than any of the other noise levels due to the long-distance lines. This latter accounts for the peculiar noise one hears during the intermissions between numbers on the WEAF programs besides the commutator ripple. At such times the microphone and amplifier is cut off at New York and local tube noises are submerged by the line and commutator noises.

The engineers maintaining the equipment of a station hold the noise levels as low as possible and in considering volume control they go by the level of the strongest noise that is present. Preliminary tests are made at a station to determine the lowest level at which the broadcasting material must be held in order to override the noises. At the same time the maximum level is found. With these two positions marked or noted on the volume-control indicator, the operator regulates the amount of amplification through the input amplifier to the radio transmitter so that the signal strength is always between these limits.

When broadcasting first started the radio transmitters were rather crude and because of their limitations the operators tried to maintain all reproductions on the same level. This method destroyed all the expression of music. The most modern transmitters have been designed to cover as wide a range of volume as is practical and necessary for good expression. Working between the maximum and minimum limits, as shown on the drawing in Fig. 1, permits a sufficient range of volume to make a reproduction so near the original that one can hardly tell the difference by ear. The same principle of volume control applies to the receiver. Tubes, bad batteries and battery connections, electrical disturbances and static make us the noise levels. Static, of course, is variable, being weakest during the cold winter months and strongest during the late spring and summer. The electrical disturbances caused by defectives appliances and power leaks are more or less variable and often tune to some definite wave length. These levels are shown in Fig. 2 and represented as being variable by the small arrows.

In tuning in a station one tries to hold the volume strong enough to override static, being careful not to overload the loudspeaker. Some stations, including locals, come on on a higher level than others farther away and with less power. When tuning to a distant station it is useless to try to appreciate a program when the signal level is the same or lower than the strongest noise. In operating a receiving set one has not the many delicate measuring instruments as has the broadcasting control operator so he judges the volume levels by ear.

Cause of "Dead Spots."

"Dead spots" in metropolitan areas can not be eliminated without removing the large steel structures. Large steel-frame buildings and other metallic structures are the causes of this phenomenon.

CONTROLLING VOLUME ON LOCAL STATIONS

Method to Supplant Rheostat or Potentiometer Improves Quality and Sharpens Tuning.

Every good radio set has some means of volume control for increasing or decreasing the amount of amplification. A potentiometer across the filament circuit with the center arm connected to the grid returns of the auto-frequency amplifiers is one of the popular methods of volume control. Potentiometers or high noninductive resistances in various positions are also used for this purpose as are filament-control rheostats.

Regardless of what method is used in a receiver of the five-tube radio-frequency type, one has more or less trouble in holding the volume from the local stations down to the level where good quality is obtainable. An excellent method of accomplishing this is to break the filament circuit of the first tube. This may be done by inserting a filament switch in series with one of the filament leads to the first tube.

Cutting out the first radio-frequency tube by this method permits the grid and plate of the tube to remain in the circuit and act as a small condenser between the antenna coupler and second stage of radio amplification. The tuning element of the first stage then acts as a wave filter, permitting much sharper tuning. At the same time the absence of the first stage of radio-amplification reduces the volume to such an extent that overloading of the loud speaker is impossible.

When one is so situated that he cannot tune out one local station and get another, this system will often do the trick. Reducing the volume to such an extent also cuts down the static and noise levels so that they do not interfere with the reception. The quality obtainable with such an arrangement is as clear and distinct as when listening with a crystal set. This method, however, is to supplant the regular volume control rather than to replace it, as it works only on local stations.

CONDITIONS IN SOUTH RETARD RADIO GROWTH

Real Estate Booms and Static Prevent Rapid Increase in Listener Interest.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Static and real estate have tended to suppress any rapid growth of native radio interest in the far South, according to W. E. Downey, technical radio expert of the Department of Commerce. Static has retarded the interest in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama and real estate has left Floridans little time to think about super-heterodynes and neutrodynes.

Of all the cities that he visited in a recent tour of Southern radio districts, Mr. Downey declared Atlanta was the only live broadcasting center, comparable to the radio cities of the North and East.

As far as broadcast listening is concerned, the South Atlantic States are by far the most desirable tuning-in localities of the United States, Mr. Downey explained.

"Persons living in these States, the Carolinas, Virginia and Northern Florida, have the whole world within reach of their sets," he said. "There are no powerful local stations to interfere with reception and the radio weather is about as consistent as in the North and Middle West."

Mr. Downey further explained that many listeners with whom he had talked in these States were opposed to any new stations which would shake up their present mode of listening.

The worst static conditions Mr. Downey experienced were during his tour of inspection in New Orleans.

With respect to radio conditions in Florida, Mr. Downey explained that, despite the anxiety of interests to obtain broadcasting licenses, there is only a very small amount of listener-interest in the State.

The Microfarad.

A "microfarad" is a unit of capacity. It is equivalent to one-millionth of a "farad." Micromicrofarad is a millionth of a millionth of a farad.

WHEN RADIO AIDS HUMANITY'S CAUSE

How Broadcast Messages Enabled a Lighthouse Keeper to Go to His Dying Wife.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Another chapter has been added to the history of service that the radio has rendered in the name of humanity, according to the Bureau of Lighthouses of the Department of Commerce. During December of last year (one month after the last mail until spring had left) Passage Island Lighthouse at the northern most end of Lake Superior, the lighthouse superintendent at Detroit, Mich., received a special delivery letter informing him that Mrs. Thompson, wife of the keeper at Passage Island Lighthouse, was dying at Marquette and desired her husband to come at once, if possible.

In order to get this information to the keeper it would have been necessary to send a tug from Port Arthur, the nearest mailing point, about 42 miles distant.

Two local broadcasting stations in Detroit broadcast the information relative to the keeper's wife, and included a statement by the superintendent that the keeper's leave of absence was authorized. This broadcast was also sent from the Navy Radio Station at Whitefish Point on Lake Superior about the same time.

A vessel in the neighborhood of the lighthouse picked up the message at once and notified the keeper. Later the same evening a radio message was received by the suprintendent from another vessel informing him that the keeper had been taken off the station and was en route to Marquette.

The keeper reached Marquette the next day and was able to comfort his dying wife during her last hours.

A Record Made a Verdict Rendered

Here is a record to make you pause:

70,599 Dodge Brothers Motor Cars and Graham Brothers Trucks sold in the United States from January 2nd to April 3rd, 1926!

The greatest quarter in the company's history.

37 per cent greater than the same period last year, when 51,318 units were sold.

This record was a foregone conclusion. Since the first of the year demand increased week by week.

Each period showed greater sales than the one preceding and greater than the same period of 1925.

During the last week recorded, ending April 3rd, 9,104 units were sold, against 6,530 for the best week last year—a gain of 39 per cent.

Sales figures are an index to the buyer's preference.

Buyer's preference, these days, springs from clean-cut convictions on quality and comparative worth, penny for penny.

It is inspired by a careful appraisal of such advantages as the greater safety of Dodge Brothers all steel bodies—

The wealth of Chrome Vanadium Steel employed in the manufacture of these cars—

Their low initial cost, thanks to huge production created by demand—

Their long life and high re-sale value.

On this basis the logical preference is for Dodge Brothers Motor Cars.

Although the peak of the selling season has not yet been reached, the verdict has already been rendered.

WOMAN WINS AT HORSE SHOW

Mme. G. E. Lang Triumphs Over Male Competitors in Paris.

PARIS, April 17.—One more sport where women need no longer fear men's competition, is the comment of the local press on the victory at the aristocratic Paris horse show of Mme. G. E. Lang, who took her mount faultlessly over a dozen different test barriers to win the Seine Departmental Council's prize. Madame Lang won from more than 30 male competitors. This is the first time a woman has carried such a competition.

Beside negotiating the jumps, Madame Lang had to satisfy the judges, who gave a severe inspection on form and presentation to her mount, Nina. One other woman, Countess Tarnowska, was entered in another of the leading events, but failed to place.

BAGPIPE DECLARED A NUISANCE

Scotsmen Say It Has Been Overworked at the Night Clubs.

By the Associated Press.

GLASGOW, April 17.—Nero learned to play the bagpipe long before he was able to fiddle. This and other information relative to the bagpipe and its origin has been brought out here by Scotsmen who are up in arms against the national instrument because it has been made to work overtime in some of the night clubs. They would have the bagpipe declared a public nuisance, and have taken their contentions to court for a ruling.

The claim is made by the same source that the bagpipe was not only used by the Greeks and the Romans, even before Nero's time, but that in the course of events it was introduced into Scotland from Ireland.

FREE DENTAL CLINIC AT COLUMBIA SCHOOL

Service Formerly Given at Central High, Moved by Red Cross Chapter.

The free dental clinic of the St. Louis Chapter, Red Cross, which had been operated for several years in the Central High School, will be transferred to the Columbia School May 1, due to the closing of the former building. Clinics also are conducted in the Taussig and Peabody schools, and last month there were 1530 free treatments given, according to the report of P. H. Byrns, executive secretary of the St. Louis Chapter, Red Cross.

The chapter's report showed widespread work for disabled veterans and their families, 874 cases having been handled during the month. These include aid in securing insurance, bonuses, medical treatment and hospital service, and financial aid to families when men were in hospitals. Health and housing problems and the needs of widows of children and orphans of veterans also were included in the Red Cross work.

The chapter's report also recounted various community service projects, ranging from teaching life saving methods to Bell Telephone Co. employes and members of the metropolitan police force to classes in home hygiene and care of the sick for Girl Scout leaders, and training women to transcribe fiction in Braille for the blind.

The Red Cross Employment Bureau for handicapped persons placed more men last month than since it was organized last fall, and the list for whom jobs were found included blind, crippled and both men and women suffering from heart trouble and other ailments. Business men are urged to notify Mrs. Louise Adams, director of the Red Cross, of any jobs available. No one will be sent, unless capable of filling a job, and all applicants at the bureau are examined by physicians to see the class of work they can safely do.

INSTRUCTION ISSUED FOR FLOWER SHOW EXHIBIT

Prizes for Children, Adults and Professionals to Be Feature of Shaw's Garden Event.

Instructions for making miniature gardens for the Flower Show at Shaw's Garden, May 22 and 23, have been issued, and many prizes, including cash, are offered for the best displays. There are prizes for children, adults and professional gardeners and landscape artists or students in these classes.

The gardens offer opportunity for ingenuity and artistic scope, and the public is urged to compete. They are to be made on small trays, with scale of grounds and buildings in exact proportions. Artificial materials are to be used, and last year the entries were the most popular at the show. Instructions may be obtained from Mrs. Charles M. Rice, Clayton and Big Bend roads.

The show is given under the auspices of the Garden Club of St. Louis to promote more general interest in gardening in back yards and small areas. Prizes are offered amateurs for plans, shrubs and cut flowers.

COURSES FOR TEACHERS AT W. U. SUMMER SESSION

Dean Loeb, Director, Expects Even Greater Attendance Than Last Year.

The 1926 summer session at Washington University, which covers a six-week period from June 19 to July 30, will eature special courses for school superintendents, principals, and teachers connected with elementary schools, high schools, and colleges who seek advanced instruction, either with or without reference to an academic degree. These courses will be in addition to the regular summer courses in the College o Liberal Arts, and the Schools of Graduate Studies, Engineering and Architecture, Law and Fine Arts.

Dean Isidor Loeb, of the School of Commerce and Finance, is director of the summer session. "We are expecting even greater attendance this summer than last," he said. "When the summer session was inaugurated in 1924 the attendance exceeded our expectations, with an enrollment of 517. In 1925 there was an increase of nearly a hundred, bringing the classes to a total of 604."

ANT RACES IN WARFARE

By the Associated Press.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 17.—A race war is raging in California and State authorities, far from trying to pacify the combatants, are adding to the slaughter by endeavoring to poison them all—namely, dark-brown Argentine ants and their redskin opponents, the fire ants.

Fifteen years ago entomologists predicted the energetic Argentine ant eventually would crowd out all other breeds and become sole survivor of the ant race in this State. Late bulletins from the front indicate that while the prophecy has not fully materialized the South American insect has most of his rivals on the run.

J. D. WOOSTER LAMBERT HEADS COUNTY FAIR ASSOCIATION

Plans Under Way for Twenty-Seventh Annual Event at Creve Coeur Lake.

At a meeting of the St. Louis County Fair Association Thursday, J. D. Wooster Lambert was elected president to succeed Jacob Studt Jr., retired, who served the organization in that capacity for many years. Other officers elected were: Roy F. Essen, Clayton, vice president; Gerard P. Karst, University City, vice president; Charles H. Beckers, Valley Park, chairman of the board, and Charles M. Meyer, Brentwood, secretary and treasurer.

This year's fair, the twenty-seventh, will be held at Upper Creve Coeur Lake, Sept. 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6.

The acreage has been increased and improvements are under way.

SHAH'S PORTRAIT TO GERMANY

Von Hindenburg Receives Ornate Picture of Reza Khan.

BERLIN, April 17.—The recent addition to the paintings in the executive mansion is the portrait of Reza Khan, Shah of Persia, encased in a frame of gold and ivory mosaic work, which was presented to President Hindenburg by couriers of the new Persian ruler. The portrait shows Reza Khan in field marshal's uniform, wearing the crown jewels, including a fragment of the historic great mogul diamond which was found in the Golconda mines in the seventeenth century. The Kohinoor, weighing 106 carats and now in possession of the British crown, is said to be another fragment of the great mogul.

The unusual gift was accepted by the president with a message of friendship to the Shah.

Under Three Flags

Detroit—meaning in French "City of Straits"—is rich in historical traditions. French, English and Colonial influences have each left a permanent imprint.

Names of the original French settlers are still daily bywords. You hear Cadillac, Pere Marquette, Lafayette and St. Antoine—and Belle Isle, Grosse Pointe, River Rouge—all echoes of an earlier day.

Important historic landmarks have been faithfully preserved. You see the site of Fort Pontchartrain, Detroit's first settlement. You stand on the ground that commemorates the Indian siege of Detroit in 1712.

While revering the gifts of the past, Detroit has built for the future. She has created beautiful parks—world-famous public buildings—hundreds of miles of super-highways—mammoth industries, and modern, comfortable hotels with plenty of rooms for visitors. Prices to suit every purse.

The Playground of a Nation

GET your family and little ones away from the dust, heat and roar of the city. Give them the happiest, most exhilarating summer they have ever known—plan now to get a summer home in West Michigan.

West Michigan has the most delightful summertime climate in all America. Here the pine-scented air is washed crystal clear by the waters of three great lakes. Because of the prevailing west and southern breezes across Lake Michigan you are always sure of delicious cool nights for perfect rest. Immediate relief from hay fever!

And what a place for fun. To pick your summer home in West Michigan is to have right at your door the finest of bathing. You can plunge in the rolling surf of the big lake, or loll on the white sands of broad beaches, or swim in sheltered inland waters.

3000 Lakes and Streams

Choose a house on or near one of the more than 3000 sparkling lakes and streams. They guarantee you superb fishing for bass, trout and muskellunge . . . you will find sporty golf courses and splendid tennis courts . . . flower-fringed woodland trails for your hikes or horseback rides . . . or you can motor over a 21,000 mile good roads system to picturesque Indian villages, famous orchards and majestic forests . . . and how the children love to frolic on the beaches and pick wild-flowers in the woods and fields.

In West Michigan you can select a home site in some quiet sylvan haunt where the only music is that of singing birds and lapping waters; or if you prefer you may choose one close to famous resorts gay with dances, pageants and the social activities of delightful people who come to West Michigan from all parts of the country.

James O'Donnell Bennett on West Michigan

From Chicago Tribune Editorial, "Chicago's Riviera"

"The east shore (of Lake Michigan) is Chicago's Riviera . . . there is climate and sand. There is surf and west wind. The east shore of Lake Michigan is Chicago's Italian winter and Norwegian summer. It is a strip of marine climate set into the middle of the continent.

"All this happens," says our James O'Donnell Bennett, in an interval of scientific reporting, "because Lake Michigan is a great temperance society here beside us. The prevailing winds are westerly, and after a hundred miles over the lake their extremes are lost. In zero weather the lake is still not far from 35 degrees. In 100-degree weather the lake is not much more than 70 degrees. Cool westerlies in summer; warm westerlies in winter temper the eastern shore."

Accessibility is another big advantage of a home site in West Michigan. All sections are easily reached by special summer railroad service and by fast steamships running daily and nightly from Chicago and Milwaukee. Just a few hours and you are in this land of happy sunshiny days and keen-aired nights.

A Health Investment That Yields a Money Profit

Decide now to satisfy that age-old longing for a summer home amid the loveliness of Nature. Find out about the many attractive home sites in West Michigan—the Playground of the Nation. Because of mounting popularity, values in this Summer Wonderland will increase rapidly. That is why we urge that you act now while prices are amazingly low and choice sites available. Besides paying big dividends in health and happiness, an investment in West Michigan land offers large opportunities for profits. Many residents combine business and pleasure by selecting a home on revenue-producing farms or orchards.

THIS IS an operatic tale of two cities. Tomorrow Atlanta, a community of 200,000, the Metropolitan will begin a week's engagement with "Aida," and n turn with Massenet's "Don Quichotte," which had its remiere only two weeks ago; "La Boheme," "I'Pagli ewels of the Madonna," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "T nd "Il Trovatore."

In the various casts will be eard Feodor Chaliapin, Marion alley, Mary Lewis, Rosa Ponelle, Lucrezia Bori, Antonio Scot-, Frances Peralta, Giovanni Marnelli, Adamo Didur, Florence aston, Giuseppe de Luca, Beniaino Gigli, Lawrence Tibbett, eanne Gordon, Mario Basiola, Ruolf Laubenthal and Michael ohnen.

In St. Louis, a city of some 0,000, the San Carlo Opera Co. st night concluded a week's visduring which it presented "La raviata," "La Gioconda," "Lohenrin," "Carmen," "Martha," "Cavlleria Rusticana" and "I'Pagliac," "Tosca," "Rigoletto" and "Il rovatore." This is a repertory hich the troupe has repeated here ear after year, with virtually the ame singers.

Orchestras and Choruses.

TO Atlanta the Metropolitan takes about 50 men of its own superb orchestra, together ith its rich-toned chorus. For onductors it has Tullio Serafin, ouis Hasselmans, Gennaro Papi nd Giuseppe Bambochek. Atlanta raises a guarantee fund f considerably more than $100,000 or the visit of the Metropolitan, hich is turned into a regional estival, since that city has exlusive rights to the Metropolitan's erformances in the South. Miss Elda Vettori, who ppears here as a guest artist, is a oung soprano of beautiful tone nd fervent dramatic temperament. Miss Josephine Lucchese is a coloratura soprano of more than orinary merit; and Mario Valle, the aritone, is an artful actor-singer. n addition, there are such competent individuals as Bianca Sarya, Franco Tafuro, Rhea Toniolo, Emilio Ghirardini and Giuseppe nterrante.

Eva Le Gallienne Will Give Two Ibsen Plays

FOLLOWING a third visit during one season by that exemplary operetta, "Rose-Marie," the Shubert-Rialto next week will present Miss Eva Le Gallienne in two of Henrik Ibsen's dramas, "The Master Builder" and "John Gabriel Borkman." It is said that the latter has never before been presented in St. Louis.

In the former, Miss Le Gallienne takes the role of Hilda Wangel, a personification of daring and ruthless youth. In the latter, her part is in direct antithesis—that of Ella Rentheim, a white-haired, pallid old woman clinging to the memory of a youthful love until death severs the tie.

"The Master Builder" will be given on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, and at the Wednesday matinee. "John Gabriel Borgman" will be offered on Wednesday and Friday evenings, and at the Saturday matinee.

Acting as her own producer, Miss Le Gallienne presented these dramas at the Princess Theater in New York with a success that was imitated until within two months there were revivals of six of Ibsen's plays in that city—an honor that had never theretofore occurred to any author.

Her supporting company includes Egon Brecher of the Staadt Theater in Vienna, Beatrice Terry of His Majesty's Theater in London, Harold Moulton, Ruth Wilton, Sayre Crawley, Sydney Machat, Ellida Pierra and Beatrice de Neergard.

Following this engagement, the Shubert-Rialto will offer "The Big Parade," a cinema war play by Laurence Stallings, co-author of "What Price Glory."

RAQUEL MELLER'S AMERICAN DEBUT, AT $25 A SEAT, PACKS NEW YORK THEATER

Spanish Diseuse Proves Sorceress Both of Acting and Box-Office—Relates Songs of Catalonia in Spirit of Jongleurs of Old.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.

WORD having somehow got about this town that one Raquel Melelr, a Catalan woman with a gift for singing ballads, was well worth going to see and hear, her first appearance in America Wednesday evening packed the old Empire Theater to overflowing.

No secret has been made of the fact that Impressario Goetz had ventured to ask $25 a seat for the first performance. Wherefore the sidewalks were jammed with a wondering citizenry, watching all the funny, funny people arrive in state. Those first-nighters were wildly assorted, ranging all the way from Anita Loos to Father Duffy, and from Al Jolson to His Honor the Mayor.

A great tide of sheer friendliness seemed to go out to Senorita Meller when first she stepped upon the stage, and as one after another she sang her baker's dozen of songs, her sorcery worked its old, unfailing spell.

A Spanish Ruth Draper.

THERE can be no more refreshing or sweeter evening in the theater than just to watch this grave and lovely woman as, with the art and the spirit of the jongleurs of old, she relates the songs of her countryside. Primarily Meller is an actress—a great one. Her voice is a delight to hear; but, after all, she uses singing as a way of getting herself onto the stage, something as our own Will Rogers uses his rope.

It is thereafter a Ruth Draper who holds that stage, with just such a succession of exquisite vignettes and character sketches which range all the way from a

Rafaelo Diaz and Jacques Jolas in Recital

A SUCCESSFUL American pianist, Jacques Jolas, will make his St. Louis debut tomorrow night in a recital at the Sheldon Auditorium, under the sponsorship of the Piano Teachers' Association. His program will extend from Scarlatti and Bach to Albeniz and Ravel, with Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata as principal offering.

Jolas was born of Alsatian parents less than 30 years ago, at Union Hall, N. J. As a child he was taken to France, where he began the study of music at 7 and appeared in concert at 12. He ran off to America when he was 15, and for a time eked out a livelihood playing in movie houses and cabarets. A New York musician introduced him to Teresa Carreno, and he became her pupil.

Pupil of Schnabel.

AFTER her death he studied in Paris under Isador Philipp and Vidal, and in Germany under Artur Schnabel. He has toured with success in France, Germany, Denmark and Austria. His St. Louis program will be as follows:

Sonata in E Major	Scarlatti
Toccata, "Le cou-cou"	Pasquini
Prelude and Fugue in A Minor	Bach-Liszt
Sonata, "Waldstein"	Beethoven

BEHIND THE SCREENS

A MOTION picture with a cast composed entirely of Negro players is announced as a forthcoming production from the De Mille studios. Bertram Millhauser, production editor, will assume full charge of the production and hopes to gain in his story the human qualities that made "Humoresque" an epic of the Jewish race in America. No white people will appear in any scene of the proposed picture and no attempt will be made to inject anything that might arouse racial discussion. It will be a friendly, human story of the life of the Negro in his own element. Efforts will be made to secure a number of famous Negro actors who have scored successes on the stage for the more important roles. The picture is to be shown in the regular motion-picture houses for white audiences.

Ben Lyon has been signed to play the principal role in "The Great Deception," adapted from the George Gibbs novel, "The Yellow Dove." Aileen Pringle already has been signed for the role of the heroine.

Tullio Carminati, the Italian stage and screen actor who made his American screen debut in "The Bat," has been chosen to play opposite Constance Talmadge in "The Duchess of Buffalo."

After a lapse of two years, "The Last Frontier," the Western epic which the late Thomas H. Ince had just started when his untimely death occurred, will be filmed by Metropolitan Pictures.

Ray Rockett announces that Betty Bronson, of "Peter Pan" fame, will be featured in the leading feminine role of Milton Sills' next First National starring vehicle, "Paradise," which is scheduled to start around May 1. "Paradise" will be screened from Cosmo Hamilton's novel of the same title.

Noah, his ark and the deluge will form the basis for Cecil B. DeMille's next production. DeMille is already laying his plans to film "The Deluge" on a gigantic scale.

Belle Bennett has been signed to play the title role in "The Lily," screen version of David Belasco's stage play, which is to go into production soon at the Fox West Coast Studios under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. Miss Bennett was obtained for the part by special arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn, to whom she is under contract, and in whose production, "Stella Dallas," she made a tremendous hit.

Dimitri Buchowetzki will direct Emil Jannings' first American picture for Paramount when the German dramatic star, recently placed under contract, arrives in this country in the early autumn. The picture will be "The Thief of Dreams," a romantic comedy-drama based on Richard Connell's noted story, "A Friend of Napoleon," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Joseph Schildkraut will be featured in "The American Sex," a screen version of the Frank R. Adams story, and production has already begun under the direction of Joseph Henabery. Marguerite de la Motte will appear opposite Schildkraut, while Vera Stedman, who has been featured in more than 50 Christie comedies, will essay her first dramatic role in "The American Sex." Julia Faye, David Butler and Helen Dunbar have also been cast for important parts,

Landrau and His Crimes a Play Topic

"At Mrs. Beam's," Comedy by C. K. Munro, in Rehearsal at Theater Guild—Human Relics of "H. M. S. Pinafore."

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT.
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, April 17.

THE last week in April threatens to be C. K. Munro week in the theaters of New York. Two of the plays written and produced in London by this young Ulsterman (whose real name is MacMullan) might either of them have been presented here any time during the past two seasons.

Now that one of them, a comedy called "At Mrs. Beam's," is formally announced for production by the Theater Guild on the night of April 26, another Munro play called "Storm" is being breathlessly rehearsed by another management for presentation in our town the very same evening.

"At Mrs. Beam,'s," which might just as well have been called "The Passing of the Third Floor Front," is a comedy of character with its scenes laid in a London boarding house. It was a play written just about the time that that bewhiskered but seemingly fatal beauty, Monsieur Landrau, was being run to earth in Paris.

Landrau Among Dickensians.

LANDRAU, you will remember, was an industrious swain who married an extraordinarily long and scattered list of susceptible French women. He would woo each one ardently and then, after a decent interval, would strangle, poison, decapitate or otherwise efface her in the interests of his own greater freedom and for the sake of what odds and ends of furniture and finery the poor lady might have. Before the authorities had caught up with him, he had thus arbitrarily acquired enough household goods to furnish a really sizable chateau.

It was Munro's fancy to picture the agitation among the Dickensy inmates of a London boarding house if the grotesque suspicion could be started among them that the strange couple just arrived the night before from Paris were, in reality, none other than Landrau and his latest victim.

The sleuthing is mostly done by a delighted and immensely excited spinster named Miss Shoe, who is the most vivid character in the comedy. This role was created in London three years ago by Jean Cadell, a Scotch actress, who played here back in 1911, when all the town was going to the Comedy to see the Scotch piece called "Bunty Pulls the Strings." And now Miss Cadell has come back to New York to act Miss Shoe for the Theater Guild. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne are to play the suspects in the third-floor-front.

Guild's Repertory Trial.

MR. LUNT, Miss Fontanne and Margalo Gillmore are the most distinguished members of a troupe now being placed under contract for the Guild's attempt next season to establish a permanent company, the first attempt of this kind hereabouts since the crash of the New Theater venture 15 years ago—a toppling which induced such a roar and such a cloud of dust that the economic factors in the collapse have only just begun to be studied without passion.

The Guild's project is an experiment, nervously approached. It seems likely that at first nothing more complicated in the way of a program will be attempted than the simplest one possible—that is, an alternation of two plays, one the

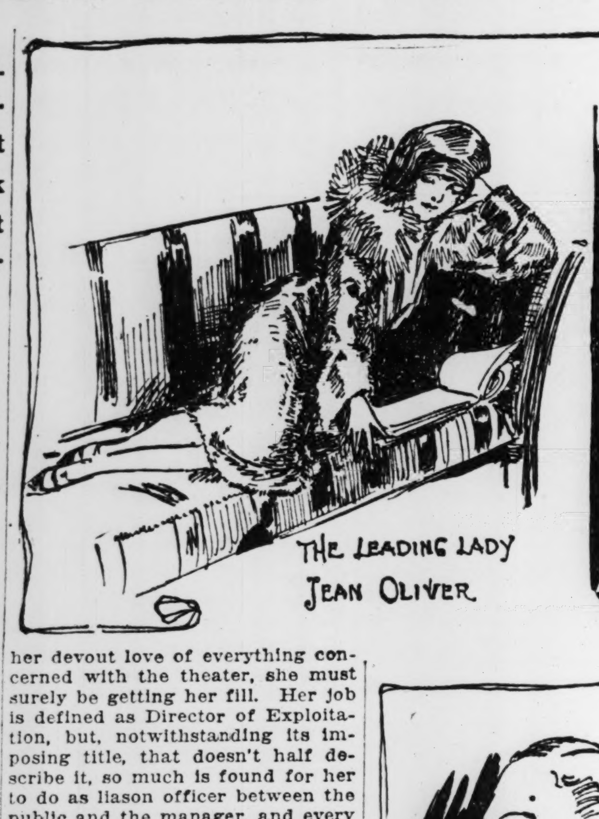
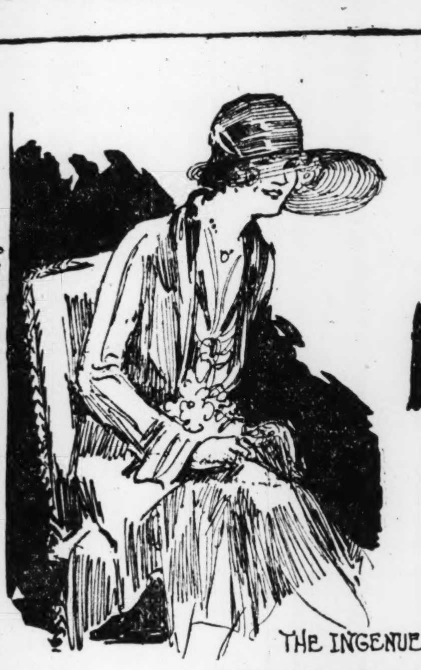
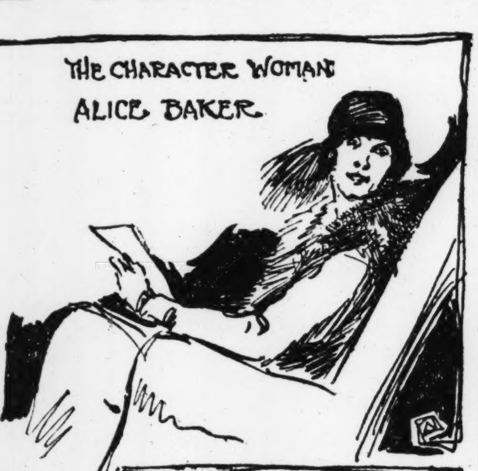
NOT MUCH PLAY FOR THE MEMBERS OF THE WOODWARD PLAYERS

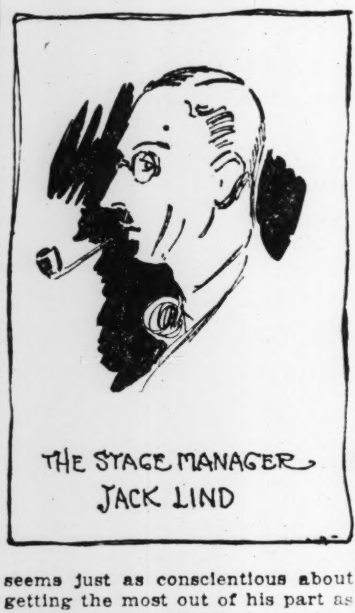
Rehearsing a New Show Every Week Is Pretty Serious Business—With But One Day Off a Week They Usually Spend That Vacation in Some Other Theater.

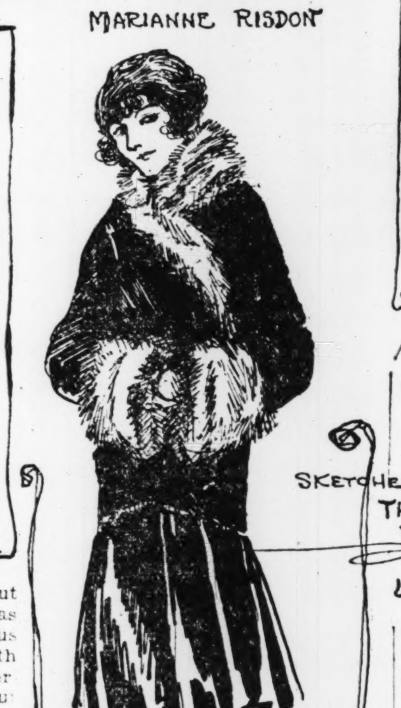
By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

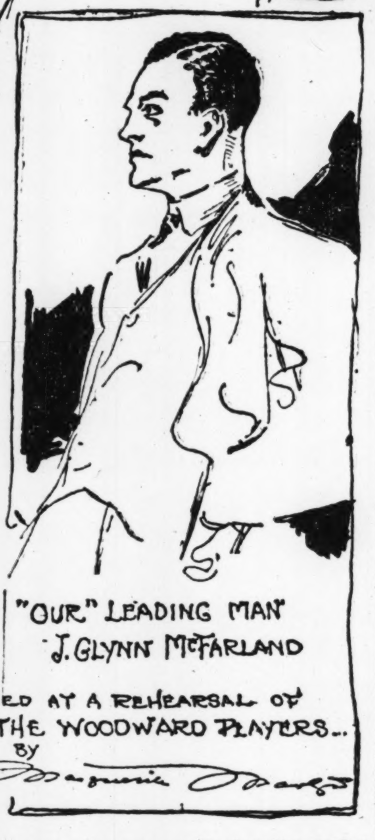












TO be permitted to sit as an audience of one at a rehearsal of the Woodward Players and meet and talk with them as they dropped their roles and became their real selves, was a privilege many loyal fans who go to the Empress every week to adore their favorites in the stock company at a respectful distance across the footlights or wait at the alley after the performance for a glimpse and the chance of a word with them, will envy me. And well they may.

Many a time upon meeting personally members of a road company one is painfully disillusioned to find them acting more and not so well off the boards as on. Such was not the case with these players.

It is an agreeable, happy company of hard workers one meets. Players who are obliged to learn a new role and rehearse the play in which they are to appear next week, while playing every night and two matinees in the current production of the present week, haven't much time for airs and displays of temperament.

After the final showing of one production Saturday night they are given their roles for the plays which they are to rehearse the following week, being already letter perfect in the play in which they are to go on Sunday afternoon and busily engaged in trying to forget the part in which they have just been playing. They are expected to have memorized their newest roles by the following Monday morning. Thereafter they rehearse every day except Wednesday. And Wednesday, their only holiday, usually finds them attending "the best show in town."

Make the Most of It.

One might suppose that living a double life, a triple life, as it were, when the opportunity came to be just themselves, they would have forgotten how. But, on the other hand, the opportunity being so rare, may be the very reason why they seem to make the most of it.

At any rate, I found them to be just about the most genuine, wholesome, friendly and unconventional lot of people I have met in a long time. Not a bored or blase one among them. Not a lot of false effort to be impressive. None of that pretentiousness which many experiences interviewing stage personages has led me to expect. The scene of the rehearsal is the lobby back of the balcony on the second floor. The time is Saturday morning. The play is "The Show Off." The actors are all in street clothes, the women keeping on their hats and wraps in the chilly atmosphere.

It is the final rehearsal of the play, but there are still little points at issue between George Leach, the director, and different members of the cast as to how a line should be read or a bit of business got over. Many little discussions ensue, but I noticed, for all his mild mannered, gentle tactics, different from those of other directors I have watched, he usually gained his point and good-natured acquiescence into the bargain.

A Long Drill.

Severe drilling went on hour after hour, but the moment an actor stepped out of his part, complete relaxation was the order on the sidelines.

Jean Oliver, the leading woman, who seems so much smaller and slighter off the stage than on, and younger than in most of the serious, tearful parts allotted her, immediately and without ceremony repaired to a sofa, tucked up her feet and apparently dozed off into a nap.

Alice Baker, the character woman, so frequently is cast in ludicrous roles that she has difficulty in getting her familiar audience to take her seriously when a pathetic bit falls to her lot. She it is who is most often the victim of that fiend in the audience, the person who laughs at the wrong time.

Mr. Leach was asking for a little more repression in the speaking of one of her lines. She was insisting she must overemphasize its pathos or they would be tittering all over the house. At her exit she goes and sits in a corner with her back to the company to study her script, which is very long in this play, though, merry soul that she naturally is, she can't resist looking over her shoulder to laugh appreciatively at every bit of comedy the others are reading into their parts.

Marianne Risdon, the ingenue, who is not cast in "The Show Off," comes bounding in, dynamic, bubbling, effervescent, and all dressed up in a new spring outfit of dark blue frock and coat and big crin hat from under which burst tempestuous blonde curls.

The laboring ones taunt her as a lady of leisure and she looks like a member of the Junior League which, indeed, she was not long ago in Houston, Tex., where her devoted father is an oil man.

It isn't going to be much of a play without her in it, she retorts to their raillery as she bounces off into Mrs. Scott's office near by.

Mrs. Scott, yes, Mrs. Samuel Scott, whom St. Louis society has known first as an amateur reader of plays, then as a successful professional, has landed with the Woodward Players, where for all her devout love of everything concerned with the theater, she must surely be getting her fill. Her job is defined as Director of Exploitation, but, notwithstanding its imposing title, that doesn't half describe it, so much is found for her to do as liason officer between the public and the manager, and every individual member of the company. She literally attends to everything for everybody.

Irene Shirley, "second woman," is rather an exotic type from California, almost Spanish looking with her big, luminous dark eyes and sinuous grace of line. She lights a cigarette, drops down beside me and talks of an ideal existence in Maine, where in summer her husband is director of a theater where new plays are tried out before a critical audience gathered from fashionable East Coast resorts. She is a dreamer of dreams, though she forgets all this apparently when her cue is called, seeming to be aware that only through the hard grind of experience are aspirations to be realized.

Plenty of Energy Called for.

Leo Lindhard appears from some undefined source in response to his cue, briskly, vividly animating the scene. His role is that of a successful business man with a secret sorrow. He steps out of the role still apparently a busy man with a great reserve of energy and force, and disappears, one is left imagining, to attend to any number of important affairs. Really though, they do say, he devotes all his energy and enthusiasm to the business of making the most of each part, large or small, entrusted to him.

A messenger must needs be sent for Edward Schilling when his cue is at hand or else Mr. Leach must step into the breach to read his lines. As assistant manager he really is a man of many outside affairs. Versatile off the stage as well as on, you see. To nobody is assigned a more varied assortment of roles. A large following comes spurred by curiosty to see how he will do a part this week, so different from the one of last, and apparently, from the hand that always greets him, he hasn't yet disappointed his admirers.

Raymond Brown, character man, sits in a rocking chair reading the morning paper. At his cue he merely moves onto the imaginary stage and proceeds to do the same thing. So natural is his acting one scarcely can tell where it begins and where it leaves off.

Clare Hatton, a veteran now of this and other stock companies all over the West, is conversing with a young extra man, who listens attentively to tales which I felt sure must be reminiscences rich in theatrical lore. His son Bradford comes in, gives the older man a rough and tumble hug and hair tousling. It is the morning greeting of a young cub to which the fond parent apparently is accustomed, though more vehement this week than usual, Brad having been given his first "fat" part as a juvenile. Strange that affectionate family relations ever survive shifting domestic conditions of this profession yet, notwithstanding adverse reports, they sometimes are stronger among theatrical and circus families than among those in more stable environments.

Bradford's mother is a member of the Woodward Players now with the Cincinnati company. Bradford himself was almost born in the theater, his cradle an improvised stage wardrobe trunk and his first appearance before the footlights at the age of three months. Gentleness is well accounted for in this family, however. Mrs. Hatton is a daughter of that Mary C. C. Bradford whom I have met as a delegate representing the State of Colorado at national Democratic conventions and who is now, or recently was, State Superintendent of Schools in Colorado. The elder Hatton's family, too, are among the pioneer first families of Denver.

The Matinee Idol.

And now, girls, gather round. I know you have been holding your breath in suspense until J. Glynn McFarlane appears upon the scene. If you like him as leading man on the stage you would rejoice to see how he is even more leading man off, beloved, deferred to, attracting like a magnet the attentions of the whole company. Perhaps it is because he seems so unconscious of his charm that his associates must be continually reminding him of the esteem in which they hold him.

He seems to take nothing for granted. Not all his experience as leading man to Maude Adams, Katherine Kidder and other famous stars has given him the idea that he can afford to neglect the smallest detail of the roles he assumes in the stock company. He seems just as conscientious about getting the most out of his part as if he had not all that glorious physique and pulchritude with which he might put anything over. Off the boards he was just about as different from the character of the "Show Off" whom he was interpreting as can be imagined. At one exit he remarked with a gesture of despair, "Not a grain of gray matter in his whole being."

I think each member of the company in turn had presented him proudly as "our leading man" before he found a moment in which to chat with the visitor. Then it was impossible to get him off topics of the stage. He is Scotch, born in Edinburgh and true to type, clannish, interested in pecuniary matters, I gathered from the brief conversation. Beamingly he responded at mention of the hit he had made on Broadway in the part of the soldier in Barrie's "Old Lady Shows Her Medals," though he only remarked that he thought that the best play Barrie ever wrote, and therefore one of the best in the world.

A reference to the impecuniousness of actors, his amazement when, at being called upon to assist a certain well-known one in making out his income tax report, he had learned the actor had not saved enough with which to pay his tax—led one to infer that McFarlane's reason for playing in stock is that rewards are surer and steadier and in the long run higher and the chance of savings greater than in some of the more widely exploited Broadway companies.

You matinee idolators of this hero probably think I was not capable of making the most of my opportunity, yet I doubt if the most seductive among you had been able to entice this young man, courteous as he was, out of his dignified reserve and into an indulgence in personalities. I learned one secret I can impart to you for what it is worth. Mrs. Scott, among other multitudinous duties, has been given authority to intercept all his mash notes and dispose of them as she sees fit, with the one reservation, that his photograph is not to be distributed promiscuously.

There are other members of the company whom I did not meet. There is Miss Dorothy Folk, known in society and one or two other local girls and boys with stage aspirations who are having opportunities at small parts.

Did I say they were all patient, earnest, industrious folk, never finding time for posing, indulgence in temperament or play acting off the stage? Ah, but they do afford one exhibit on the other side. He is Jack Lind, stage manager, who chafes under the restraint of having to project his personality through mechanical effects, the lightning, the telephone bell, the baby's cry, the auto honk and all the properties on and off the stage. Occasionally he finds a little outlet for expression of his artistic soul in some part for which he can find nobody else available, but otherwise he must needs do his acting between performances; by doffing and putting on his native British accent to the confusion of strangers, wearing odd caps, disconcertingly changing the style of his spectacles and affecting always a pipe which is a terror in itself, enveloping him in an aroma, an aura, an atmosphere nobody dares penetrate.

O. D. Woodward, who is responsible for the organization of this, as well as many other, stock companies, was absent this week directing his Cincinnati company. While other stage veterans just now are indulging so copiously in reminiscences in the magazines, it would seem there ought to be a series from this old-timer who has gone from city to city in the West creating stock companies around stars who no sooner develop under his direction than they leave him to go to New York, where Broadway managers reap the harvest of his industry and prescience. Just a few Broadway favorites who started their careers under him are Florence Reed, Jeanne Eagels, Blanche Yurka, Mary Boland, Eva Lang, Alice Fleming, Hazel Whitmore.

It is strange he has not sought that Mecca, that Easy Street of the theatrical world, himself, but apparently he prefers the more human aspect of his work, that of creating players in many and varied roles in plays already of assured success and popularity, to creating plays of yet doubtful merit with players who generally have learned their business in the stock companies.

RAFAELO DIAZ AND JACQUES JOLAS APPEAR HERE IN RECITALS

ANOTHER debut of the week will be that of Rafaelo Diaz, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will appear Tuesday evening at the Odeon as guest artist of the closing concert of the Morning Choral Club's thirty-fifth season.

Mr. Diaz is a Texan by birth and a Spaniard by ancestry. He has sung at the Metropolitan with Farrar, Jeritza, Chaliapin, Scotti and other notables.

His program will include the Flower Song from "Carmen," Serrano's "Chanson Triste," a Creole love song, "Ay-Ay-Ay;" De Fuentes' "Rosalinda," Fuster's "Mensage," Victor Herbert's "Stille Rose," Trunk's "In Meiner Heimat," Tschaikowsky's "Nur Wer Die Sehnsucht Kennt," Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung," James Rogers' "The Last Song," Davis Guion's "Howdy Do, Miss Springtime," Strickland's "Lonesome Moonlight" and Curran's "To Oestra."

The Morning Choral Club, under the direction of Charles Galloway, will sing "The Bells of Youth," by Oley Speaks: "Sweet and Low," Barnby; "Ode to a River," Drigo-Silver: "A Page From Homer." Rimsky-Korsakoff; and "Chanson Provencale." Dell' Acqua-Shelley. Paul Friess will be at the piano.

Concert by Monks' Choir.

ST. ANTHONY'S CHORISTERS, under the direction of C. Hausner, will give their annual recital at 3 o'clock this afternoon at St. Anthony's Church, Meramec street and Michigan avenue. Three recitals, this afternoon and evening and tomorrow night, will be given by students of the Strassberger Conservatories, at the South Side branch, Grand boulevard and Shenandoah avenue.

Miss Lillian Gustafson, New York soprano, has been engaged as soloist for the Apollo Club's final concert of the season, at the Odeon on April 27. She is an honor graduate of the Institute of Musical Art, of which Frank Damrosch is director.

In connection with Music Week, the Musicians' Guild will present a program at Hotel Chase on Sunday afternoon, May 2. The soloists will be Mrs. Emma Hart, Ernest R. Kroeger and Ellis Levy.

Reads "The Devil's Disciple."

A reading of Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" will be given by Prof. S. H. Clark Wednesday night at the auditorium of the Missouri School for the Blind, 3815 Magnolia avenue. The proceeds will go to the fund of the institution's Alumnae Association.

RAQUEL MELLER'S DEBUT, AT $25 A SEAT, PACKS THEATER TO DOORS

grief-stricken mother rocking an empty cradle to a tough girl shaking her hips in a Madrid dance hall.

And in this acting, which is possessed of the secret which was Duse's and is Chaplin's now, something akin to sublimation is achieved. Not a grieved mother merely, but grief itself embodied, not a sly coquette but coquetry, stand on the Empire stage when Meller sings.

The Famous "Violetera."

THIRTEEN songs she sang, with "Mimosa" tossed like a rose to those who lingered afterward, like a Paderewski encore for the pleasure of the faithful. Some of the ballads which had a magic for audiences in Paris and London were put forward for this first American program; and, of course, at the end there was the celebrated "Violetera."

Here Meller, with a basket of violets over her arm, wanders down into the audience to distribute them, rebuking this man for his forwardness perhaps, and suddenly blessing the next out of the warmth of her capricious heart.

It was strange to see the miracle of this song repeated so far from its home; to see the ruddy and emblazoned first-nighters become suddenly abashed in her presence; to see Meller herself, the shabby flower girl, become suddenly as some great lady at a fete in another land and another age.

Aside from all the trappings of Spanish flags and floral offerings, aside from the hullaballoo of a management that must beat the drum loudly if it would sell strawberries in this town in January, there, after all, was Meller herself—a fine actress, a rare artist of the kind that comes but once in a generation; in fact, a bit of a sorceress.

MRS. FISKE TO GO ON TOUR NEXT SEASON IN 'GHOSTS'

Will Play Part of Mrs. Alving, Which Will Be Her Fifth Ibsen Role.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske will tour next season in "Ghosts," playing the role of Mrs. Alving. This will be her fifth Ibsen role, the preceding ones having been those of Nora Helmer, Hedda Gabler, Rebecca West and Lona Hessel.

Her engagements will be played chiefly under auspices of universities, women's clubs and civic bodies. The tour will be managed by Charles D. Coburn, and the production will be directed by Harrison Grey Fiske.

LANDRAU'S HOMICIDES THEME OF COMEDY TO HAVE NEW YORK SHOWING

first week, one the second, and then a repetition of that order until, a month or more later, the third play is ready to replace the weaker sister.

"Pygmalion" and "Faust."

IT also seems likely that the first play will be Shaw's "Pygmalion," a good comedy which was riotously received in London in the spring of 1914, but which met a far calmer reception here that fall, because, after all, an American audience could hardly be expected to evince symptoms of hysteria just because, in Act. IV, Mrs. Patrick Campbell actually used the word "bloody." Besides, in the fall of 1914, it was not so easy to keep one's mind on what was going on in the theater.

The second Guild play next season will, I think, be "Faust"—long unused in our midst except as the libretto for an opera. Mr. Lunt, I suppose, will play Mephistopheles and Miss Gillmore Marguerite.

A Superb "Pinafore."

THE revival of "H. M. S. Pinafore" at the Century is hereby vehemently recommended—a multitudinous, full-throated, handsome production of an operetta that will never grow old. On the first night the management distributed as a souvenir a reprint of the program used at the old Standard Theater back in 1879, when this sweet score was new in this country.

In it you could note that the first Buttercup was none other than Mrs. Whiffen herself. So, on the opening night last week, she had no sooner finished her big scene in "The Two Orphans" than she was hustled across Columbus Circle to the Century, so that she might stand in a box and receive a fine nosegay from the hands of the present incumbent, a comparative tot, Fay Templeton.

A Prank of Destiny.

THIS pretty scene set me to musing on the whimsicality of life in its apportionment of rewards. For, glancing down that old program of 1879, I lingered over one name in the troupe, recalling with something of a pang when and where I last had heard it.

It was at the Night Court in Jefferson Market, one sweltering evening in the summer of 1909. Magistrate House was drowsing in judgment over a shambling procession of pickpockets, drunks, street-walkers. One cheery sot, hauled in for snoring a trifle too conspicuously on the sidewalk near the Washington Arch, tried earnestly to explain the oddity of his having been found in a stupor so immoderate.

"I took just one little drink, Your Honor," he said, with an honesty puzzled shake of his head, "but it seemed to go straight to my stomach."

"Three days," said the Judge, crisply. "Next case."

Matinee Idol's Decline and Fall.

THIS next case proved to be a fat, blowsy, unshaven derelict, who might have strayed into Jefferson Market out of a drawing of the Thames Embankment in "Punch." A detective had picked him up in the Grand Central for begging. He was murmuring something about a more legitimate revenue derived from running a nickleodeon in Third Avenue, when the Judge, absently glancing again at the name in the complaint papers, leaned suddenly forward and asked curiously:

"Didn't you used to sing?"

The question might have been a tipped arrow, so visible and shattering was its effect on the forlorn old fellow. For he, too, was in that early "Pinafore" company and in the letters and memoirs of that time he figures much as a disturbing, handsome young blade whose mail, each day, was choked with letters from fluttered young hearts.

Younger Generation Gapes.

LIFE has set a different table for the Buttercup of that day and, now in her eighties, she has so much vitality left that I was surprised when, on the opening night, she did not celebrate the occasion by quavering the solo which begins:

"A many years ago,
When I was young and charming."

The town is full of young fry to whom "Pinafore" is new. The likes of these emerge goggle-eyed between the acts, wearing expressions which say clearly: "Why all this been kept from me until now?" Some of these are disposed to chafe because, as Buttercup, Fay Templeton is a trifle venerable and, to put it mildly, fat.

Bless her, she must be in her sixties by this time. She might be a hundred and weigh a ton more than she does, and I would still prefer her—if only for the superb clarity with which every syllable of her every song can be heard by the uttermost part of the house. And, of course, Buttercup always was supposed to be of what is sometimes effusively called an uncertain age. In the "Bab Ballads" we hear the bumboat woman caroling thus:

"It's strange to think I should ever have loved young men;
But I'm speaking of 10 years past
—I was barely sixty then."

ATLANTA AGAIN HEARS METROPOLITAN OPERA; SAN CARLO BRAND HERE

this city has become a poor opera town—as witness the loss incurred by the Chicago troupe last season at the Shubert-Jefferson and numerous other debacles. Which is cause and which effect? Has popular interest been alienated by shabby productions like those of the San Carlo company, or are these trashy performances the result of public apathy?

According to some observers, one of the principal advantages enjoyed by Atlanta is its auditorium, which seats 5000, and makes possible a large attendance at reasonable rates. It is predicted by these optimists that, if the new City Auditorium, provided for in the bond issue, is properly constructed, St. Louis will again have its lucrative seasons of opera by the Metropolitan and Chicago companies—as happened 12 or 15 years ago at the Coliseum.

And speaking of deficits, there is the one at Miami, Fla., where the Chicago Opera Company recently gave a week of open-air opera, with a tent for a stage. The season was underwritten by 18 guarantors, who subscribed $10,000 each, or $180,000. According to word arriving here, each subscriber lost $7000 of his $10,000, or a total of $126,000.

WORK ON PUCCINI'S "TURANDOT" COMPLETED

MILAN, April 17.—Giacomo Puccini made a losing race with death to bring to a finish the opera "Turandot," which had cost him four years of hard work. Arturo Toscanini intrusted a young but much appreciated Italian composer, Franco Alfano, with the task of completing the work.

Alfano, limited to the orchestration of the last duetto and the finale and two or three repetitions of some principal airs used by Puccini in other parts of the opera, has now finished his work and the musical world impatiently awaits the promised production of the opera at the Scala.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY AND GIRL SCOUT TROOPS

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR SCOUTMASTERS

Eighty-Eight Enrolled in Introductory Course — Scout News.

One hundred and fifty scoutmasters and assistants were at the opening meeting of the Scoutmasters' Training School last Monday night at the Bryan Mullanphy School. Eighty-eight enrolled in the introductory course and 62 in the patrol methods course.

Those taking the introductory course were organized into four troops, under the leadership of Scoutmasters Aruthr Hunter, Webster Groves, 5; A. W. Muedner, Troop 42; R. A. McCoy, Troop 18, and William H. Kroeger, Troop 8. To them Scout Commissioner McBride spoke briefly on the importance of trained leadership in maintaining the high standard of Scouting in St. Louis. Scoutmaster Lester M. Hall of Troop 42, who is 72 years old, was called upon to conduct the opening ceremony, the Commissioner telling of Mr. Hall's years of service, and of his work in building a better community attitude toward health and outdoor recreation. After the general assembly each troop conducted a separate troop meeting.

In the patrol method course the men were allowed five minutes to group themselves into patrols, elect patrol leaders, and choose patrol names and yells. Each group then selected a major and a minor patrol project. The patrols chose leaders and projects as follows: Crow, R. H. Geiser, standardization of first-class tests, and leatherworking; Sour Owls, A. Forsythe, campfire programs, and model building; Chipmunks, Louis Schmitt, financing a troop, and signaling; Whifflepoof, Lester M. Hall, educational hikes, and leatherworking; Flying Eagle, J. H. Bell, summer programs, and building a model camp; Flying Loops, R. L. Shepperd, overnight hikes, and a wood collection; White Mice, R. R. Smith, industrial hikes, and pioneering; Bear, W. F. Thompson, overnight hikes, and rope making.

The next meeting will be held in the school auditorium at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. There will be a demonstration of rope-splicing and knot tying by several experts. Features of the introductory course will be competitive troop drill, a patrol knot-tying contest, and signaling instruction. The Patrol Method course will be devoted to discussion of reading assignments, work on the patrol projects, a Pow Wow meeting, and games.

Next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock a cooking and firebuilding hike will be held at the Tourist Camp in Forest Park, under Scoutmaster W. F. Thompson of Troop 141.

Headquarters.

The first section of Camp Irondale will open next Friday afternoon with the beginning of the Patrol Leaders' week-end training camp. This camp, which is open only to junior assistant scoutmasters, senior patrol leaders, patrol leaders and assistant patrol leaders, will be attended by at least one representative from every troop in the city, the scout's expenses being paid by his troop in the majority of cases. The campers will leave Union Station at 4 p. m. Friday, on a special train.

The Campers' Saving Club will close next Saturday. All members must have $5 paid in by that time in order to save a dollar on their camp fee. New registrations will be received until Saturday evening.

During the week the following scouts assisted at headquarters in mailing out camp literature: Troop 160, Francis Ecoff, Robert Ecoff, Charles Denniston, William Ehlers, Herman Pfeifer, Ted Turk and Vincent Lacey; Troop 18, Carl Dobbins, Albert Davis, Paul Langenbach, Philip Godwin and Robert McCoy.

South District.

The Hawk patrol of Troop 4, Trinity Evangelical Church, gave a minstrel show at a parents' night a week ago Friday, those taking part being Albert Prach, Earl Foster, Charles Stucke, Louis Queensen, Henry Bahnsen, William Schroeder and Raymond Siemens. Earl Foster's father coached the boys and played the accompaniment to the musical numbers. A model troop meeting, with exhibits of scout work, was held, and two reels of motion pictures were shown. Alois Pommer, who has 54 merit badges, more than any other scout in St. Louis, was given a junior assistant scoutmaster commission. A supper was served.

The Hawk patrol is leading in the inter-patrol contest which will terminate in May. Next week the troop will lose one of its high-rank scouts when Albert Prach transfers to Troop 1, Pattonville. Although a cripple, Scout Prach has 28 merit badges.

The first Lutheran troop in the South Side, Troop 15, organized during the roundup last February, held its first parents' night last Thursday at its headquarters, the St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church. About 75 parents were present. The Hassendeubel Women's Relief Corps Auxiliary 19 of the Grand Army of the Republic gave the troop an American flag, and Field Executive Merle Shippey presented the troop charter. M. E. Lorenz is scoutmaster.

Scouts E. Cox, M. Traber, E. Traber, E. Kueschler, F. Duever and R. Seller held a knot-tying relay, using the tenderfoot knots. A first aid team composed of Scouts M. Traber, E. Kuechler, E. Cox and E. Traber gave a demonstration. While the parents were eating refreshments the scouts sang songs. The troop will go on a mystery hike today.

At a meeting Tuesday of Troop 63, at Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, plans were discussed by the patrols for a first aid demonstration, and the making of a specimen board of minerals and model bridges to be shown on parents' night in May. After the meeting the troop went to Tower Grove Park, where a game of "Smuggler Over the Border" was played.

A scout service was conducted by members of Troop 34 Sunday evening at Snyder Presbyterian Church, a large number of parents and friends attending. F. M. Underwood, south District commissioner, the main speaker, talked on "The Need of Scouting and Its Relation to the Church," while several troop members spoke on the work of scouting. The meeting opened with a flag ceremony and closed with "Taps." Members of Troop 224, with their scoutmaster, were the guests of the evening.

R. T. Shepherd, Deputy Commissioner, talked to the boys of Troop 183 at its meeting at St. Paul's Evangelical Church Friday evening. Several games which have been recently introduced to the troop were played at the meeting.

Carl Dobbins was elected senior patrol leader and Arthur Niblock and Morris Combs were chosen as section leaders at a reorganization meeting of Troop 18, of the Compton Heights Baptist Church, last Friday evening. The troop was divided into two sections of three patrols each.

At the recent Court of Honor 17 scouts of Troop 178 received 72 merit badges. Two boys became Eagle Scouts, one a Life Scout, and nine received Star badges. They are: Eagles, Roy Birchicht and Rudolph Meyer; Life, Wilson Rainer; Star, Elton Becker, Clifford Keller, Robert Risch, Nacy Strickland, Elmer Keller, William Kunes, Walter Lorch, John Robertson and Albert Wamser. All of the patrol leaders of this troop have signified their intent of attending the patrol leaders' camp at Irondale next week end. The scoutmaster and assistant scoutmaster are taking the scoutmasters' training course.

West District.

Troop 9 of the Sutter Avenue Presbyterian Church, organized last February with nine scouts, now reports a membership of 21. Headquarters has sent congratulations on the troop's rapid growth.

Troop 11, of the Y. M. H. A., expects to register this month without the loss of a single last year's scout. The troop has elected a patrol leader to attend the patrol leaders' training camp next week-end.

Troop 13 of the St. John's M. E. Church has enrolled two boys to attend the patrol leaders' camp at the expense of the troop. They are Ted Mason and Jack Lucas.

Sixteen scouts were invested with the rank of tenderfoot and second class at a ceremony of Troop 28, St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church last Wednesday night. The boys lined up before a platform on which the scoutmaster and 12 scouts, in two groups of six, were grouped about a table, on which were 15 candles, representing the 12 Scout Laws and the three points of the Scout Oath. The troop constitution and by-laws were read, after which the scout laws were given by the 12 boys. As the scout repeated the law he lighted one of the candles. The scoutmaster gave each candidate the international handclasp, and received him into his new rank.

Prof. Alfred Davis of Soldan High School gave an illustrated lecture on stars to Troop 30 last Wednesday evening. This troop is going on a hike to the Meramec river today.

The patrols of Troop 98, St. Roch's Catholic school, are each adopting a patrol project, and are also competing in obtaining new members.

Troop 113, of the Church of the Messiah, held a visitors' night last Friday. A program of scout activities and stunts was given.

Troop 150, of the Euclid Baptist Church, had a parents' night Friday. Field Executive S. C. Reaves was present and spoke on camp.

Suburban District.

Field Executive M. N. Leavitt visited Troop 1, Manchester, at the Evangelical Church, yesterday, and helped organize new patrols.

The Holy Name Society of St. Rita's Parish is sponsoring a new troop in Vinita Park. A troop committee has been appointed, composed of H. A. Pecher, chairman, J. Meder, York Silleman and Joe Vatterott. C. Capra, a former scout, has been active in the organization and will serve as assistant scoutmaster.

Troop 3, Webster, met around a campfire in a woods north of Webster Thursday night. Stunts, songs and games featured the meeting. Scout Dinkey passed his star-study test.

Troop 8, Webster, has promoted several patrol leaders in adopting the patrol leader pow wow method, and has formed a seventh patrol. The troop officers are now Joe Browndyke, junior assistant scoutmaster, Charles Haywood, senior patrol leader, and Frank Fuchs, Ross Jones, Joe Schultz, Robert McGinnis, Guy Brown, Herbert Bauer, and Ralph Gell, patrol leaders. Paul Compton was promoted from patrol leader to scribe. The new officers and scouts attaining higher rank received their honors at an investiture ceremony last Friday night, Troop Committeeman J. Willard Wright bestowing the badges. The winners of the inter-patrol contest and the bird-house building contest will be decided next week.

Troop 9, Webster, practiced signalling and fire-by-friction Thursday night, in preparation for the coming Webster rally. The scouts are working on a program to be given at a parents' night the first Thursday in May.

North District.

The Flying Eagle patrol of Troop 8 received 90 points in inspection last Tuesday, the Stag patrol coming second with 50. Albert Simpko won the signaling contest. A number of Scouts will attempt to pass the cycling merit badge today. This troop has four boys signed up for camp.

Troop 147, of the Lillian Avenue Christian Church, held its first outdoor meeting around a council fire last Wednesday night. Methods of signaling by fires and lights were demonstrated. Scoutmaster Jones outlined the patrol method taught at the Scoutmasters' Training School, and the troop voted to adopt it. This troop reregisters May 1.

Twenty scouts of Troop 92, Samuel Cupples School, went on the troop's annual spring overnight hike last Saturday and Sunday, to Col. Geitz' clubhouse on the Missouri River near St. Charles. Paul Mayfield, of Troop 1, and Edward Stodder, a prospective Tenderfoot, were guests of the troop. A bus was chartered to within two miles of St. Charles, the scouts hiking from there to the cabin, where tents were pitched. The afternoon was spent in passing tests, the following boys passing one or more: Bernard Ohler, Paul Moody, William Dale, Howard Schly, Albert Schroeder, Nelton Stern, Loren Blaney, William Duetting and Guy Thompson. One patrol, under Senior Patrol Leader Lonergan, discovered a beginning forest fire in a dead tree and carried water from a swamp until it was extinguished. Sunday school services were held Sunday morning under the leadership of Scoutmaster Custer. Camp was broken immediately after dinner, and the scouts hiked back to the bus line.

Isador Miller and Charles Cole of Troop 206 received their Star pins at the recent Court of Honor. This troop now has obtained 11 merit badges since the circus in February. Herbert Wollberg was elected reporter at the last meeting of the troop, at which Deputy Commissioner J. P. Simmons presented the troop committee with the troop charter.

Troop 184 held a reorganization meeting Wednesday afternoon in the kindergarten of the Divoll School. All future meetings will be held at the same time and place.

St. Louis Women Who Are Active in Planning Girl Scouts' Convention

500 Coming Here for Girl Scouts Meeting

Twelfth Annual Convention of National Council Opens Tuesday.

The twelfth annual convention of the National Council of Girl Scouts will be held in St. Louis for five days, beginning Tuesday, with headquarters at Hotel Chase. Five hundred out-of-town delegates are expected.

Among the women who will participate in the convention's work will be Mrs. Herbert Hoover, who is chairman of the organization's executive committee; Mrs. William Sims, wife of Admiral Sims; and Miss Sarah Louise Arnold, president of the Girl Scouts. Mrs. Calvin Coolidge is honorary president and honorary vice presidents are Mrs. T. J. Preston Jr. (formerly Mrs. Grover Cleveland), Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. William H. Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

The purposes of the convention are to co-ordinate the various branches of the Girl Scout movement and to adopt a program and budget for the ensuing year.

Registration and Reception.

Registration of delegates will take place Tuesday and Wednesday. Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the City Art Museum in Forest Park the St. Louis Council will hold a reception for delegates and visitors.

The first formal session will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday with Mrs. Guy W. Oliver, commissioner of the St. Louis Council, conducting the Girl Scout ceremony. On behalf of Governor Baker, Miss Emma R. Knell, member of the State Legislature, will extend greetings and response will be made by Mrs. Herbert Hoover. Welcome from St. Louis will be voiced by Mrs. Oliver and response will be by Miss Arnold. Mrs. Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts, will tell of its beginnings.

Spring Festival Saturday.

A feature of the program Thursday night will be addresses on "Girl Scouting From Coast to Coast," by Mrs. Hoover; "Comradeship on the Way to Citizenship," by Miss Arnold, and "The Girl Scout Field Today," by Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippen, National Director of the Girl Scouts. This meeting is open to the public.

Friday morning and afternoon and Saturday morning will be devoted to Girl Scout discussions, selection of a place for next year's convention and other business. Saturday afternoon there will be a Spring Festival in the Field House at Washington University. Five hundred Girl Scouts will participate. A chorus of 200 will sing spring songs, and will be followed by an international dance by girls dressed in various national costumes.

Athletics and demonstrations of Girl Scout activities in first-aid, cooking, craftsmanship and sewing are also on the program, which is to close with games and a dance. Symphony Orchestra musicians will play.

Scout Madonna Curran of Arrowhead Troop 7 taught the girls of the troop new steps in the dance they are to give at the Spring Festival Saturday. A number of the scouts have volunteered to act as pages for the evening. Mrs. A. Laub, Miss F. Spinney and Mrs. B. Kleb, grandmother of Bernice Kleb of the Lily of the Valley patrol, visited the troop's last meeting. Games, memory tests and the detective game were participated in and some of the girls gave a playlet.

The patrols of the Coania Troop of Our Lady of Sorrows School each dramatized a scout law at their last meeting, the Blue Bell patrol taking "A Girl Scout is a friend to all and a sister to every other Girl Scout;" the Eagle, "A Girl Scout is cheerful;" the Lone Wolf, "A Girl Scout's honor is to be trusted;" the White Bear patrol, "A Girl Scout is loyal." The memory test and detective games were played, and afterward the girls whipped their ropes in their patrol colors.

Troop 9 spent its last meeting practicing songs and dances for the Festival. The girls are planning several hikes for the time when the weather will permit.

SOUTH SIDE LIONS' CLUB SPONSORS PEABODY TROOP

The South Side Lions' Club has voted to sponsor a new Scout troop organized recently at the Peabody School, under Scoutmaster K. W. Welker. The club has donated the troop a bugle, a troop flag, and ordered record books, has given it $50 in cash, and has appointed a Troop Committee, which will hold its first meeting next Wednesday after the regular troop meeting. It is composed of E. A. Werner, J. Ruth, R. Monthei, Charles Hager and John Schmitt.

Although organized but a few weeks, the troop has grown from a membership of 10 to 22, and already has a waiting list. Several of the scouts are already second class. Three patrols have been formed.

WAS DIZZY, HEAD ACHED, AND COLOR WAS BA

"Until something over two years ago, I suffered with severe bilious attacks which came on me two or three times every month," says Mr. Ollie Miller, of Murray, Ky.

"I would become dizzy. My head would ache terribly, feeling as if it would almost burst. It felt exactly like a tight band was being drawn closer and closer around my temples. This was accompanied by spells of violent nausea.

"My stomach would be so upset I could not retain any kind of nourishment for hours. I would have to quit work and go to bed.

"My color was awful. I was yellow and my skin was drawn and dry. But worse than that was my lack of 'pep.' I did not have any energy—no ambition to work. I dragged at my work—got through it somehow, but always feeling like it was an awful job. I was just about half sick most of the time because of these spells.

"One day one of my neigh who has used Thedford's Draught for years asked me did not try it. He said he ticed how bad my color was, thought it would help me.

"I got some Black-Draught diately and began to take it larly at first until I got my clear of the poison I had been sorbing. I soon began to feel ter and developed a fine appetite had no more bad headaches or ious spells.

"I feel that Thedford's Draught has relieved me of a ble that had been with me for Now I take a dose of Black-D every so often to prevent ness. I am feeling fine. My is healthy now. I can do twice work I could do last year, feel that I owe all this ment to Black-Draught."

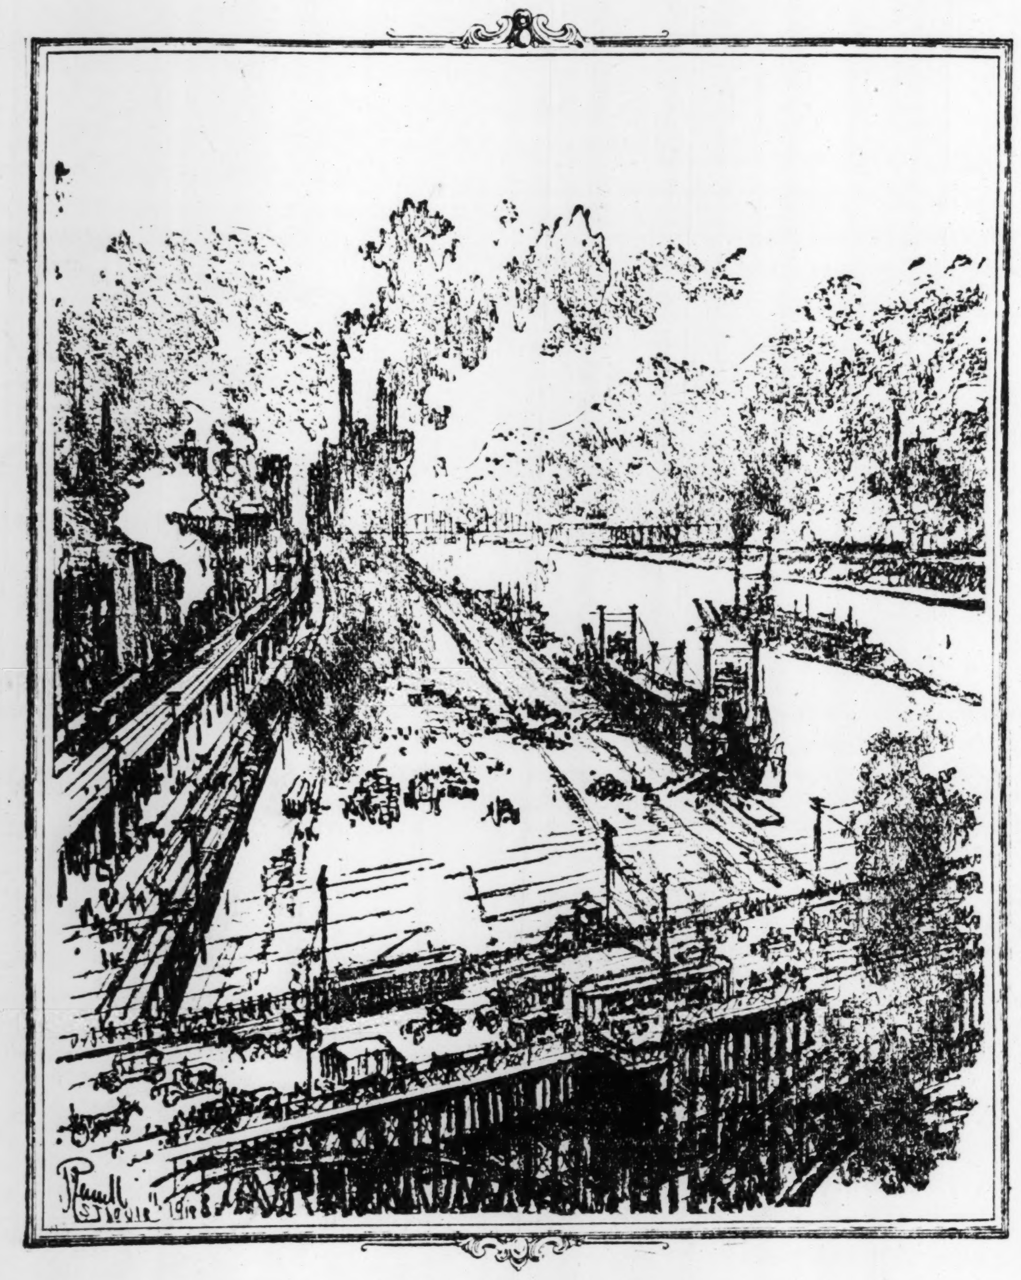
THIS IS THE SECOND CHAPTER IN "THE STORY OF A NEWSPAPER"

"The St. Louis Post-Dispatch is a free newspaper"

Wm Allen White
Emporia Kansas



ST. LOUIS WATER FRONT
Drawn for the Post-Dispatch by JOSEPH PENNELL

THOMAS JEFFERSON said: "No government ought to be without censors, and where the press is free none ever will." There is no more democratic principle of government than this—none that so immediately serves the ends of all classes or has contributed so much to the equality and happiness of the American people.

It is in a great free newspaper, which identifies its own interest with the whole interest and in this behalf is consistently fearless, that such a principle of government finds its justification. A famous western editor says upon this page that the St. Louis Post-Dispatch is such a newspaper.

More than one man accustomed to be stoned for his belief, has publicly recognized the fairness and dispassion of the Post-Dispatch. When Col. Roosevelt came to St. Louis in the heat of the campaign of 1912 he said: "I want to say to you that the Post-Dispatch has given me a square deal. We differ in opinion, but you print the news, which is all that can be asked of any newspaper. You printed in full my Carnegie Hall speech. That was the speech in which I said exactly what I wanted to say."

William Allen White — knows the Post-Dispatch. There is no greater westerner than the editor of the Emporia Gazette, none better qualified to judge the press. He says:

"The St. Louis Post-Dispatch is a free newspaper. Given freedom, the average newspaper will be wise. So the wisdom of the Post-Dispatch, its enterprise, its courage, all are released by its freedom and are dependent upon that. There are few enough free newspapers in the world today. So the Post-Dispatch has distinction. Its distinction is somewhat professional for it is a handsome paper, somewhat ethical for it is an honest paper; and somewhat literary for it is a bright newspaper. And these things are enough for one newspaper."

AT THE AGE OF 83

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

UNIVERSITY RESEARCH WORK IN MANY-LINES

Industries Co-Operate With Several Departments at Urbana, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., April 17.—Industry is looking with increasing favor on the great research work of universities.

The value of research work carried on by the University of Illinois, for instance, in the field of engineering is of such import that at the present time the Engineering Experiment Station is engaged in 18 important projects of this kind and has completed five. The nature of these and the companies involved are:

Investigations of the fatigue phenomena of metals, in co-operation with the Engineering Foundations, National Research Council, General Electric Co., Western Electric Co., Allis-Chalmers Co., and Copper and Brass Association.

Warm air furnace research, in co-operation with the National Warm Air Heating and Ventilating Association.

Investigation of fatigue phenomena of cast steel, in co-operation with the American Steel Foundries.

Investigation of the fatigue of structural parts, in co-operation with the Utilities Research Committee, representing the Commonwealth Edison Co., the Peoples' Gas Light and Coke Co., the Chicago Rapid Transit Co., the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois, the Middle West Utilities Co., and the Chicago North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad Co.

Investigation of the deterioration of electrical porcelain in co-operation with the Utilities Research Committee.

Investigation of refractories, in co-operation with the Utilities Research Committee.

Investigation of boiler feed water treatment, co-operating with the Utilities Research Committee.

Investigation of plumbing, in co-operation with the Illinois Master Plumbers' Association.

Investigation of drainage in Illinois, in co-operation with the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads.

Investigation of earth and gravel roads, in co-operation with the Austin Manufacturing Co.

Investigation of coal mining, in co-operation with the Illinois State Geological Survey and the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

Investigation of reinforced concrete arches, in co-operation with the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Investigation of large steel rollers, in co-operation with the American Railway Engineering Association.

Investigation of stresses in railway track, in co-operation with the American Society of Civil Engineers and the American Railway Engineering Association.

Investigation of railway signaling, in co-operation with the Illinois Central Railroad.

Investigation of molding sands, in co-operation with the Illinois Geological Survey.

Investigation of drying of clay wares, in co-operation with the National Brick Manufacturers' Association.

As the term "co-operative researches" denotes, the undertakings are financed partly by the university, and so the results are not to be kept secret by the company.

In all co-operative investigations the university reserves the right of ownership to all data and results accruing from the investigation and declines to permit the use of these data in advance of their publication except by mutual agreement.

In addition to the co-operative investigations which are now in progress the following co-operative investigations have been completed.

Investigation of the coking of coal, in co-operation with A. T. Hert of Louisville, Ky.

Investigation of the stresses in chilled cast iron car wheels, in co-operation with the Association of Manufacturers of Chilled Iron Car Wheels.

Investigation of the effect of the size of coal on locomotive performance, in co-operation with the International Railway Fuel Association.

Investigation of the viscosity and electrical conductivity of glass, in co-operation with the National Research Council through the Corning Glass Works Fellowship.

Investigation of the friction losses and power requirements in the proposed ventilating system for the New York and New Jersey vehicular tunnel to be constructed under the Hudson River, in co-operation with the United States Bureau of Mines, acting for the New York State Bridge and Tunnel Commission and the New Jersey Interstate Bridge and Tunnel Commission.

The present list of researches is distributed among the engineering departments as follows: Ceramic engineers, 10; civil engineering, 11; electrical engineering, 8; mechanical engineering, 11; mining engineering, 4; municipal and sanitary engineering and theoretical and applied mechanics, 13; physics, 8; railway engineering, 6; industrial chemistry, 14.

The work is at present conducted by a corps consisting of 32 full-time investigators, 14 research graduate assistants who devote half their time to research and half the time to graduate work, and 50 members of the teaching staff of the College of Engineering, who devote part of their time to research investigations.

The university's station, now recognized as one of the leading research bodies of the world, was established by action of the Board of Trustees, Dec. 8, 1903.

89th Men Here to Organize.

St. Louis veterans of the Eighty-ninth Division will meet at Jeffla Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues, Wednesday, April 28, at 8 p. m., to form a local branch of the Eighty-ninth Division War Society.

The purpose of the local organization will be to prepare plans for the general reunion of the Eighty-ninth Division, which will be held in St. Louis next fall. Capt. Neville C. Fisher, formerly of the 355th Infantry, estimated that there are approximately 4500 men in St. Louis who went overseas as members of the Eighty-ninth Division.

DECORATIONS IN POEMS LATEST LONDON CRAZE

Mayfair Women Having Verses Written to Order on Walls of Smaller Rooms.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 17.—The latest London society craze is likely to bring an era of prosperity to young poets. The newest ideas of decoration in the minds of Mayfair women consist of having the walls of rooms covered with verses specially composed and written to order. A fee of five guineas is the general price paid for each poem, and the demand is so good for lyrics, which range between eight lines and 20, that prices are likely to rise.

Usually the rooms chosen for this fad are small music rooms, studies and boudoirs, but several persons have started such decoration on the walls of drawing rooms.

Prospective bridegrooms have given orders for a small verse of welcome to be written on the wall of a room to be occupied by the new bride.

Up to the present original verses only are in demand, and the standard poets have not been drawn on for decorative purposes.

Gray Hair Is Easily Darkened

Tells How She Did It With a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Anyone can darken their gray or faded hair, and look twenty years younger with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp, is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion or Stomach Trouble CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis accompanied by dangerous stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestants that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little hot water and Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. It soaks up the harmful excess acid much as a sponge or blotting paper might and your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use, is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

FRENCH RIVIERA HAS BOOM IN TRUE FLORIDA STYLE

Villages and Towns Springing Up as Private Estates Are Made Into Building Lots.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 13.—France has her Florida and if the boom along the Riviera does not present the spectacular features that have been reported about the Florida resort the two booms are running along similar lines. Painters and writers were the first to discover that the Riviera could be more than a fashionable winter resort. They tried summer residence, as a measure of economy, and soon a number were living there all the year round. Bankers soon bought up the land between Saint Raphael and Monte Carlo. Then the boom began. Municipalties began selling public lands as building sites and other municipalities, not possessing common land, formed improvement syndicates to take over the property and sell it in lots with the purpose of booming their towns.

Paris is covered with poster invitations to buy lots and build above, around and near Nice and Cannes. The daily papers every day announce the cutting up of some big private property for building lots.

Lots do not change hands with the frequency that they seem to in Florida, but many are held on speculation. One piece of land bought in 1923, for a million francs brought in seven million after it had been cut into building lots. Villages have sprung into being where an odd house or two stood and former villages have become towns, and as there have been no restrictions on the style of building the result is sometimes startling.

REDUCTION OF TUBERCULOSIS AMONG NEGROES DISCUSSED

Disease Found to Be Increasing With Death Rate Four Times That Among Whites.

How to reduce the tuberculosis death rate among Negroes in St. Louis was one of the subjects discussed at health meetings held during Negro health week, which ended yesterday. Figures based on a recent survey by the Tuberculosis Society were cited showing that the death rate of Negroes from tuberculosis has not been reduced in proportion to the rate among the white population.

The Negro death rate for the last five years has been four times the white death rate, while in the preceding four years it was but three times the white rate.

YOUNG JUGO SLAVIAN QUEEN PLANNING VISIT TO LONDON

She Is Europe's Youngest Sovereign and Is One of Queen Victoria's Grandchildren.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 17.—Europe's youngest Queen, who only a few years ago was attending school near London, will play a prominent part in social affairs here during the coming season.

She is the Queen of Jugoslavia, who has written the Duke and Duchess of York that she will accompany the Jugoslavian king on his visit to England within the next few weeks. Through her mother, Queen of Rumania, the young Queen Marie has intimate family relations with the British royal house, she being one of the numerous grandchildren of Queen Victoria.

Little Prince Peter is coming with them. The Duke and Duchess of York went to Belgrade a year or so ago to act as sponsors to the child.

During her visit here and in Paris as well, it has been reported that the queen may see her brother, Crown Prince Carol, who renounced his rights to the Rumanian throne some months ago. As to this, nothing has been stated officially, as the Queen's journey is more of a private than a public nature. The Queen is 26 years old and, like her sister, Princess Ileana, was educated in Paris.

GERMAN RADIO TAX DELAYED

Action Forced by Ptosests Against Proposed 25-Cent Levy.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 17.—Protests of thousands of Berlin radio fans have induced the administrative council to postpone consideration of a bill taxing radio receiving set owners 25 cents a month. The council had hoped to add $3,300,000 a year to the city's income with the radio tax, as there are 1,100,000 sets in operation in Berlin. Radio owners contended that they were paying 50 cents a month, or a total of $550,000, for the privilege of taking programs out of the air and that this sume was 20 times more than it cost the Government and city for salaries of radio artists and broadcasting expenses.

Broadcasting stations controlled by the Government are not rented out for advertising purposes. There are no private stations except those owned by amateurs and news agencies.

SHE TOOK PARTICULAR NOTICE

Of How So Many Whom She Knew Personally Had Been Relieved Through the Use of the Great Herb Extract Remedy Known as Herb Juice, So She Took It Herself.

"The thing which caused me to be so favorably impressed and to take particular notice of Herb Juice was the fact that so nany of the folks right here at home many of whom I knew personally, were taking this great remedy with such astounding results, and their cases being so similar to mine that I at last decided to try this wonderful remedy myself. And I don't think that anyone feels more kindly toward this great remedy than I do, for the remarkable improvement it has made in my general health." This was part of the gratifying statement made very recently to the special demonstrator at Walgreen Drug Company by Miss Helen Davis, who resides at 4017 Lindell boulevard, St. Louis, Missouri.

Continuing her statement of her condition before she was fortunate enough to find the great herb extract called Herb Juice, Miss Davis said: "For a number of years I have been a sufferer of chronic constipation and from this constipated condition grew several other very annoying ailments such as gas on the stomach, severe pains through my back and chest. I was extremely nervous and could not res well at night. In brief, I was in a badly run-down condition generally and was always trying something to relieve me of my ailments. Finally, I began noticing so many attractive testimonials in the paper and also had so many of my very intimate friends and acquaintances recommend Herb Juice so highly that I at last decided to try this remedy myself. And I can truthfully say that it did all for me that I expected it to do and a great deal more. I have only taken Herb Juice a short time, but during that time it has certainly worked wonders for me. It has completely eliminated my constipated condition; never suffer any more with those pains through my chest and back and now when I retire I can sleep the whole night through and get up feeling very refreshed and eager for my daily routine. I don't know of anything that gives me more pleasure than to make this public statement in behalf of Herb Juice, the one medicine which I consider superior to everything that I have ever tried. And I urge all my friends to try this medicine on my recommendation."

MISS HELEN DAVIS

This great laxative medicine is an Herb Extract preparation, known as Herb Juice and is outselling any medicine where it has been introduced. Many are calling daily to see the special demonstrator at Walgreen Drug Company, 514 Washington avenue, giving statements for publication, praising this great remedy that their friends may be induced to try it.

USE CANTHROX Shampoo

MAKE THE BOB MORE BECOMING

All beauty experts agree that every woman should arrange the bob to suit her special style of beauty. Some like the hair worn plain, some waved, some elaborately curled, but, however it is worn, the hair itself must be healthy, lustrous and abundant. To do this, the right shampoo is essential and women who are "in the know" welcome the use of the simple preparation called Canthrox.

It is easily used—simply dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and apply it all over the head. The hair dries evenly, is never streaked, and because it is so fluffy, appears more abundant than it really is. This shampoo is excellent, also, to stimplate the scalp and leave a clean, healthful feeling. Canthrox is inexpensive, costing only three cents a shampoo. It can be had of any druggist—(Advertisement.)

CHIGNON IS LATEST GIFT OF PARIS HAIRDRESSERS

Small Roll of Hair Worn Low on Necks of Women, Held by Vacuum Cup.

PARIS, April 17.—Paris, which gave the world the pompadour, is about to hand it the chignon.

Whether the world will accept it as it did the pompadour is problematical. At present Parisians' chief recognition of this small roll of hair worn low on the neck is a protest that they'll never wear the thing; and anyhow, "how do you keep it on?" they ask.

Nevertheless at the famous Springham fair in Paris, a chignon with a vacuum cup arrangement, warranted to hold it to shingled heads like a leech, attracted as big crowds as free slices of country ham.

A number of dressmakers have announced that they will design no more gowns for shaved necks and will refuse all orders from short-haired customers, except those who wear chignons as a compromise. Just how far the dressmakers will be able to enforce their demand for onk locks is a matter for the future to resolve but it has not had much effect so far.

GERMAN PRESIDENT MAY GET SALARY INCREASE

Proposed Advance Would Give Von Hindenburg $42,857 a Year; $95,000 for Expenses.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 17.—The coalition Government has decided that President von Hindenburg merits a salary increase. Under the executive budget, which has passed the Finance Committee but is still to be submitted to the Reichstag, he will get a salary of $42,857 a year, increase of $18,857 over his previous salary.

Although the German executive's salary, if increased, would be about $33,000 a year less than that of President Coolidge, he would still come out ahead because of the heavy allotment for traveling expenses and other items allowed him. President Coolidge gets an allotment of $25,000 for this purpose, while the German President gets $95,000 annually for it.

The total executive budget appropriation as requested is $1,000,000, an increase of $300,000 over that of 1925.

MAY WED BRITISH PRINCESS

Norwegian Prince Expected to Choose Lady May Cambridge.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 17.—Persistent rumors that Crown Prince Olaf of Norway will marry a British princess, have caused much speculation. Lady May Cambridge, daughter of Lord Athlone and Princess Alice, is generally believed to be the young woman who is in line for the Norwegian throne. At one time Prince Olaf was known to be much interested in the Swedish princess, Astrid, who is generally regarded as the princess whom the Prince of Wales is most likely to marry.

Lady May Cambridge would be a suitable match for Prince Olaf, so far as birth and connections go. She is a niece of Queen Mary and her mother is the first cousin of King George. Princess Alice, the mother of Lady May Cambridge, is a daughter of Queen Victoria's youngest son, the Duke of Albany.

Will Talk on Medicine Man.

"The Daily Life of the Indian Medicine Man Who Was the Pharmacist Before the Advent of the White Man," will be the subject of an address by Dr. H. M. Whelpley, dean of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, before the alumni, students and friends, April 21, at 8 o'clock, at the college.

BABY SUFFERED DAY AND NIGHT

Had Eczema For Eight Months. Was Very Cross. Cuticura Healed.

"My baby had eczema for about eight months. He suffered day and night with a red, itchy skin, and was very cross and fretful. We had to keep his hands tied for about five months to keep him from scratching.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some, and after using three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap, he was completely healed, in about six weeks." (Signed) Mrs. Andrew Mortensen, Green Bay Ave., Denmark, Wis., June 3, 1925.

PRINCESSES TO VISIT LONDON; MATCHMAKETS GET BUSY

Not Without Reason for Prince of Wales and Prince George Should Be Marrying Soon.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 17.—The visits of foreign royalty which will be common in London this summer have given those inclined to matchmaking at least three royal subjects for speculation, in which the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, play prominent parts.

The largest number of foreign royalties are scheduled to visit England this coming season since the world war.

Princess Astrid of Sweden, whose name has been coupled with that of the Prince of Wales in the king's subjects, will be the first to arrive. Another princess to visit the court will be the Infanta Beatrice of Spain, the 17-year-old daughter of the King of Spain, whom some think a good match for Prince George, youngest of the English princes.

The King and Queen of Spain probably will arrive at the same time, but not on a state visit. The Queen of Spain is a daughter of the English Princess Beatrice, who lives in Queen Victoria's old residence, Kensington Palace, and they will visit there.

The visit of the young Spanish princess is causing much stir and great speculation, but all that is definitely known is that her parents are not anxious to have her marry so young. Her father will insist on her marrying a Catholic, or at least in the church, which, of course, may eliminate the British royal son.

Queen Marie of Rumania also is to visit London this spring, accompanied by her pretty and equally eligible daughter, the Princess Ileana, whose name has been coupled with that of the Prince of Wales more than once.

COMBINATION FROCK SAVES TIME FOR LONDON WOMEN

New Dress Is Equally Appropriate for Afternoon or Evening Wear.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 17.—Dressmakers have produced one panacea for social difficulties. It is a combination afternoon and evening frock, which can be received without looks of scorn at any Mayfair gathering before or after the sun goes down. London dressmakers have brought out a labor and time saving dress. It is really a semievening frock, not too elaborate for afternoon wear for the absence of sleeves is so dexterously affected that it will not command the attention which sleeveless dresses usually do. The new dresses will allow women to keep any engagement between the hours of 3 to midnight without any impunity.

The reason for the new dress is a change in the habits of fair Mayfair. Nowadays when afternoon teas and dansants are over those who want to be in the swim adjourn to someone's house for a "6 o'clock," which means gossip and cocktails, or sherry for the more discriminating. This allows no time for a change for the theater or night club and here is where the new dress is worth its cost. These "6 o'clock" end with a respite of half an hour for necessary cosmetic application, and so the trials of the society debutante or otherwise are neatly solved.

JEWISH HOSPITAL IN NEW BUILDING BY MAY 15

Masonic Fraternity Acquires Present Site for Addition to Institution.

The Jewish Hospital will be established in its $2,500,000 plant, Kingshighway, in the Barnes Hospital group, by May 15, it was stated yesterday by Aaron Waldheim, president of the association. Ownership of the present property, adjoining the Masonic Home, at Delmar and Union boulevards, on the west, has been acquired by the Masonic fraternity for addition to the home, thus increasing is capacity by about 200. This will relieve a state of congestion in the home that has existed for a long while, the number of old people and children at present being approximately 325.

The site of the present Jewish Hospital is part of a 15-acre tract purchased for the Masonic Home in 1888. Nine of the 15 acres, lying north of what is now Enright avenue, later were sold to Washington University, and is now the site of Junior High School.

STYLE SHOW POSTER CONTEST TO BE DECIDED MAY 3

Winning Picture Will Be Used for Advertising Pageant of of Fashion.

The jury of awards of the St. Louis Style Show Committee will decide the winners of the fourth annual poster contest for students of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts on May 3. The posters will be used in advertising the twelfth Pageant of Fashion, which will be held in the Garden Theater Aug. 2-21 inclusive, except Sundays.

Exhibitors at the pageant will be wholesale garment, shoe and millinery manufacturers of St. Louis. Flint Garrison, chairman of the style show committee, has stated that a high standard of artistic production will be maintained in the show. Joseph Solari is director of the pageant and Miss Irma Summa is director of the ballet.

High Schools to Debate.

"Resolved: That the Several States Should Adopt the Proposed Amendment to the Federal Constitution Granting Women Equal Rights" is to be debated Friday afternoon by teams from John Burroughs School and Webster Groves High School. Two teams from each school will argue the question pro and con, debates being held simultaneously at both schools.

To Reinstate German Surgeons.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 17.—Dr. William Mayo of the Mayo Institute at Rochester, Minn., is quoted in Berlin as saying that American surgeons will introduce a motion at the coming international surgical congress at Rome requesting reinstatement of German and Austrian colleagues to the international organization, from which they were barred during the World War. The German Society of Surgery now is observing its fiftieth anniversary. Among American surgeons who have contributed professional articles to the anniversary number of Deutsche Medizinische Wochenschrift, are Dr. Mayo, Dr. Dean Lewis of Chicago, Dr. Walter Dandy of Johns Hopkins and Dr. G. W. Crile of Cleveland.

PRINCESS OPENS SHOP AND WILL SERVE AFTERNOON TEA

It Is Unusual, but Times Are Hard and One Cannot Live Without Working.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 17.—Princess Lucien Murat, after writing articles on fashions and women's questions for the press, has opened a shop, an act which has made some stir in France, where the blueblooded have not heretofore entered retail business.

The shop is a house in the Place Dauphine, once inhabited by Madame Roland, who was guillotined during the French revolution. The rooms will be stocked with fine editions of books and paintings for sale, and tea can be had from 5 till 7 each afternoon.

The new keeper is the sister of the present Duke of Rohan Chabot, who has family history which goes far back. Her husband descends from the second son of the Prince Joachim Murat, son of a ploughman, who became a Prince, Duke, and even King (of Naples) through marrying Napoleon I's sister, Caroline.

"The times are hard," says the Princess, "and incomes diminish daily with the francs. Furthermore, I believe that it is going to become more and more difficult to live without working. I will be at my shop every day and I hope the artists and collectors will make a habit of coming here so that I can be of some benefit to moderate painters whose talent I admire. The rooms are small, but I hope to see them a center of artists' life."

FRENCH TAPESTRY PLANT NOW EMPLOYES TWO WOMEN

The First Faced Many Obstacles, But Second Wins Place in Open Competition.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 17.—The Gobelins Tapestry Manufactory, one of the sights of Paris on every tourist's program, has admitted a second woman as a worker, and the manner of her admission is a testimony to the progress made in securing the same treatment for women as for men.

Five years ago Mlle. Andree Etevenon had to face all sorts of resistance and employ every kind of ruse before she succeeded in being accepted as the first woman pupil at the Gobelins Manufactory. She is now a full-fledged "artist" who works on the most important subjects.

Mlle. Marguerite Loger, the newcomer, is only 17. She did not have to meet the same difficulties as her predecessor, but was admitted to the entrance competition without question and passed in first. She is now a "pupil" and works on screens, hearth rugs and small pieces. In two years she will rank as an "artist" and be allowed to work on Savonnerie carpets and large tapestries.

She will have her share in the large grounds attached to the Gobelins Manufactory, which are divided into gardens for the employes. It is a sign of the times that the tulips and roses that once occupied these gardens have made way for cabbages and potatoes.

FIREMEN HUNT AURORA BOREAL

German Volunteers Thought Something Was Burning and Turned Out.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 17.—Virtually the whole population of Baden is chuckling over the fact that the Eppingen volunteer fire fighting force recently went racing on a midnight excursion which, as was discovered later, had as its object the extinguishing of the aurora borealis.

From the village market it appeared as if a nearby castle was burning. When the horse-drawn hose cart reached the place and the men saw no fire they raced on to the next village. Seeing an automobile in front of a saloon, the firemen dashed in, talked the driver into abandoning a card game and driving them on to the next village. But the blaze seemed to be farther up the valley. They had driven several miles farther before they realized that they were chasing rainbows at night.

The Chamber of Commerce, Mississippi Valley Association, World Trade Club and the local office of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce are sponsoring the conference, which will include morning and afternoon business sessions and a banquet in the evening.

Three experts of the United States Department of Comerce will advise the exporters how to develop foreign trade. Trade Commissioner H. P. MacGowan, who recently returned from an extended trade investigation in the West Indies and Central America, will describe unexploited markets in those regions. C. C. Junkin, head of the Commerce Department Division of Commercial Laws, will discuss legal questions about foreign shipments, and Eric T. King, chief of the specialties division, will talk on foreign specialties markets.

Other speakers will be William F. Gephart, vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis; G. R. Meyercord, president of the American Manufactures' Foreign Credit Underwriters of Chicago R. L. McKeller, foreign freight agent of the Southern Railway System, Louisville; L. B. FIREMEN HUNT AURORA BOREAL

German Volunteers Thought Something Was Burning and Turned Out.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 17.—Virtually the whole population of Baden is chuckling over the fact that the Eppingen volunteer fire fighting force recently went racing on a midnight excursion which, as was discovered later, had as its object the extinguishing of the aurora borealis.

From the village market it appeared as if a nearby castle was burning. When the horse-drawn hose cart reached the place and the men saw no fire they raced on to the next village. Seeing an automobile in front of a saloon, the firemen dashed in, talked the driver into abandoning a card game and driving them on to the next village. But the blaze seemed to be farther up the valley. They had driven several miles farther before they realized that they were chasing rainbows at night.

Native of Palestine to Speak.

Dr. David Reiss, a native of Palestine and graduate of the University of Heidelberg, will speak next Tuesday at 8 p. m. at Hotel Statler on "American Jewry and Palestine." Dr. Reiss will treat of political, economic and social problems of Palestine. He will also discuss the newly formed state in Palestine.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

Choked All Night From Asthma

Every Sign of the Trouble Gone. Tells How She Got Well.

Readers who suffer from asthma and bronchial trouble will be glad to learn how Mrs. W. G. Pierson, Route 1, Colby, Kas., conquered her trouble. Mrs. Pierson writes:

"For 16 years, I had asthma in severe form. I couldn't sleep and rarely tried to go to bed before 1:30 in the morning. I kept getting more weak and nervous, and had a terrible cough and severe pains. I was in Akron, Colorado, when I started taking Nacor in February, 1925. Early in March I felt so much better I returned to Missouri. It used to be that one night in Missouri would make me choke terribly, but I don't have a sign of asthma now. I sleep all night, get up feeling rested, have gained about 10 pounds in weight, and do my work without dreading it or getting tired. Even in damp, rainy weather, I have no asthma."

Hundreds of other sufferers from bronchitis and severe chronic coughs have reported their recovery, after years of affliction. Their letters and a booklet full of valuable information about these stubborn diseases, will be sent free by Nacor Medicine Co., 555 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind. No matter how serious your case seems, write for this free booklet today. It may give your whole life a new meaning.

Stepping Out

MISS MOLLIE PERLMUTTER

"When you're always on the go, dancing, driving or whatnot, it's a joy not to be always dabbing at your face with a powder puff," says Miss Mollie Perlmutter, 154 W. 98th St., New York City. "I've never seen anything like the way Black and White Face Powder clings for hours, so softly and evenly, giving an exquisite, velvety finish that seems like part of my own complexion. I love its delicate, lingering 'Incense of Flowers' perfume, too."

You can get Black and White "Incense of Flowers" Face Powder from dealers everywhere in the dainty 50c boxes, or combined with the soft, alluringly tinted Black and White Rouge, in handsome, watch-thin compacts for a dollar.

Best results come from using Black and White Skin Soap along with the Black and White Beauty Creations.

MOUND MEN CHOSE GOOD TOWN SITES

Cities Have Grown Where Prehistoric Race Built Their Earth Temples.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 17.—A shrewd race of prehistoric men first chose as a building site the spot where, after thousands of years, an American city now stands.

Scientists, unraveling some of the age-old mysteries of the so-called "Indian Mounds" at Quincy, Ill., and other points on the Mississippi River's alluvial plain, have reached the conclusion that the mounds are today's sole legacy of an ancient race of men by whose infinite labor the earthern structures were raised above the surrounding plain, in tribute, perhaps to their tribal gods.

The judgment shown by this ancient people is borne out by the fact that the great cities of the Mississippi Valley are built where mounds most abound. Quincy, Ill., Cincinnati, O., Des Moines, Ia., and St. Louis, Mo., as well as others, are located on or near these mound sites, the story of whose builders may alone be found only in these great earthworks, temples of dirt and forts of clay.

Where Sacred Fires Burned.

"Evidently Quincy was a Cathedral city once before," remarked Bishop Fawcett of the diocese of Quincy, when his attention was called to the presence of supposed temples among the earth remains of the mound men in Quincy's Indian Mound Park. That the mounds were designed as great outdoor temples of worship, on whose tops a sacred fire was kept burning by priests of the sun, has long been a common supposition among interested students.

"Not until recent years has science come to a definite conclusion as to the origin of the mounds," said Dr. A. R. Crook, chief of the State Museum Division of Illinois, who, with Profs. Moorhead and Leighton of the University of Illinois, made a series of excavations in a number of mounds located on the Illinois bank of the Mississippi River at St. Louis.

Of Artificial Origin.

"Many writers have described these mounds as being made by Indians, while others contend that they are just like sandbars or islands in rivers. Without digging, however, accurate studies could not be made. The number, location and general contour of the grounds are indeed such as to suggest a natural origin.

"But their internal structure, as revealed by recent scientifically conducted excavations, although found to consist in layers, were composite in character, thus substantiating the theory that the mounds are of artificial origin. If the materials of which these layers are composed had been laid down in water and consequently were the result of natural processes, clay masses would not be found scattered through sandy loam, and pieces of flint, pottery, shells, bone and charcoal would not be found in all parts of the mass without regard to their specific gravity. The charocal would come in the top layers, the flint rock fragments and pottery in the bottom; and the bones and shells between.

TATE MOTOR CO., Inc.

Delivered 175 used cars in the month of March

WHY?

THE ANSWER—Our Used Cars were purchased on a business basis, giving our customer dollar-for-dollar value only, which makes it possible to sell our Used Cars more cheaply than the dealer who allows $100 to $200 more for this same type of car by reason of having FACTORY TRADE ALLOWANCE or FICTITIOUS LIST PRICE in some cases.

These same Cars are sold to the public on the same dollar-for-dollar value basis, hence our unusual number of sales on Used Cars.

We never need have SPECIAL SALES or CLEARANCE SALES as we have always had a steady, regular sale for the Used Cars we have taken in part payment on New Cars.

"Gee, that's a swell bus your pop's driving. We saw you all pile into it yesterday. Can she step?"

"Oh, boy! Betcha she'll do sixty!"

"So's your old man!"

"I'll betcha! Pop was going 45 before he knew it and had to slow down so's he wouldn't be pinched. Said he never travels over 25 on purpose, but this baby runs so smooth he didn't know he was goin' so fast."

"Dad says your pop must 'a laid out a pile of jack."

"My pop says if more people knew about Weber-Pledged Used Cars and how cheap they are, everybody'd be owning one!"

Delivered 175 used cars in the month of March

WHY?

THE ANSWER—Our Used Cars were purchased on a business basis, giving our customer dollar-for-dollar value only, which makes it possible to sell our Used Cars more cheaply than the dealer who allows $100 to $200 more for this same type of car by reason of having FACTORY TRADE ALLOWANCE or FICTICIOUS LIST PRICE in some cases.

These same Cars are sold to the public on the same dollar-for-dollar value basis, hence our unusual number of sales on Used Cars.

We never need have SPECIAL SALES or CLEARANCE SALES as we have always had a steady, regular sale for the Used Cars we have taken in part payment on New Cars.

"NOT FOR SALE"

There are over 10,000 independent retail 5, 10 and 25 cents (Variety) Stores in the United States. It is a significant fact that, with very rare exceptions, they are not for sale.

Those who are fortunate enough to own one or more are, for obvious reasons, not interested in disposing of them.

If compelled to sell through ill health or for some other cause there is usually a relative, or a close friend, who has the "inside" and is waiting to step in before anyone else has a chance to make an offer.

You are interested in getting into a profitable business—is it not worth your while to investigate the possibilities of the Variety Store?

You may not be able to buy a Variety Store, but you can start one of your own if you know how to pick a good location, are ambitious to succeed and can furnish the necessary capital.

Acting as a sort of clearing house for the Variety business during the past 48 years, we have gathered a wealth of information which we are glad to pass along to responsible persons who have a genuine ambition to succeed, and are in a position to invest $2000 to $6000.

We are in touch with a few excellent locations in this territory which, according to surveys made by our expert service men will support liberally, a retail Variety Store, without conflicting with stores now established.

Come in and ask us for further particulars or write us in confidence. It may prove to be your first step toward the ownership of one or a number of successful stores.

328 N. 18th st., St. Louis.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR NE 21-STORY HOTEL THAT W COST $5,000,000 ON LIN

Construction of Park Lane Will Start justment of Minor Architectur Details, Bradshaw Announces.

By Berry Moore.

Involving an investment of $5,000,000, including plans have been completed for the 21-story Park Lane ment Building with tower, to be erected at the southwes Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue.

The building will have a frontage of 177 feet on Lindell boulevard, with a depth of 217 feet on Spring avenue. A permit for the building was taken out prior to the passage of the zoning law, with financial arrangements for construction completed.

The new structure is to be built by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, and those associated with him in the erection of the Coronado Hotel at the northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, which recently has been enlarged.

Designed in the Spanish style of architecture, the building will be faced with cream-colored brick and terra cotta, with red Spanish tile roof. The main entrance will be on Lindell boulevard, set back to conform to the building line.

A small theater with not more than 800 seats will be built in the lower floor, which also will include small banquet rooms, and shops with entrances and exhibition windows visible only on the interior of the corridors and the arcade.

Plans contemplate a total of 250 kitchenette suites and 300 hotel rooms, all en suite, with dressing rooms and baths. There will be six elevators for passenger service and freight delivery.

According to the architect's description, a patio will extend around the entire building, serving as a promenade in inclement weather, forming a feature that will lend a colorful effect to the architecture.

The second floor will include two large terraces for summer lounging and a series of large meeting rooms for the various women's organizations that have agreed to take space in the building. There also will be a collegiate wing for the use of traveling graduates of various universities. This will be equipped with reading rooms and other facilities for their exclusive use.

OSAGE HILLS SALES MORE THAN $500,000

More than $500,000 worth of home locations have been sold in Osage Hills, the new residential suburb on the Big Bend road and the Meramec River, according to officers of Bixby-Smith, Inc., 316 North Eighth street, owners and developers of the property.

Despite the inclement weather of the opening sales day last Sunday and for several days previous, the sales reached a total beyond all expectations. Throughout the past week there has been an increasing demand for the property.

The locating of a whole community almost over night is not due to any boom movement, it is said, but rather to the value of this neighborhood for homes. Recreational and social opportunities are at hand, with an environment suited to the ideal home community.

Every recreational feature, including golf, tennis, swimming, boating, horseback riding, will be afforded by Osage Country Club, which is located in the midst of the Osage Hills district. Bixby-Smith, Inc., will give information to prospective home owners in Osage Hills.

NEW SENATE THEATER ON NORTH BROADWAY OPENED

The new Senate Theater at 7-9 North Broadway was opened last Saturday.

It is a new fire-proof building equipped with a cooling device for the summer months, as it is intended that the house shall run during the entire season. An organ has been installed.

The building was erected by the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co., representing the owner, William G. Riley and others, and has been leased for a long term of years to Charles Goldman and Julius Leventhal. An illustration of the building appears elsewhere in this paper.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR NEW 21-STORY HOTEL THAT WILL COST $5,000,000 ON LINDELL

Construction of Park Lane Will Start on Adjustment of Minor Architectural Details, Bradshaw Announces.

By Berry Moore.

Involving an investment of $5,000,000, including furnishings, plans have been completed for the 21-story Park Lane Hotel Apartment Building with tower, to be erected at the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue.

The building will have a frontage of 177 feet on Lindell boulevard, with a depth of 217 feet on Spring avenue. A permit for the building was taken out prior to the passage of the zoning law, with financial arrangements for construction completed.

The new structure is to be built by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, and those associated with him in the erection of the Coronado Hotel at the northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, which recently has been enlarged.

Designed in the Spanish style of architecture, the building will be faced with cream-colored brick and terra cotta, with red Spanish tile roof. The main entrance will be on Lindell boulevard, set back to conform to the building line.

A small theater with not more than 800 seats will be built in the lower floor, which also will include small banquet rooms, and shops with entrances and exhibition windows visible only on the interior of the corridors and the arcade.

Plans contemplate a total of 250 kitchenette suites and 300 hotel rooms, all en suite, with dressing rooms and baths. There will be six elevators for passenger service and freight delivery.

According to the architect's description, a patio will extend around the entire building, serving as a promenade in inclement weather, forming a feature that will lend a colorful effect to the architecture.

The second floor will include two large terraces for summer lounging and a series of large meeting rooms for the various women's organizations that have agreed to take space in the building. There also will be a collegiate wing for the use of traveling graduates of various universities. This will be equipped with reading rooms and other facilities for their exclusive use.

There will be three floors with parlors for the exclusive use of women guests, and general arrangement for their comfort.

The upper floors will be given over to studio apartments, with living rooms, two stories in height. These apartments will contain two, three, four and five bedrooms with bath adjoining.

Construction will be started as soon as minor architectural details are perfected, it was announced.

As a result of the successful outcome of the project, development on Lindell boulevard, doubtless, henceforth will be on a higher scale.

The proposed hotel apartments will set a new standard for that district, overtopping the 18-story University Club Building at Grand and Washington boulevards, one of the loftiest structures West of Twelfth boulevard.

Bradshaw headed the syndicate that built the new Mayfair Hotel at Eighth and St. Charles streets and he designed the Chase and Melbourne Hotels. He also designed a number of large hotel structures in other cities, including notably the Brown Hotel in Louisville, Ky.

NEW HOTEL FOR DELMAR AND EUCLID

A nine-story hotel-apartment building, with shops and a restaurant on the first floor, is to be built at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Euclid avenue, it is reported. The site, having a frontage on Delmar of 150 feet, is being acquired from Anheuser-Busch, Inc., by a syndicate which will erect the structure, for which financial arrangements have been made with Chicago bankers.

The present building formerly was occupied by Cicardi's Cafe, which flournished before the enactment of the Volstead act. The price involved for the site is given as $150,000, or $1000 a foot for the Delmar boulevard frontage, according to realty circles.

OSAGE HILLS SALES MORE THAN $500,000

More than $500,000 worth of home locations have been sold in Osage Hills, the new residential suburb on the Big Bend road and the Meramec River, according to officers of Bixby-Smith, Inc., 316 North Eighth street, owners and developers of the property.

Despite the inclement weather of the opening sales day last Sunday and for several days previous, the sales reached a total beyond all expectations. Throughout the past week there has been an increasing demand for the property.

The locating of a whole community almost over night is not due to any boom movement, it is said, but rather to the value of this neighborhood for homes. Recreational and social opportunities are at hand, with an environment suited to the ideal home community.

Every recreational feature, including golf, tennis, swimming, boating, horseback riding, will be afforded by Osage Country Club, which is located in the midst of the Osage Hills district. Bixby-Smith, Inc., will give information to prospective home owners in Osage Hills.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR SPACE IN NEW BUILDING PENDING

Negotiations are pending for several leases of space in the Universal Building at the southwest corner of Olive and Beaumont streets. Two outside concerns seek ground floor quarters in this building, which are available for display purposes.

The local branch of the wholesale department of the Studebaker Co., now occupies the corner portion of the ground floor. A number of other well known concerns have acquired quarters in the building.

The demand for quarters in this section will be greatly increased with the widening of the thoroughfare.

WOMAN TO BUILD $500,000 APARTMENT

Contracts have been let for the eight-story fireproof Willard apartment building to be erected at 445-55 De Baliviere avenue by Mrs. Minnie Housam, president of the Housam Realty Co., with offices in the International Life Building, who owns the Ranelagh Apartments on an adjoining site at the northwest corner of De Baliviere and McPherson avenues.

While the building will be operated as a separate unit, a spacious lobby and lounge will connect the two buildings and an entrance will be provided on De Baliviere avenue, which with the present entrance on McPherson avenue will provide a double entrance to both buildings. The Willard will be just north of the Ranelagh.

The Willard, which is scheduled for completion by Nov. 1, will contain 60 units consisting of one and four-room efficiency apartments with tile bath, one large studio apartment on the eighth floor, four shops and a cafe.

The building will be completely furnished on a luxurious scale and equipped with in-a-dor beds, refrigeration, running ice water in each apartment, white enamel gas stoves and built-in white enamel kitchen equipment. Construction will be matt brick with terra cotta trimmings. The cost is announced as $500,000.

The two buildings will contain a total of 166 apartments and will have a frontage on De Baliviere avenue of 185 feet and of 125 feet on McPherson avenue. They will represent a total investment of $1,250,000, according to Mrs. Housam.

The Willard is located in the best residential section of the city adjacent to Forest Park, churches, schools and exclusive shops. The plans were drawn by Norman B. Howard and M. C. Finley, associated architects.

She car-ried it

The Wonderful Stories of "OZ"

by L. Frank Baum

The Great Whirlpool

"SEEMS TO ME," said Cap'n Bill, as he sat beside Trot under the big acacia tree, looking out over the blue ocean, "seems to me, Trot, as how the more we know, the more we find we don't know."

"I can't quite make that out, Cap'n Bill," answered the little girl in a serious voice, after a moment's thought, during which her eyes followed those of the old sailor-man across the glassy surface of the sea. "Seems to me that all we learn is jus' so much gained."

"I know; it looks that way at first sight," said the sailor, nodding his head; "but those as knows the least have a habit of thinkin' they know all there is to know, while them as knows the most admits what a turr'ble big world this is. It's the knowing ones that realize one lifetime ain't long enough to git more'n a few dips o' the oars of knowledge."

Trot didn't answer. She was a very little girl, with big, solemn eyes and an earnest, simple manner. Cap'n Bill had been her faithful companion for years and had taught her almost everything she knew.

He was a wonderful man, this Cap'n Bill. Not so very old, although his hair was grizzled—what there was of it. Most of his head was bald as an egg and as shiny as oilcloth, and this made his big ears stick out in a funny way. His eyes had a gentle look and were pale blue in color, and his round face was rugged and bronzed. Cap'n Bill's left leg was missing from the knee down, and that was why the sailor no longer sailed the sea. The wooden leg he wore was good enough to stump around with on land, or even to take Trot out for a row or a sail on the ocean, but when it came to "runnin' up aloft" or performing active duties on shipboard, the old sailor was not equal to the task. The loss of his leg had ruined his career and the old sailor found comfort in devoting himself to the education and companionship of the little girl.

The accident to Cap'n Bill's leg had happened at about the time Trot was born, and ever since that he had lived with Trot's mother as "a star boarder," having enough money saved up to pay for his weekly "keep." He loved the baby and often held her on his lap; her first ride was on Cap'n Bill's shoulders, for she had no baby carriage; and when she began to toddle around, the child and the sailor became close comrades and enjoyed many strange adventures together. It is said the fairies had been present at Trot's birth and had marked her forehead with their invisible mystic signs, so that she was able to see and do many wonderful things.

The acacia tree was on top of a high bluff, but a path ran down the bank in a zigzag way to the water's edge, where Cap'n Bill's boat was moored to a rock by means of a stout cable. It had been a hot, sultry afternoon, with scarcely a breath of air stirring, so Cap'n Bill and Trot had been quietly sitting beneath the shade of the tree, waiting for the sun to get low enough for them to take a row.

They had decided to visit one of the great caves which the waves had washed out of the rocky coast during many years of steady effort. The caves were a source of continual delight to both the girl and the sailor, who loved to explore their awesome depths.

"I b'lieve, Cap'n," remarked Trot, at last, "that it's time for us to start."

The old man cast a shrewd glance at the sky, the sea and the motionless boat. Then he shook his head.

"Mebbe it's time, Trot," he answered, "but I don't jes' like the looks o' things this afternoon."

"What's wrong?" she asked, wonderingly.

"Can't say as to that. Things is too quiet to suit me, that's all. No breeze, not a ripple a-top the water, nary a gull a-flyin' anywhere, an' the end o' the hottest day o' the year. I ain't no weather prophet, Trot, but any sailor would know the signs is ominous."

"There's nothing wrong that I can see," said Trot. "If there was a cloud in the sky even as big as my thumb, we might worry about it; but—look, Cap'n!—the sky is as clear as can be."

He looked again and nodded.

"P'r'aps we can make the cave, all right," he agreed, not wishing to disappoint her. "It's only a little way out, an' we'll be on the watch; so come along, Trot."

Together they descended the winding path to the beach. It was no trouble for the girl to keep her footing on the steep way, but Cap'n Bill, because of his wooden leg, had to hold on to rocks and roots now and then to save himself from tumbling. On a level path he was as spry as anyone, but to climb up hill or down required some care.

They reached the boat safely and while Trot was untying the rope Cap'n Bill reached into a crevice of the rock and drew out several tallow candles and a box of wax matches, which he thrust into the capacious pockets of his "sou'wester." This sou'wester was a short coat of oilskin which the old sailor wore on all occasions—when he wore a coat at all—and the pockets always contained a variety of objects, useful and ornamental, which made even Trot wonder where they all came from and why Cap'n Bill should treasure them. The jackknives—a big one and a little one—the bits of cord, the fishhooks, the nails; these were handy to have on certain occasions. But bits of shell and tin boxes with unknown contents, buttons, pincers, bottles of curious stones and the like, seemed quite unnecessary to carry around. That was Cap'n Bill's business, however, and now that he added the candles and the matches to his collection, Trot made no comment, for she knew these last were to light their way through the caves.

The sailor always rowed the boat, for he handled the oars with strength and skill. Trot sat in the stern and steered. The place where they embarked was a little bight or circular bay, and the boat cut across a much larger bay toward a distant headland, where the caves were located, right at the water's edge. They were nearly a mile from shore and about halfway across the bay when Trot suddenly sat up straight and exclaimed: "What's that, Cap'n?"

He stopped rowing and turned half around to look.

"That, Trot," he slowly replied, "looks to me mighty like a whirlpool."

"What makes it, Cap'n?"

"A whirl in the air makes the whirl in the water. I was afraid as we'd meet trouble, Trot. Things don't look right. The air was too still."

"It's coming closer," said the girl.

The old man grabbed the oars and began rowing with all his strength.

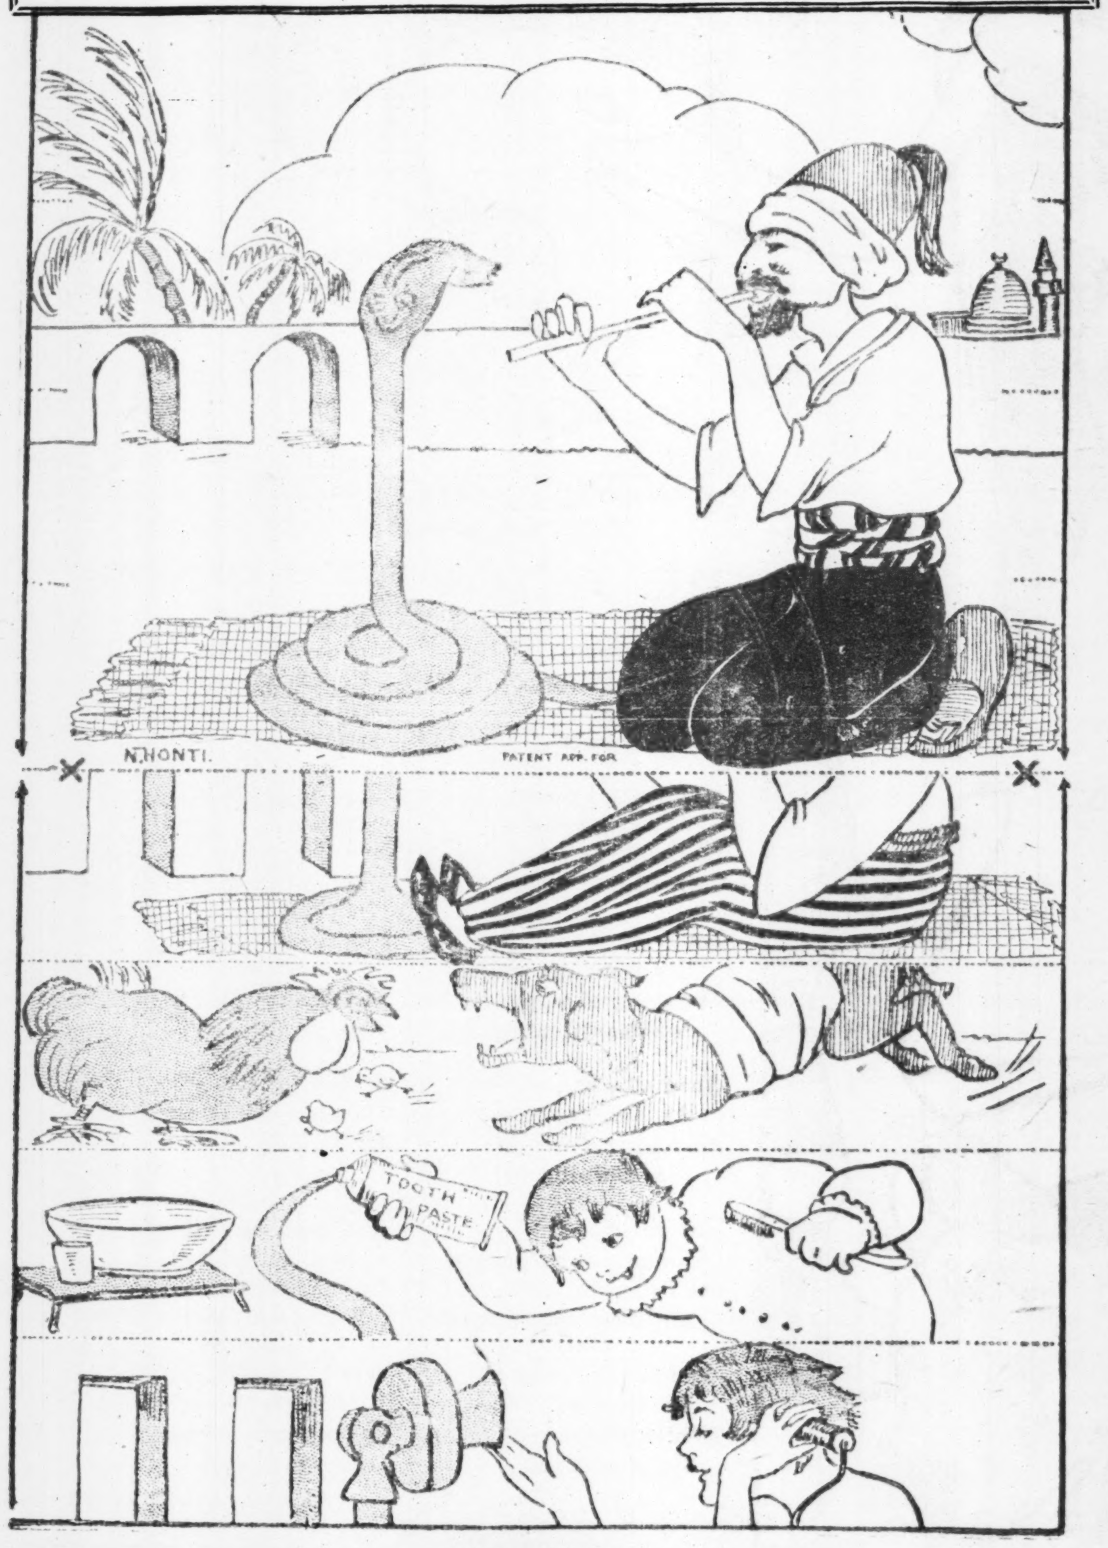
"'Tain't comin' closer to us, Trot," he gasped; "it's we that are comin' closer to the whirlpool. The thing is drawin' us to it like a magnet!"

Trot's sun-burned face was a little paler as she grasped the tiller firmly and tried to steer the boat away; but she said not a word to indicate her fear.

The swirl of the water as they came nearer made a roaring sound that was fearful to listen to. So fierce and powerful was the whirlpool that it drew the surface of the sea into the form of a great basin, slanting downward toward the center, where a big hole had been made in the ocean—a hole with walls of water that were kept in place by the rapid whirling of the air.

The boat in which Trot and Cap'n Bill were riding was just on the outer edge of this saucer-like slant, and the old sailor knew very well that unless he could quickly force the little craft away from the rushing current they would soon be drawn into the great black hole that yawned in the middle. So he exerted all his might and pulled as he had never pulled before. He pulled so hard that the left oar snapped in two and sent Cap'n Bill sprawling upon the bottom of the boat.

Folding Fun



DIRECTIONS

Cut along border and fold in half along dotted lines (..........). Starting with picture No. 1, by making one fold from the bottom up, where the dotted lines guides show, you can make a new picture. Make another fold from the bottom up and a third picture appears. Then return to No. 1 and fold from the top down, in the same manner, which will give you two more pictures. Last, returning to picture No. 1, make one fold from the bottom and one fold from the top and you will get a surprise.

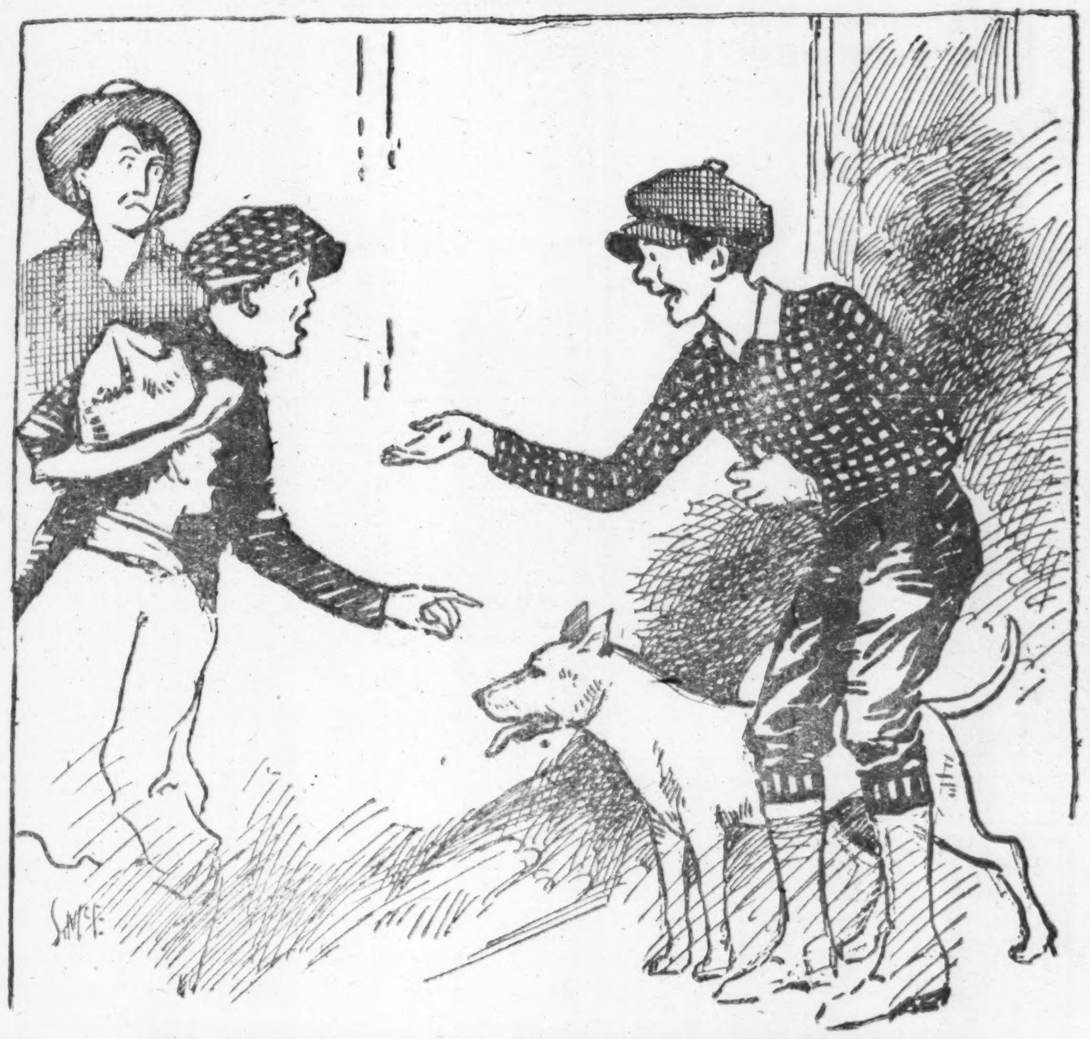
How Boob Came Back

By FRANK A. SECORD



"There, I guess you guys are satisfied!" the boy exultantly exclaimed.

THERE was a lot of excitement in town the afternoon that Tommy West's dog came howling home with a chewed ear and several bits of fur torn off his back. The dog was so frightened that Tommy, when he saw his champ fighter crouching under the back porch, could hardly believe his own eyes. Boob, the dog, had, up to this time, "cleaned up" on about every dog within a radius of 10 miles and was considered by the youngsters of the town as a dog that could not be whipped by any canine in the country.

Boob whined and refused to come out of hiding at his master's command. His eyes had lost their snap and, indeed, Tommy West decided that the dog had at last met an animal that could "take him down the line."

Boob had been the pride of Tommy, and the dog's prowess gave the lad a lot of prestige among the youngsters about town.

What happened? Tommy was sad and also stayed out of sight for a time, because of gibes poked at him.

One evening a little ragged, wheezing, fat dog trotted into the yard of the West home, growled at Boob and the latter promptly ran to cover. This was terrible for Tommy. He decided that Boob would have to "come back," no matter what it cost. But how could this be brought about?

What made a coward of Boob in the first place was that Jinks Smith, a jealous neighbor boy, had bought from a passing traveler a real honest-to-goodness wildcat. This animal was tied under a bush in Smith's yard and Jinks waited, hoped, and at last was satisfied at seeing Boob happen along, sniff, growl and then take a grab at the wildcat. Boob didn't last long and when he managed to get loose, ran home, as has been stated.

In time Tommy West found out what occurred. He decided that his dog would have to whip that very wildcat or else the West family would have to move out of town.

"I bet, if I had been there when the wildcat and Boob tangled, it would have been different!" Tommy declared again and again. At last he dared Jinks Smith to bring his animal over and let Boob have it out with him.

Of course, there was excitement in the town. All the boys, as well as a number of curious girls, gathered at West's garage to see what would happen.

"The dog'll light out, that's what is going to happen!" Jinks declared.

"The wildcat'll get the licking of his gay young life!" Tommy West insisted, but nobody could figure out how this was to be brought about. "He'll never be a coward when I'm around to urge him on," Tommy said.

"But you won't be very close to them when they mix, so Boob—" a boy remarked, his words being cut short by Tommy West, who sneered and walked away muttering, "I'll be close, never fear!"

Well, into West's garage the wildcat was carefully led, and after seeing to it that all ways of escape were closed, Jinks turned the animal loose there. Tommy West arrived with Boob. The latter shook as if chilled, when he heard the yowling animal inside the building, as it roamed the garage seeking an avenue of escape.

Eyes opened very wide and every onlooker shifted his or her gaze from the boy to the dog, from the dog to the boy. None could figure out what was going to happen, other than that Tommy was about to sacrifice his dog—that the wildcat would soon kill his adversary.

"That's hardly a fair shake for the dog," remarked a lad, stepping out of the gathered crowd and advancing upon poor Boob and his master. "There will be a great fuss about this thing, and they might arrest you, Tommy!"

"Nobody ain't never goin' to arrest nobody no time, for what is goin' to come off in that garage!" Tommy West cried, purposely using the language to show his contempt for the advice given.

"And is he going into the garage?" a girl tremulously inquired, pointing at Tommy.

"You sure will hear him in there!" firmly answered the object of the inquiry.

"He is not going in there!" a chorus of voices exclaimed, as away scampered several girls with the avowed intention of informing the parents of Tommy.

Just as Mr. West was seen approaching on the double-quick, of a sudden his son opened the garage door, thrust Boob inside and "beat it."

Inside the building a lot of growling was heard, followed by a whine from Boob.

"Where's Tommy?" Mr. West inquired.

"He ran to the house," several offered.

The man stood there listening for several moments, then laughed and went his way. Little he cared for the dog's fate, it appeared. Just so Tommy did nothing foolhardy himself, the man was satisfied. "Let them fight it out," he grunted.

"The dog won't fight, Mr. West!" someone said.

"He'll have to, or get chewed to pieces and clawed to pieces!" exclaimed the other.

No sooner had the father of Tommy West disappeared than, to the utter astonishment of everybody gathered around the garage, the boy's voice was actually heard inside the building.

"He sneaked in from the other side!" gasped a girl.

"There is no other side with a door in it—not even a window;" another excitedly remarked.

"But he's inside—listen!"

With quivering lips and staring eyes, the members of the crowd heard the voice of Tommy West inside the garage. There was no mistaking the sounds.

"Sic 'em, Boob! Go after him! Chew him up, Boob!" shouted Tommy.

"Come out, you crazy kid!" at last yelled Jinks Smith, owner of the wildcat. "Nobody wants you to be clawed up. If you want to have Boob killed, why that's all right with me; but I'm not going to have you killed, too!"

"Sic 'em, Boob! Get him, Boob! Hurrah, old fellow, chew off his head!" the voice of Tommy exclaimed, and there was no mistaking where it came from. As surely as it was heard, the voice came out of the building where the wildcat and the dog were now engaging in a noisy struggle.

Boob was fighting!

Excited youngsters ran helter-skelter, this way and that, seeking Mr. West again, but he was not located. Other grown-ups were summoned and soon a crowd of others than children gathered close to the fateful garage wherein Jinks Smith's wildcat and Tommy West's dog were battling for supremacy; where Tommy, himself, was running the risk of being terribly maimed—so far as appearances were concerned, at least.

"That's a good dog, Boob!" Tommy was heard shouting. "Go to him, old top!"

Of a sudden there was a screech, a long wail of terror, and against the wooden sides of the garage—on the inside, of course—a series of bumps were heard, indicating that the wildcat was bested and, to the best of its ability, seeking to butt its way out of the place. Loud and ominous growls, now and then punctuated by the barking of Boob, followed each thump against the boards.

"Tommy!" shouted several of the almost breathless crowd. All were filled with awe, for the lad had not been heard for several moments.

"Come out, Tommy! Are you hurt, Tommy?"

No answer.

"Tommy!"

Silence now, except for a low wail of terror on the part of the wildcat and a very slight whine of satisfaction from Boob.

"Tommy!"

Just then Mr. Thomas West, owner of Boob and none other than the Tommy appealed to, appeared upon the scene. He didn't come out of the garage and he wasn't harmed in the least. He paused, listened a moment, heard his dog's soft whine and then, bowing to the crowd, opened the door just wide enough to let Boob out, slammed it shut again and bowed once more to his friends.

"There, I guess you guys are satisfied!" the boy exultantly exclaimed. "Mister Jinks Smith, you can now take your old wildcat home, if you can catch him. He 'got his'!"

"Wh—where—where'd you come from—out of the air?" Tommy was asked.

"Came out of my own room at the house," was the astounding answer.

"We heard you talking to Boob!"

"You sure did, for I talked to him plenty. I knew he'd fight if I was there so he could hear my voice," Mister Thomas West declared.

"But you were not there!" gasped a girl in the crowd.

"No, but my voice was there—muchly—and you said you heard me."

"Ye—ye—yes, that's so."

Tommy knew what he was doing. This boy rigged up, previous to the time of the fight between the wildcat and Boob, a telephone line from his own room to the garage. At the latter place he installed a loud speaker from his radio set, arranged some batteries to amplify the sounds, and from his own room cheered his dog to victory.

That's what happened.

Tommy let the others wonder a day or two, as to how the job really was done, during which time he proudly paraded the streets of the town, Boob at his side—the old-form Boob who had so thoroughly regained his lost crown.

Jinks Smith's wildcat was not nearly so wild as it had been. When the youngsters were all warned out of the yard and Mr. Wildcat had what appeared to be a fair chance to make his get-away, he was allowed to "beat it," which he lost no time in doing. Straight across the lawn and on towards the distant meadow which bordered some woods the animal dashed, never once looking back to see if he might be pursued. Thank you, he had important business yonder and hurried to attend it.

Of course, the wildcat didn't come back, but Boob did!

Russia Closes the Open Road to Gypsies

Gypsies must stop roaming!

The Soviet Government has issued the fiat. Three years of grace are allowed the gypsies. Then there must be no more wandering through all the Russias. The covered wagon, the swarthy soothsayer in brilliant rags, wild gypsy music at the roadside campfire, must take up the trail to limbo.

"Of the many new decrees and programs of the Soviet Republic, settling the gypsy on the land probably has as little hope as any of accomplishment," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society. "Many nations in many ages have tried to control that strange figure, the gypsy—and have failed.

The Flame of Nomadism.

"Since the early part of the Nineteenth Century students and scholars have tried to understand the gypsy of Hungary, Spain, England and America. They have charted his westward advance. They have examined his language and linked it with Sanskrit and tongues of India. They have set down his customs. They have accounted for nearly every characteristic of the gypsy race except the one that sets the gypsy apart from all other races. Why has the flame of nomadism lived in the gypsy? Why can't he deny the call of the open road? That is the real mystery. It stands unexplained.

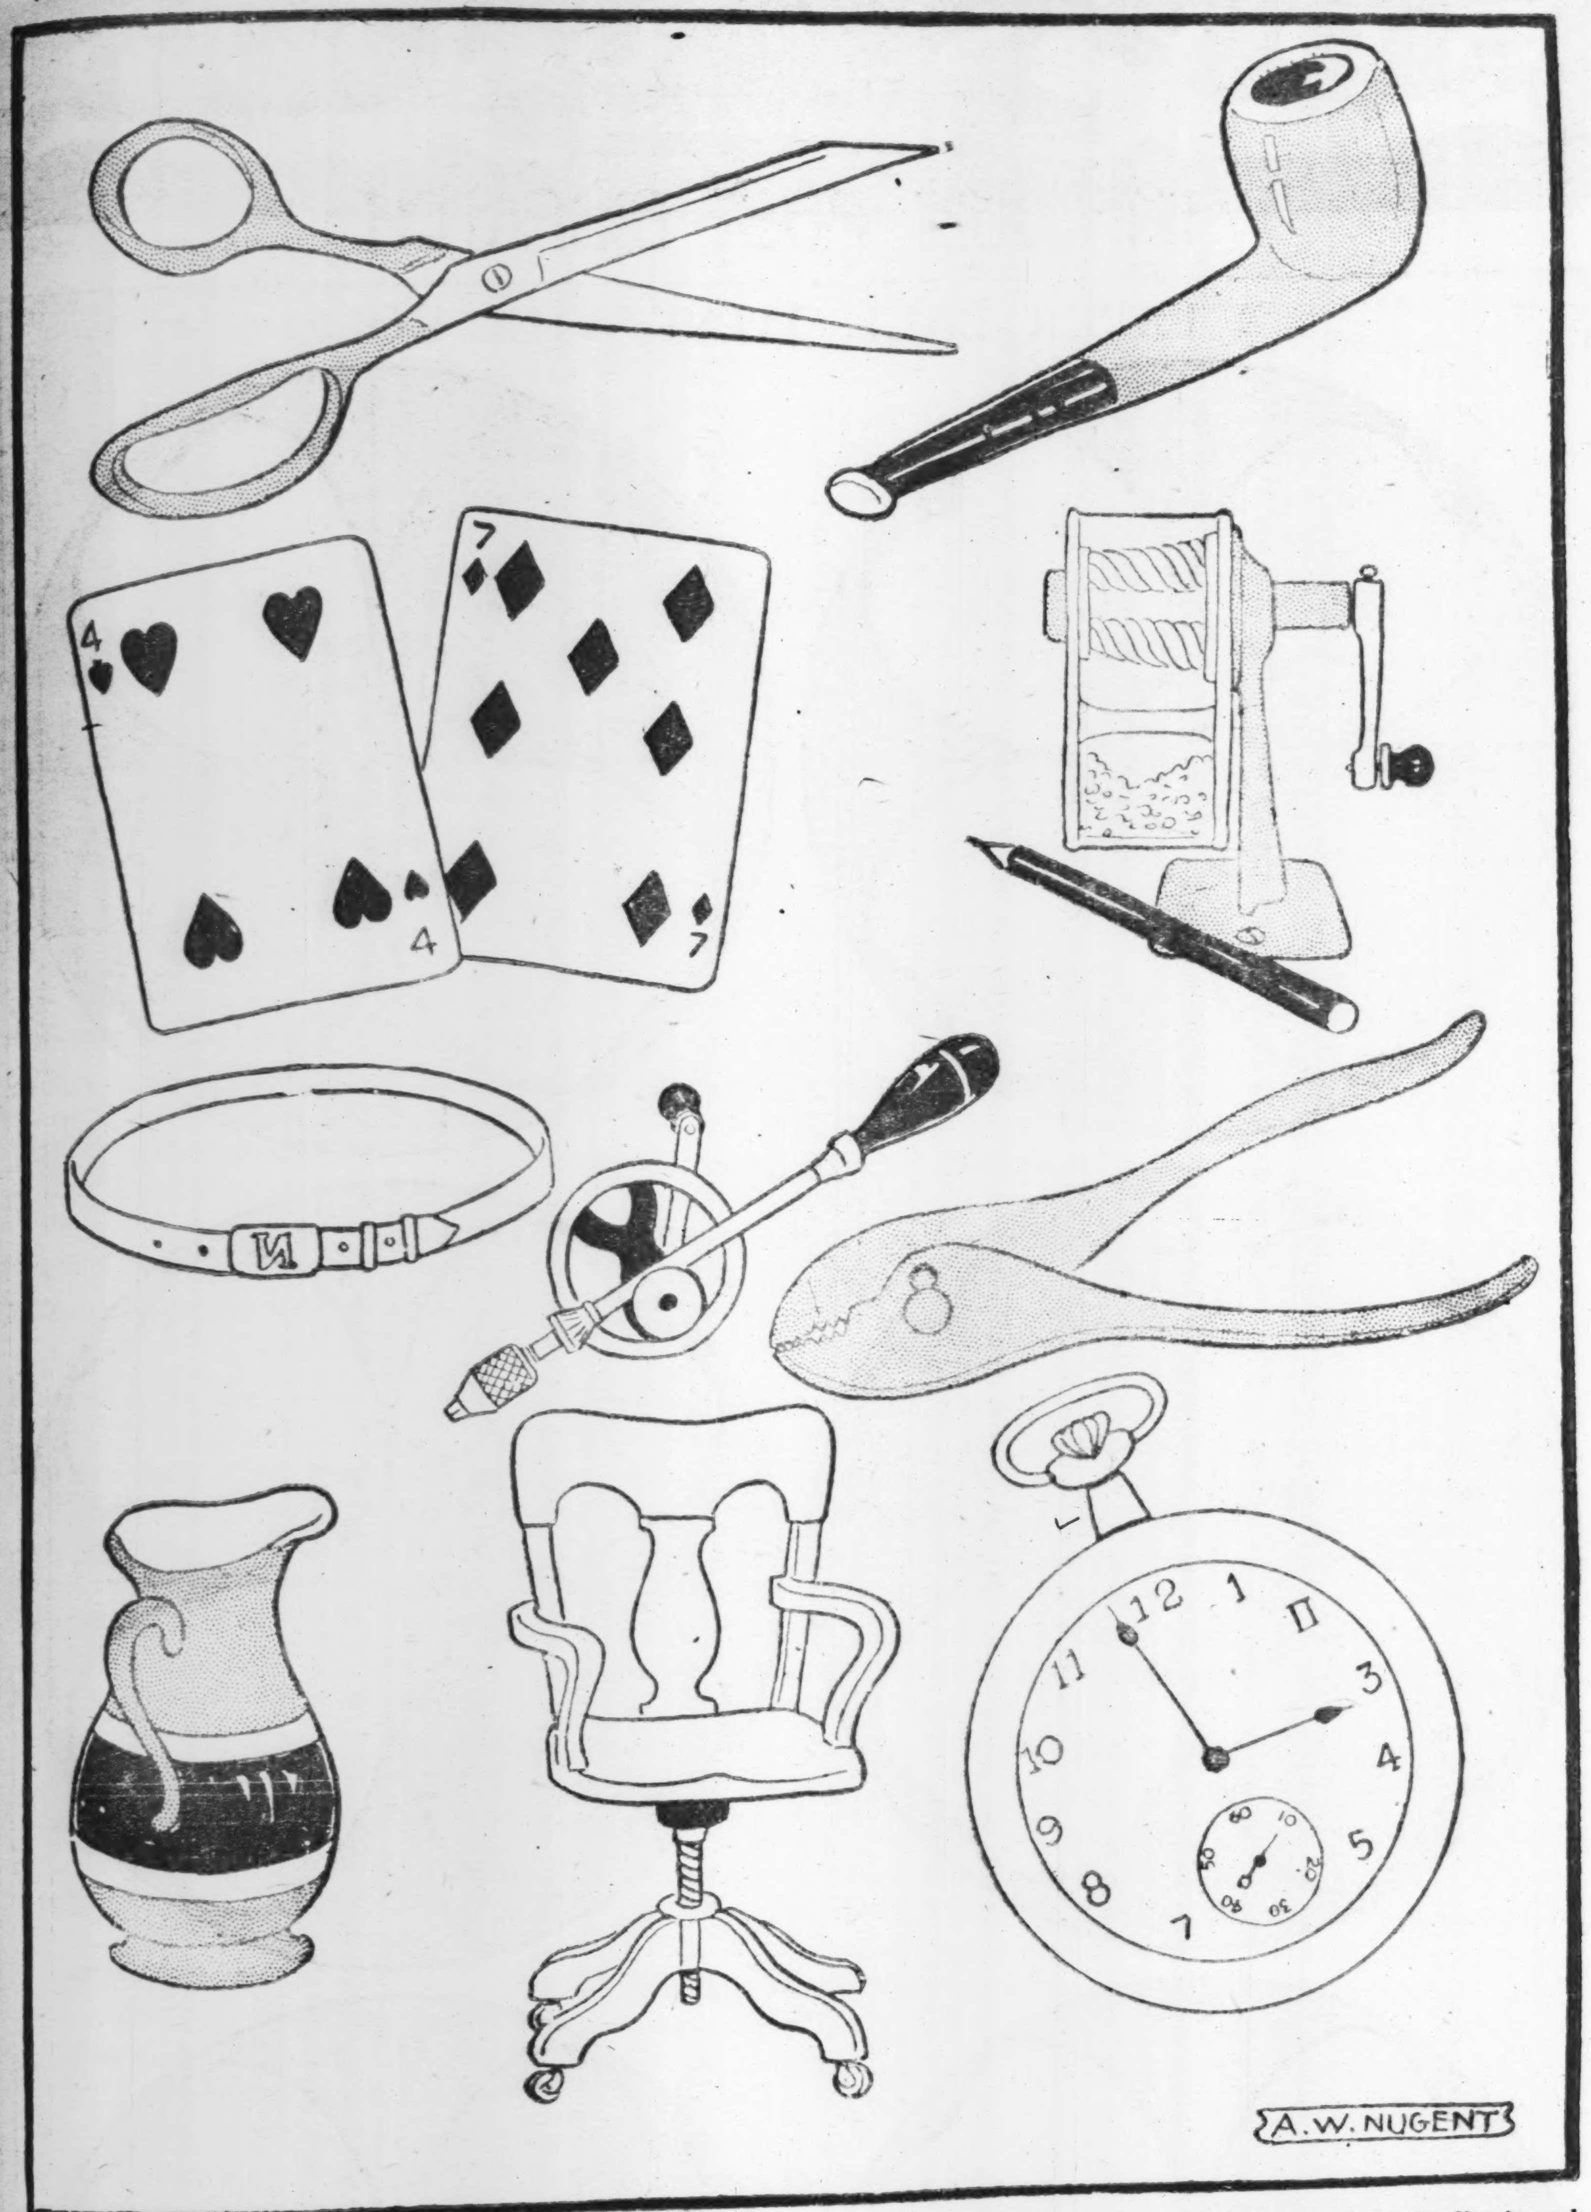
WHAT IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?



Our artist turns his attention this week to a rather heterogeneous collection of objects. As usual, his pencil has made slips in each one. For example, the hands of the watch are in the wrong position. With the hour-hand after three, the minute-hand should be some distance after twelve instead of a short distance before it. In all, there are seventeen errors in the drawings. Can you find them?

in the time of James V. A few countries can report permanent communities of gypsies, but generally the law glides over their black heads and fails to mold them into 'good, solid citizens.' Sons and daughters of Romany are inveterate nomads.

Another Gypsy Mystery.

"Another mystery of gypsydom, the capacity for keeping the race strain pure, although they wander the world over and mix with men of all nations, is easier to explain. Strict obedience to three precepts of gypsy law has saved their individuality from the world's melting pot, according to George Borrow. This British missionary studied the gypsy nearly 100 years ago, yet so fine is his prose, so accurate were his observations and so unchanging is the gypsy, in both lineage and language, that Borrow's books to this day are treasures of lore. The three commandments of Romany are:

" 'Separate not from the husbands.

" 'Be faithful to the husbands.

" 'Pay your debts to the husbands.'

" 'Rom' means 'man' in the gypsy tongue. The first and third commandments are directed to the 'rom.' The second is directed to the women, whose position in the tribe is hinted by the repetition of the word 'husbands.' Indeed, 'Romany' may be translated 'the sect of husbands.'

"The first injunction, 'separate not from the husbands,' is responsible for the maintenance of the tribal spirit and the language. That the second has been strictly observed, there is ample testimony by the fact that gypsies the world over have staring, black eyes, rich black hair and a swarthy complexion. The last commandment has lost force because civilized laws will not permit operation of the old gypsy law compelling the defaulting debtor to serve as slave to the lender for a year and a day."

To make the ball, cut out each circle. Then paste together the two circles marked 1, and paste together the other circles that are numbered alike. You will then have 3 circles, alike on each side. Cut slits along the heavy lines.

Take No. 2 and put No. 1 through it. The sketch at the bottom will show how it should look. Put No. 3 over the two first sections. It is not easy to do, but a little practice will enable you to get the ball together properly. Then fan it and it will roll like any ordinary ball.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

KNOX, Indiana—Che-Mah, the midget, died here in this little town the other day. He was a great attraction to the very end. They dressed Che-Mah in the Mandarin's coat he used to wear in the circus and on his head was placed the black skull cap he had never gone without. There he lay in state in a casket with a glass top while hundreds filed past the bier. Dignity had come to Che-Mah; his beard was white and he was 88 years old; but the flim-flam of the circus followed him to the grave. The honk-a-tonk of the sawdust world filled the shabby gray frame house where Che-Mah passed. It came into Che-Mah's room on shuffling feet; the room that Che-Mah had tried to make pigmylike to fit him. Che-Mah alive had been a curiosity. Che-Mah dead was a curiosity. His was a requiem of "Oh's" and "Ah's," accompanied by stares.

Yet, there seemed to be a kindliness in the attitude of these small-town and country folk who came to pay their respects to Che-Mah. Since his retirement from the circus twenty-odd years ago he had lived in Starke County. He was never one of these people, but they knew him as only a small town like Knox can know a man. They had been very much interested in Che-Mah. Most of them had liked him. So they stood about in Che-Mah's house and asked each other:

"Whom did he leave his money to?"

Che-Mah, although a midget, was a man of large affairs in the community. Gossip estimated his fortune at from $30,000 to $100,000.

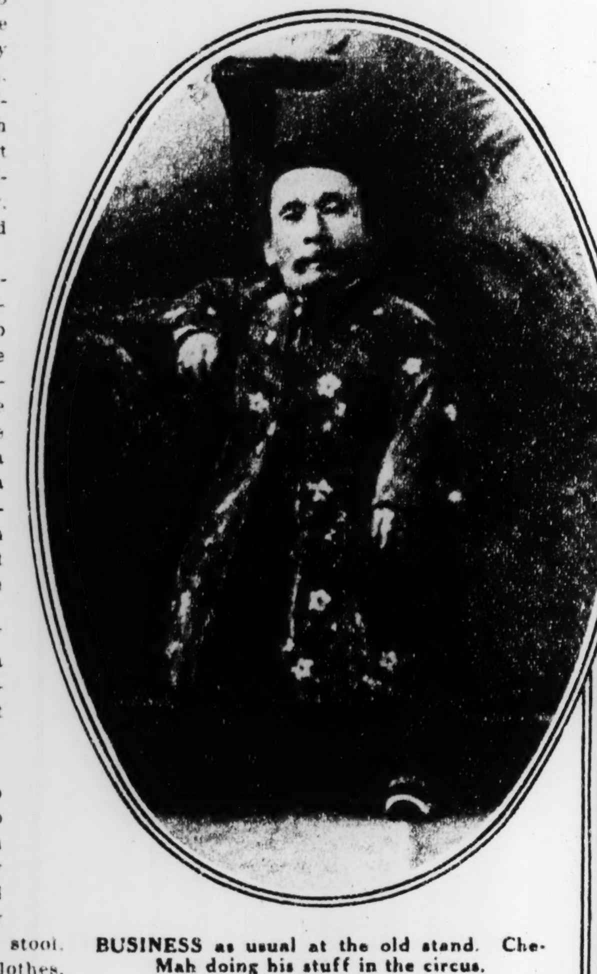
THE white giants were good to Che-Mah. They gathered up the stubby pipes he had left on his doll table. They handled gently the child's rocker in which he had been wont to sit and smoke. They carefully preserved the low Chinese stool, the trunk filled with small Chinese clothes, the heavy books, normal adult size, Che-Mah had kept in a cupboard. They looked regretfully at the marks on the room made by Che-Mah's living there—paint rubbed off the windowsills where the dwarf had clambered up to pull down the shades; the marks on the floor where Che-Mah had used a little chair to climb into bed; fingerprints around the doorknob where he had stood on tiptoe and reached to let himself in and out.

His was more like the death of a precocious child than a man's. The townspeople knew that Che-Mah was not a Christian and never went to church. But they arranged a fine funeral for him in the Methodist Church, and Parson Meredith read the service, and Che-Mah was buried in Crown Hill Cemetery.

"Che-Mah was a good little fellow," they said. "Whom do you suppose he left his money to?"

It was not curiosity, alone, which inspired so much interest in Che-Mah's final disposition of his affairs. The town had a protective feeling for him. Of yore, when Che-Mah went forth from his house on Lake street to walk the short block to Main street, everybody he met said: "Hullo, there, Che-Mah, when are you going to grow up?" And Che-Mah, who was proud of his size rather than sensitive, would smile and say: "I'm a better man than you are right now." Of course, everybody knew Che-Mah wasn't much of a man. He couldn't even sit in a man's size chair unless it had rungs in front for him to climb up, or else someone lifted him into it. Everybody in town sort of looked after Che-Mah.

And when his will was opened everyone was glad to learn that he had bequeathed all of his estate to his son, Frankie Jehun Mah. For Che-Mah, be it known, was a man of parts and there were two romances in his little life. Frankie Jehun Mah was the offspring of Che-Mah's first marriage. It was over and done with before Che-Mah came to Knox. The town feels that Che-Mah did a wise thing in giving his estate to his son. The day Che-Mah's will was opened there was a great deal of discussion in the lobby of the Fritz Hotel, next to the railroad tracks, in front of the Fairy Theater, and in the Knox Variety Store.



BUSINESS as usual at the old stand. Che-Mah doing his stuff in the circus.

The town's opinion ran about like this, if Editor Steele of the Starke County Republican can be relied on for an accurate report:

"Both of Che-Mah's wives and his son deserted him and left him here for strangers to take care of. But the second Mrs. Mah should have stayed by him. He was her responsibility."

Public animus toward the second Mrs. Mah heightened when she arrived in town the day of the funeral. She came, bringing with her a white poodle; and if this were not enough to cause popular disapproval, she came from New York. Knox has turned thumbs down on the second Mrs. Mah, in a spirit of partisanship for Che-Mah.

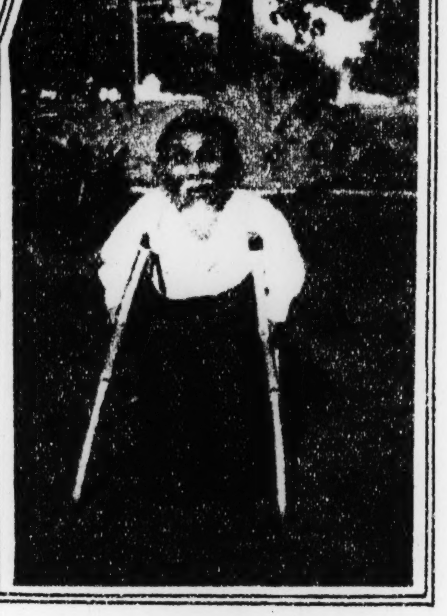
HOWEVER, it appears that the second Mrs. Mah will be victorious. Frankie Jehun Mah, heir to the estate of his father, cannot be found. When last heard from he was in New York. Advertisements have been placed in papers there and an appeal sent out over the radio, but no word has come from Frankie. A report is current that both Frankie and the first Mrs. Mah are dead. If this proves to be true then the second Mrs. Mah will probably inherit Che-Mah's estate.

This brings us, then, to the strange romance of Che-Mah and his second wife, and why Knox took sides with the midget.

Now, it is not exactly true that Che-Mah was discovered by P. T. Barnum, brought to this country by him or exploited by him. Che-Mah was located on the Island of Chusan, off the Chinese coast, in 1881, by agents for Barnum & Bailey's circus. Barnum, himself, had virtually retired from the show business then. He had made General Tom Thumb and Commodore Nutt renowned all over the world, he had ballyhooed the love affairs of the General with Lavinia Warren, also a midget; and Commodore Nutt with Minnie Warren, another midget; but it is not of record in any available biographical data that old P. T. was personally interested in Che-Mah.

The Chinese midget, nevertheless, was under Barnum's sponsorship and traveled widely with Barnum & Bailey's circus. Che-Mah's mother and father were of normal size and so were his brother and sister. He made a great deal of money during his 20 years or so with the circus, and when Barnum & Bailey's show was absorbed by Ringling Brothers Che-Mah changed over to this show.

IN 1882 Che-Mah married a white woman, Louisa Coleman, a native of Brooklyn, New York, and a circus performer. She was of normal size. A year later Che-Mah's son, Frankie, was born. In 1887, according to Che-Mah, he divorced his first wife, charging desertion. She kept their son. About 1900, as near as records show, Che-Mah was playing with the circus in Chicago and had saved enough money to retire.



THE most recent photograph of Che-Mah, taken a few weeks before his death at Knox, Indiana.

He fell in with a real estate dealer, who talked him into buying a farm at Eagle Lake, near Knox. What Che-Mah imagined he could do with a farm is not known, but anyway he invested his savings in this land and moved to Eagle Lake. Old-timers around there say that it took Che-Mah half a day to harness a horse, and that by the time he got a team ready for the field the sun had gone down. At any rate, Che-Mah soon realized he was not cut out to be a farmer and he moved into Knox. He managed to sell his farm, later, without loss, and began investing in real estate here.

The townspeople were greatly astonished one day in 1908 when a Miss Norah T. Cleveland of Kingston, Pennsylvania, came to keep house for Che-Mah. She was a white woman of apparent culture and education. A very striking woman, tall and of about 200 pounds in weight.

MR. AND MRS. CHE-MAH. He was 24 inches tall. She weighed 200 pounds.

"Who's your little friend, Che-Mah?" the wags inquired.

"I knew her mother when I was with the circus," Che-Mah replied with his accustomed dignified gravity. "She kept a theatrical boarding house and I often stopped at her place. Miss Cleveland was in poor health and alone in the world and I wrote her to come and keep house for me. Her mother is deceased."

The next year Che-Mah announced to his friend, Henry Schricker, then publisher of the Starke County Democrat and now cashier of the Starke County Trust and Savings Bank:

"I think I shall get married."

"To whom, Che-Mah?" Schricker inquired.

"To Miss Cleveland. I am alone. My son and former wife do not care for me. I want somebody to leave my money to."

The town gasped when the approaching nuptials were announced.

"Che-Mah, you're lying," said the men of Knox. "She'll never marry you."

"Wait and see," said Che-Mah, drawing himself up to his full two feet in height.

They were married. Che-Mah stood on a table beside his bride and a minister read the ceremony. She was in her twenties; he was 71.

SO LITTLE Che-Mah and his tall stalwart wife started out together in Knox. He had a sort of go-cart made to order for him. When they went out together Che-Mah would ride in the go-cart while his wife pushed him along. The wags in front of Greene's drug store teased Che-Mah, good-naturedly, if somewhat vulgarly.

"It isn't how big you are," said Che-Mah on more than one occasion. "A man is as big as he is here." And he tapped his forehead. They stopped teasing Che-Mah after a while.

Measured by mental standards Che-Mah seems to have been pretty much of a man. He was shrewd but just in business dealings. When Che-Mah entered a business deal he'd say: "Lift me up to the table."

His confreres would lift him to a chair on which books had been placed, and then Che-Mah felt the equal of any man. He would scrutinize deeds and other papers, haggle over terms, slam his tiny fist on the table during arguments until his beard quivered, and, if it was a good deal, close it.

Che-Mah was not without his benevolences. Once he loaned a washerwoman $50 without security. Twice he helped struggling fellow townsmen with small loans they never repaid. During hard times poor families of the town and county would receive mysterious baskets of groceries. They came from Che-Mah.

"Why don't you join a church, Che-Mah?" he was often asked.

"We all believe in the Almighty God," Che-Mah would reply. "Religion is both inside and outside of churches. I believe in the Almighty God and try to do right."

NATURALLY, Che-Mah was a very public man. When he sat in his toy rocker on the porch of his home, or walked around the courthouse square, strangers were told to look and see the smallest man in the world. Children were always hanging about him, listening to his tall tales of circus days and trying to lure him into games far beneath his Oriental dignity.

It follows that the town kept close-watch on Che-Mah's married life. All the town knew that Che-Mah was extremely jealous of his big wife. He made her dress in black and if she so much as looked at a man Che-Mah would peremptorily order her to go home. At first the story got about that she was afraid of Che-Mah. But afterwards it developed that Mrs. Mah managed her husband handily.

At the Age of 88
He Is Dead.
This Is the Story of His Remarkable Life.

"They'll never get along," said the womenfolk of Knox, hearing stories of infelicity.

Mrs. Mah has never been treated fairly in Knox. This fact was proven at the time she and Che-Mah sued each other for divorce three years ago.

The county made a holiday of it. Everyone came to town to hear the story of Che-Mah's domestic unhappiness. Witnesses were shamelessly partisan. One woman, the report goes, spoke out in open court when passing Mrs. Mah, and said: "Why don't you pick on somebody your own size?" Che-Mah was a midget and Mrs. Mah a large woman, so Knox refused to see her side of it. Trading on public sympathy, Che-Mah took the stand, his legs dangling from the witness chair, and told how his wife insisted on going off to New York or other places East for visits. She neglected him, he said, and wasn't properly respectful. Once she called him a "little shrimp." Che-Mah further accused her of marrying him for his money.

When it came her turn Mrs. Mah had a different story to tell. She said Che-Mah was sharp-tempered and quarrelsome, and wanted to boss her. She also said he was very close and wouldn't give her proper support. There was a great deal of testimony of an intimate nature which is still discussed by "the boys" when they get together behind the garage of a Sunday morning. But the sum and substance of Mrs. Mah's story was that Che-Mah had not made her happy.

THE Judge awarded her a separate maintenance decree and Che-Mah was to pay $10 a week toward her support. Then, she went off to New York to live with an aunt, leaving Che-Mah to work out his own destiny.

The town had made a pet of Che-Mah and Mrs. Mah's separating from him cost her the sympathy of the public. Left to himself, Che-Mah rented half his house and began boarding at the Home Restaurant. He became feeble the last two years and used toy crutches. But he still sat in the small rockingchair on his porch or made short walks about town.

His greatest fear of late had been that he would not have a dignified burial. He often said to the old lady who was his tenant and cleaned his rooms for him:

"Hannah, promise me you won't let doctors steal my body. My body is worth a lot to a medical school. I want you to watch and see that they don't take it. I've made a will directing Mr. Schricker to have me cremated. You promise me you'll watch while it's done and see that my ashes are buried?"

"I'll promise, Che-Mah," said Hannah.

She told the correspondent: "I liked little Che-Mah. He was a smart little fellow. When he took sick—he was only sick two days—he said: 'Hannah, I'm going to die.' He wouldn't take any medicine. When the doctor said he had guessed right I said: 'Che-Mah, is there anything I can do for you?' He said: 'No, nothing.' I said: 'Don't you want me to send for your wife or your son?' He just shook his head and said: 'No.' He just lay there and died all by his lonesome. Poor little Che-Mah. I liked Che-Mah right well."

It developed that a year prior to Che-Mah's death he had entered into a contract with a monument builder for a handsome tombstone. Che-Mah was not cremated, but his body was sealed in a steel vault, and Hannah walked all the way to the cemetery to make sure.

And that is how Che-Mah lived and married and died in Knox; Che-Mah, the midget, unforgiving of his wife, died by his lonesome. Mrs. Mah was still in town when the correspondent visited Knox. She was stopping with Mrs. Nichols, who lives opposite Klopot's Studio, and just around the corner from where Che-Mah used to live. Mrs. Mah sent out word by Mrs. Nichols that she would not be interviewed.

And that is the end of the story of little old Che-Mah—"the smallest man in the world."

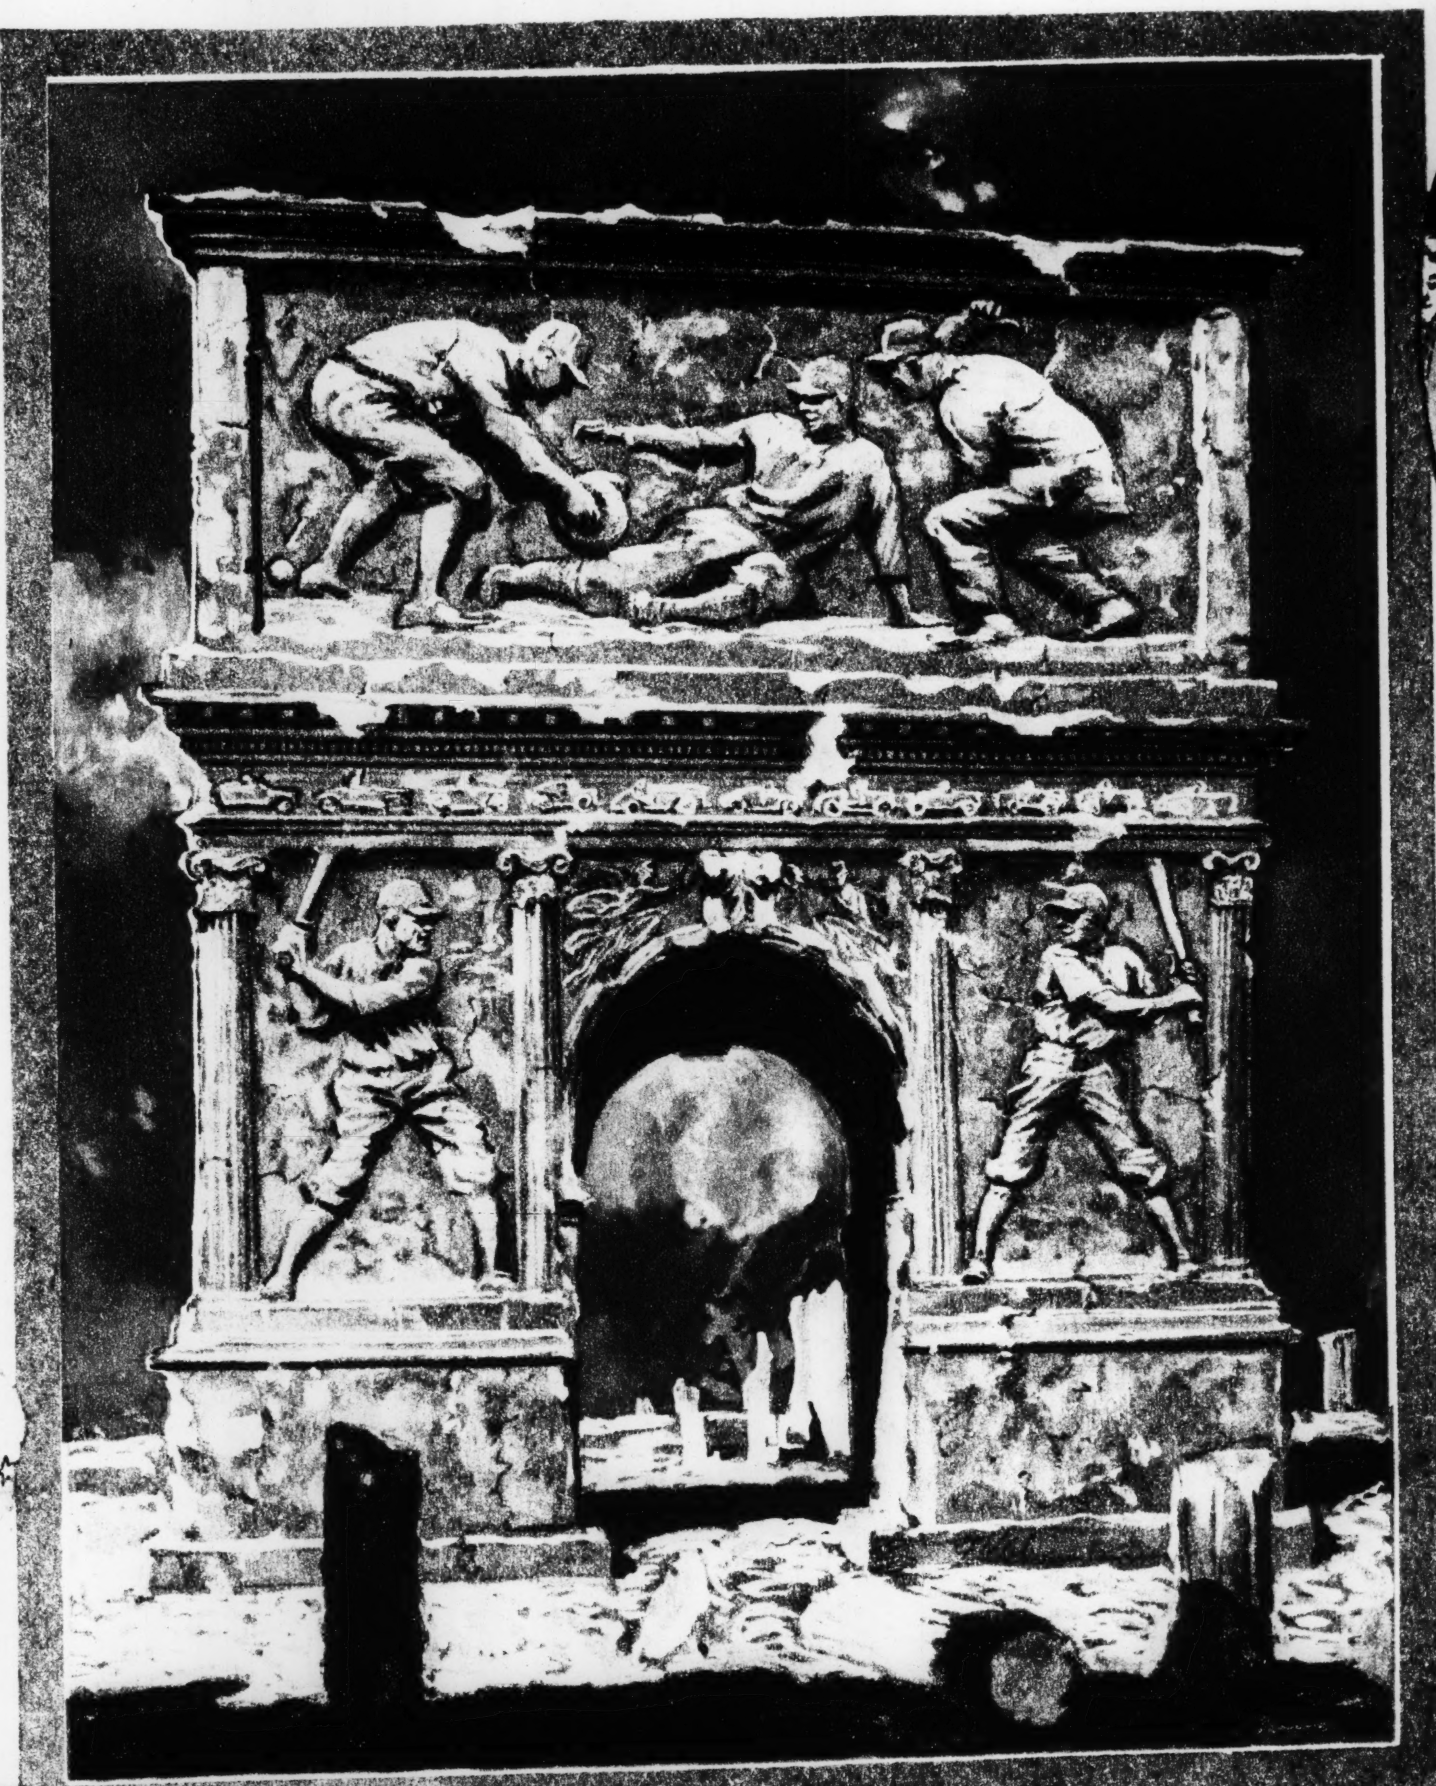
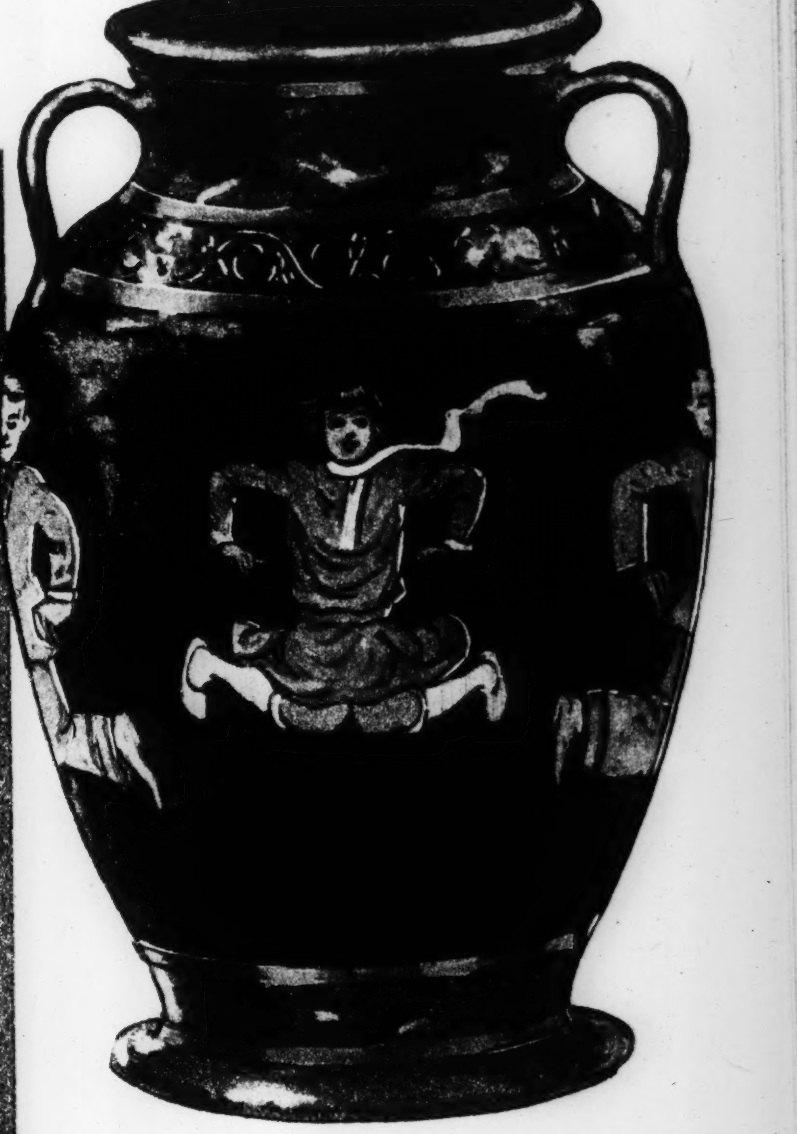
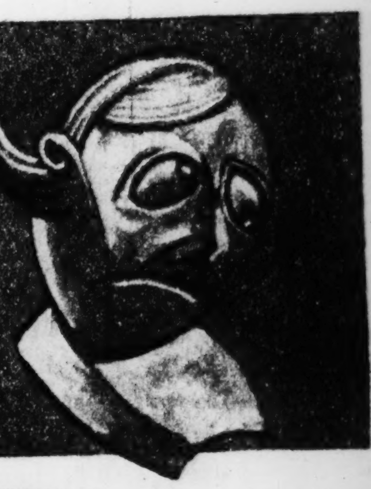
FRAGMENT of early newspaper depicts violent physical combat so frequently shown in ancient literature.



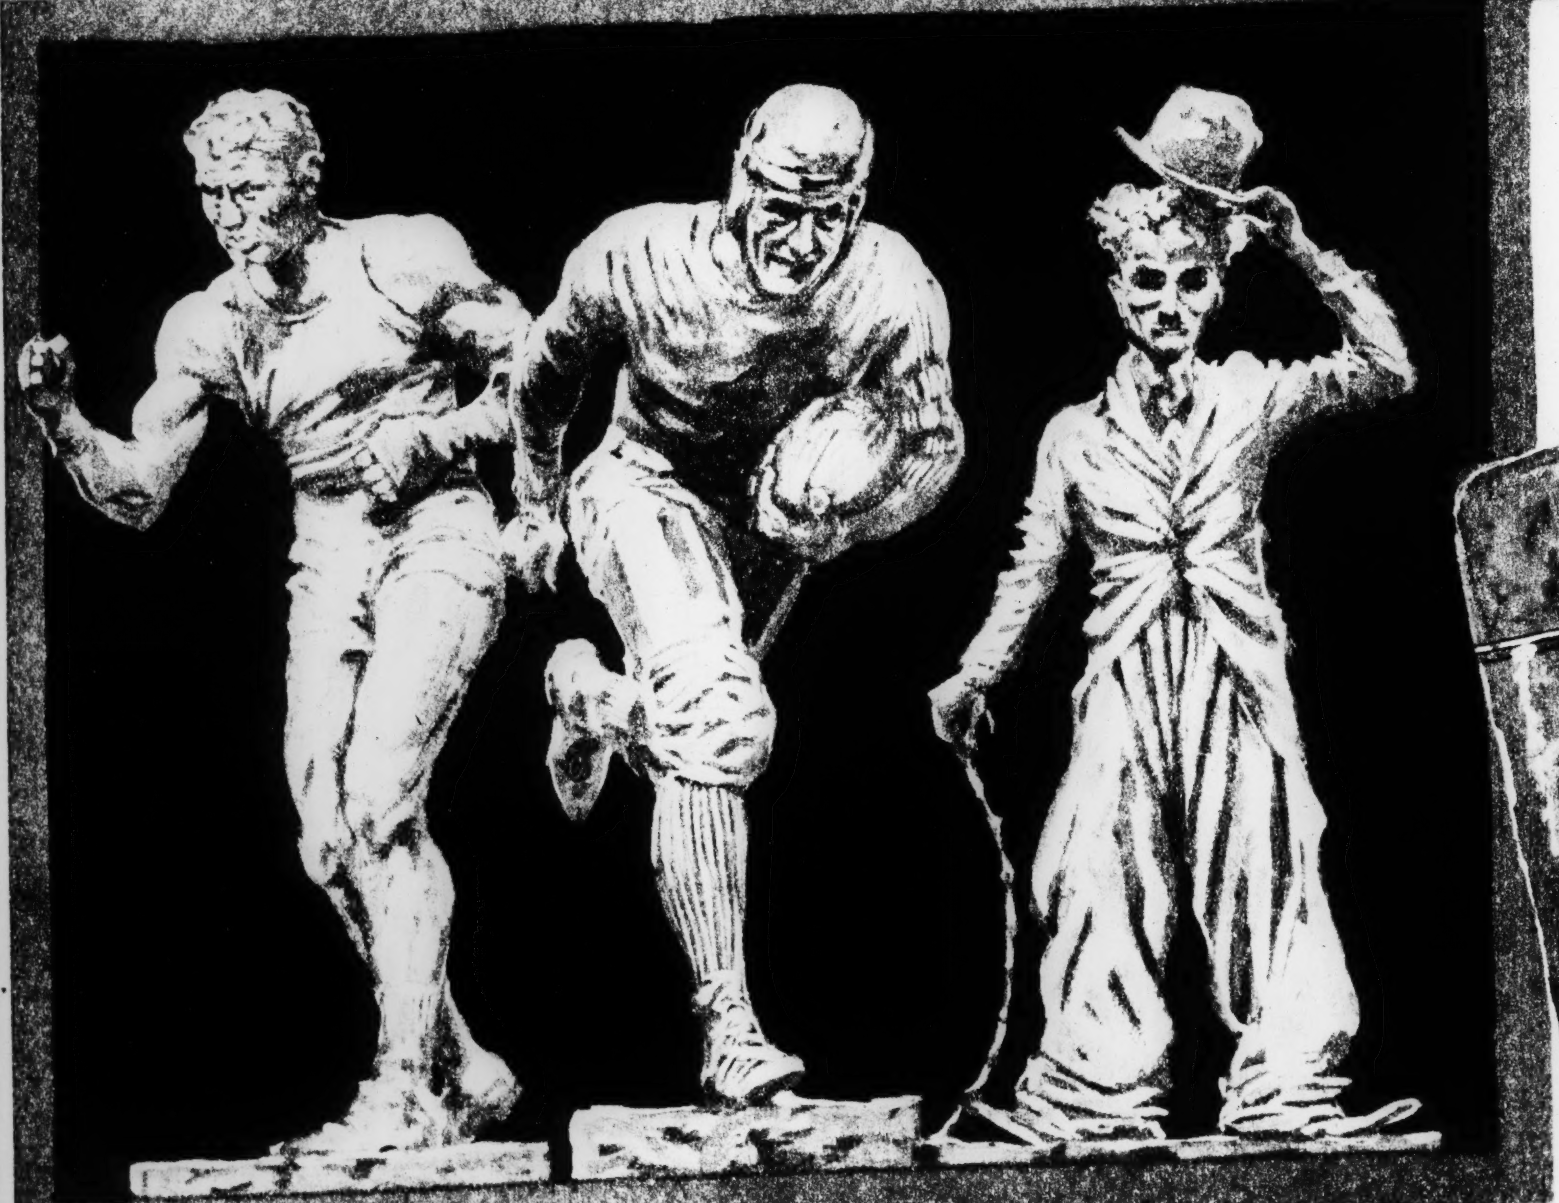
TRIUMPHAL ARCH to commemorate the first pennant won by a St. Louis team since the day of the hoopskirt. The main sculptured panel depicts the scene of the first close decision that ever went to the home team and was responsible for more publicity and joy than the one that caused the pop bottle to bounce up and hit "Whitey" Witt in the famous Yankee series. The figures on the sides represent Hornsby the Great and Sisler the Mighty.



THIS VASE PAINTING depicts the dance which the ancients called the Charleston. It gives a fair idea of their quaint conception of grace as expressed in the dance.



THIS ODD OBJECT was found in some excavations upon a site supposed to have been that of a booby hatch or futurist studio.



FAMOUS MEN OF THE DRY PERIOD

HARRY T. "JACK" DEMPSEY, at one time champion heavyweight boxer and match postponer but at no time champion actor, a role which he at times essayed. His pay as an actor, or as a fighter (for he would fight when properly provoked by the box office), was sufficient to keep three income tax officers shadowing him at all times.

RED GRANGE was the most proficient student at his school—at playing football. He was no dumb-bell when it came to adding to his pile, either. His earnings were in excess of those of a dozen professors, three judges and four dozen white-collar cadets—in truth almost as much as a moderately successful bootlegger.

THE MOST POPULAR ACTOR of his day, and one who exemplifies the class of drama then demanded by the people, was Chas. "Charlie" Chaplin. He had a shy manner and walked with his feet pointing sideways until some big money was flashed. He was one of the founders of the Keystone School of Acting and was directly responsible for the introduction of pie throwing into histrionic art.

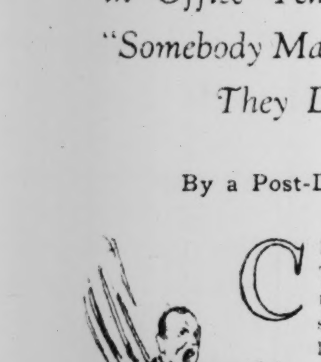
BIG TIM MURPHY Discusses POLITICS

Back in Chicago, After His Release From Prison, the President of the Gashouse Workers' Union Talks Picturesquely of the BUNK of Politics. "Don't Let These Guys in Office Tell You Different," He Says. "Somebody Made 'Em. Somebody Owns 'Em. They Don't High-Hat Me."

Lecturing Is to Be His Racket Now, He Thinks. Politics, Religion, Crime—Any Subject Will Do. "Go Into Any Courtroom Where Some Poor Devil Is on Trial," Says Tim. "If He Doesn't Look Honester Than the Lawyers and the Judge, I'll Buy You a Dried Herring."

BIG TIM MURPHY, prominent citizen of Chicago

By a Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent



CHICAGO.—"Politics? What t'hell?" said Timothy (Big Tim) Murphy, one of Chicago's most prominent citizens, as he sat in his handsome apartment at the Webster Hotel overlooking Lincoln Park, the other day. "I'm not mixing into politics any more, see? Nix on that stuff. Politics? Huh! I'm going on the lecture platform—see? That's going to be my racket—it's easy."

There was in the eye of Mr. Murphy a vast disdain. He sat as one who can afford to be disdainful, too. Lounging on a magnificent divan (down-stuffed cushions), he surveyed the living room of the Murphy suite with proper satisfaction. His polished shoes sank deep into a Persian rug. The cigarette smoke he blew traveled cloudwise toward the expensive ship's model which rode at anchor on the shining top of a Circassian walnut radio console. By his elbow was a star-fish lamp of beaten brass. A papier-mache bulldog and a bust of Irene Bodoni, incongruously, yet not so incongruously, either, guarded a costly chair in one corner of the room. Behind the chair was a square of cardboard with the words "Welcome to Home, Sweet Home," which had been left there by someone hastily putting things to rights after a party.

Big Tim, as his followers affectionately call him, was at home once more and enjoying himself. He was a Chicagoan in his Chicago. If he seemed flamboyant seated there in the great hotel, which has its canopied porte-cochere and its liveried doorman, whisper it not to Chicagoans. He is as much a Chicago institution as the St. Gaudens statue of Lincoln; you can see the statue looking out from Big Tim's front windows. Among the newer citizens of the town—those whose English is still elementary—Big Tim's name is more familiar than Lincoln's.

"Listen," continued Mr. Murphy. "I know politics. I'm wise. I tumble to all that stuff. Get what I mean? And I'll tell the cock-eyed world it's the bunk. Politics? Huh. Say-y—listen, that political racket don't tickle my ears none. What's the gag now? World Court? World Court. Now, who do you suppose gives a whoop about what's goin' on in Europe? Tell that to th' working stiffs, the sewer diggers, gashouse boys and the like and they'll give you the laugh. It don't mean a thing. It's the bunk. It's a pig with a fence around it.

"Ever since I got back," he continued, "I've been too busy for politics, anyway. I haven't done anything but shake hands and talk."

THUS did Big Tim modestly refer to the fact that he had been away from Chicago for a time and had been welcomed back. Big Tim, as is known, has just finished serving a four-year term in Leavenworth Penitentiary for his part in the $380,000 Dearborn Station mail robbery, which occurred April 6, 1921.

He was moved—with the aid of a little questioning—to reminisce a bit before returning to the subject of politics.

"When I left the big house I played around in Kansas City a bit. Say-y, I got some reception, too. Why, I guess I shook hands with 2000 people. Judges, lawyers, business men, working stiffs like you and me—all kinds of people. I'm a judge of human nature and I got it all doped out. If you're a good guy and square with your friends, they'll stick when you're in trouble.

"Look at the way my boys in the Gashouse Workers' Union have stuck. Five years ago I organized 'em. They elected me president. I didn't care for the job. I wanted to quit several times, but they kept on electing me. When I got in trouble and went to the pen, did they lay down on me? No! They stuck. They kept on electin' me president every year. You talk about political power. Listen. It don't come from putting pieces in the papers in fine English about world courts and prohibition and the tariff. Say-y, that stuff is the bunk. It smells bad. It's cheesy. Get what I mean? I know this political game, boy. I been at it 25 years. I learned it on the heel and toe, see? The heel and toe.

BIG TIM
PRESIDENT of GAS HOUSE WORKERS

"I started in the days when we put the duke on the saloons and used the heel and toe to cover the precincts. When you won an election then, you worked for it. Many's the day I've spent rounding the saloons, buying drinks, shaking hands. I used to get so tired when polling day came I felt like lettin' the election go its natural course! But we had to swing it for the party. When election day came we had the precinct books with the name of every voter. We'd go through 'em like checking off a factory shift.

"We'd ask the workers: 'How's Flanagan? How's Callahan? How's Jensen?' Maybe they'd say: 'Well, Callahan ain't right. He ain't with us.' We'd go and see Callahan. Well, maybe Callahan was sore because our crowd hadn't done him the favors he thought he ought to get. Maybe he was a taxpayer and a street in front of his house hadn't been attended to. Maybe his boy had got caught in some devilment and we didn't front for him in court. So we'd say: 'Well, Callahan, string along with us this time and we'll look after you.' Maybe we'd have the thing all fixed for him the next day. And if Callahan still wasn't right with us we'd say: 'All right. You get a bust on the nose.'

"THAT'S politics. Don't let these guys in office tell you different. Somebody made 'em. Somebody owns 'em. I could have had offices if I'd wanted 'em. But I wouldn't take 'em. Holding office is the hardest job physically and mentally I know anything about. Take your Judges and Prosecuting Attorneys and all the rest. They don't high-hat me with that song and dance about fearless independent action. I used to have my men on the County Commission. They came in handy. Sometimes the union boys wanted more pay, sometimes in winter some poor working stiffs was out of jobs. Well, I'd look after 'em. I'd have the Commissioners, who were my friends, take care of us. I'd have baskets sent to the poor. That's the way you get political power. You do things for the boys and they do things for you. You work for Judges and Prosecutors and they do you favors in return. A lot of my people have kids that are a bit wild. Maybe these kids play hooky from school, maybe they swipe apples or maybe they swipe automobiles. They don't mean anything by it. Just devilishness. So they come to me, or their folks do, and say, 'Tim, help us out, will you?' I say, 'Sure.' And I do. Don't let these reformers tell you anything different. They don't feed me that guff.

"I go to a Judge and I say, 'Look here, don't kid me. I'm Tim Murphy and I know my eggs. Lay off this case.' Generally he does. Ain't I worked for him at election time? He can do a favor for a fellow, can't he? If he gets hard and goes to arguin', I tell him: 'Say, if you want to put things on a physical basis, all right. I'll bust you in the nose.' It would only cost me $100, or maybe $150, to bust him one, and it would be worth it.

"TAKE this senatorial race in Illinois. Do you think the voters are going to vote about world courts? Prohibition? Well, maybe. They want their booze. But this personal liberty guff and this here states' rights and paternalism tripe. It's the bunk. They want booze. Naturally, they're gonna vote for the guy that promises to get 'em the booze. But you take the working stiff; he don't know anything about Europe. He isn't carin', either. Now, I'm for George Brennan. There's a smart guy. Don't let anyone tell you he isn't. He knows politics. George'll make a great race.

"By and large, the guy that has the most friends and promises favors to the most people wins in elections. It's just a game of give and take. See? Get what I mean?"

There was a lull at this point, while Big Tim answered the telephone and talked with several callers who happened in. During the interval the writer managed to surmise from what he had said that Big Tim would not be drawn into current political campaigns in Illinois through any intense partisanship for or against the World Court.

Yes, there was no doubt that Big Tim had given up politics as a bad job. It was the bunk. Now—having abandoned politics—to what else would he turn his not inconsiderable talents?

When the interviewer broached this subject a broad and genial grin flushed the likable countenance of Chicago's most noted labor leader.

It's the bunk

"I THINK," he said, "that lecturing's my racket. Say, that racket is the soft. The soft. Get what I mean? I'm surprised I didn't think of it before. Say-y, listen! I've learned all I want to know and I can make a spiel that'll have 'em giving me the gaps, see? They'll eat it up.

"What'll I talk about? Anything. Politics? Sure. Crime? Say-y-y, there's a subject I know all about. Sure I'll talk on crime. Religion? Sure, sure. Anything. I'll talk about anything, and I'll pop their eyes out, too. But there'll have to be plenty of cush in it, see? Plenty of the green. It'd be worth $2 a throw of anybody's money to hear Tim Murphy. Get me the hall. Line 'em up. They'll come and they'll listen. Why? They're all suckers, that's why.

"Supposin' I was to talk on crime. I'd tell 'em the straight stuff and no foolin'. It would be cold turkey. See? I'd say: 'You're all suckers. What do you want to listen to these here Judges and lawyers for? They're turning you against your own kind, the poor working stiffs that never have a chance. Go into any courtroom where some poor devil is on trial. Look at him and then look at the lawyers and the Judge. If he doesn't look honester than the lawyers I'll buy you a dried herring. And 10 to 1 he'll look honester than the Judge.'"—

At this point Tim warmed to his subject.

"HERE'S what I'd tell 'em. I'd say: 'If you want to reduce crime go after the big boys. Don't pick on the poor little fellow, who's most likely gone wrong to buy food for his gizzard. Maybe he's a hop-head or just crazy to boot. Take any poor guy on trial. Look at him. Why, he's a chump. Just a plain chump. If he wasn't he wouldn't have got caught. If he was smart he'd have a good lawyer and he'd never be convicted. He's a chump. And every man on the jury is just like him. Poor working stiffs, they sit up there and do what a crooked lawyer or a crooked Judge tells 'em to do.

"'This psychiatric stuff—it's the bunk, too. For a thousand dollars you can get any doc to say you're nuts. For two thousand the State can get any doc to say you're not nuts. Most generally the State has got the most money. So you're not nuts and you go to the big house. But if you have a lot of money, like Harry K. Thaw, you can outbuy the State and you're nuts. You get the soft. See? You're acquitted. You're turned loose with the rabbits.'

"That's what I'd tell 'em. Say-y-y, a guy was up to see me about making a speech over at the Art Institute or something, on capital punishment. I told him I wasn't ready to talk yet, but when I am I'll sure burn it up. Where do they get that capital punishment song and dance, anyway? Just because some guy pulls a crazy stunt and croaks a guy is that any excuse for the State to pull another crazy stunt and croak him? Do two wrongs make a right? The State ain't got any more right to bump a guy off than I have.

"Here's another line that will go big. Take this prison reform racket. I could clean up with that. I'd pack 'em in with their tongues hangin' out. Crooked Wardens grafting on contracts; selling wormy apples to the cons for 70 cents a dozen. Wardens getting down on poor chumps in the big house and sticking 'em into dark holes on bread and water. Torturing 'em. Beating 'em. Takin' their good-time allowances away if they don't lie down and smile. I could tell you about things that happen in prisons that would make your hair do the Charleston. Oh, I got plenty to talk about."

A general discussion started between Big Tim, two of his supporters who were in the room and the correspondent as to the financial possibilities of a lecture tour.

"I ought to knock off one grand a week, anyway," Big Tim ventured. "People like to be told they're suckers. They like to be told how the big boys are playin' them for boobs. They eat it up. F'r instance, supposing I was talking to a swell society crowd. I'd say: 'Where are your kids? Why don't you get some kids instead of playin' around with polo ponies and lap dogs? Call yourselves Americans? Why, these poor Bohunks, Wops, Chinese and Swedes, they're the real Americans. They're busy raisin' families.' That's what I'd tell 'em, and they'd like it. They'd maybe get sore, but they'd like it.

"NOW, get me right. Most people are honest. Only they're suckers, see? They don't think. They ain't got nothing frying on the pan. Get what I mean? They let a lot of big crooks pull the wool over their eyes and send them yapping after the little fellows, who don't count. Now, you take all this talk about gangsters. It's the bunk. Everybody is a gangster. Every man trails with a certain crowd. Only when some poor ignorant bum gets wild and starts shooting—he's called a gangster and everyone who knows him belongs to the gang. See? A guy ain't responsible for what his friends do.

"Everybody is in a stew about the little fellows, because the big boys wear good clothes and take a bath often and are nicer to have around the house. They listen to what the big boys say. The big boys keep their fingers pointing at the little fellows and there's a big chase—just like a pack of hounds after a mouse. When I'm lecturin' that's what I'll tell em. I'll say: 'You let a pack at Washington swipe millions an' vote the same party back into power, but when some sewer digger goes on a bat with a rod and nicks a payroll for a hundred dollars, everybody yells, "Jail him! Break up the gangs! Send him to the chair."'

"Is that right? Oh, I've tumbled to the whole works. I got my finger on the jerry, all right. I'm not afraid to tell the big cheeses I'm on to them. They ain't so much. I was in the Illinois State Legislature. I was three years at Washington. One day a guy is just a working stiff like you and me. The next, he's been elected Senator or something and he thinks he's the berries. Then he joins the swell mob that keeps the public looking at poor chumps in the alleys while they reach for the big dough.

"If you want to cut down crime begin at the top. They say I'm a gunman. I'd just as soon they'd take the guns away from everybody. Take 'em away from the cops, too. In England the cops don't pack guns. In England they don't have so much thievin', either. Why? Say-y-y, listen. Over there the big boys are honester. There hasn't been a scandal in the Government over there since I can remember; not a real big steal. That makes the little fellow honester. Get me? Ain't I right?"

Several visitors entered just then and Big Tim, calling them by their first names, made them take seats. The writer had only time to remind Mr. Murphy that he was generally regarded as one of the big boys; that Chicago officials with whom he occasionally attends banquets—see Chicago papers of a month or so back—call him "an overlord of vice." The writer also mentioned that when Big Tim left Leavenworth, one of his lieutenants boasted: "Tim has a cool million."

I'm Murphy and I know my eggs—Lay off this case
GC

To these accusations Big Tim turned a bland face, and in his voice was mild reproach.

"A million?" he said gently. "Me worth a million? Say-y-y, listen—I'm just a hard-working plumber!"

And at the door—

"Remember, I think lecturin's going to be my racket from now on. If things look good in St. Louis for a big clean-up, let me know."

THE morning train from Joplin came backing into Union Station. Among the group standing inside the gate to welcome the wayfarers were two gentlemen whose names appear on the roll of city detectives. It is usually a pleasant business to be met by someone at the end of your journey—it is in most cases—but not if the someone happens to be a fellow in accepted clothes but with a badge pinned in some convenient but hidden position.

The two city detectives eyed those who clambered from the Joplin train. Those sleepy-eyed creatures who had suffered fitful slumbers in more or less acrobatic positions in the coaches; the gentlemen throwing away their Pullman tickets as they made for the midway with the light of breakfast in their eyes; the well-dressed matrons touching their fingers to their hair in the deep conviction that no woman has ever dressed her coiffure in a Pullman dressing room quite as she would have done it in her own home. And then there appeared through the coal smoke a vision of something that is seldom seen this side of Forty-second street and Broadway.

FOR SHE was wearing a green suit that had been fashioned by someone who knew how to fashion a green suit. A yellow felt hat, worn at a fascinating dip, adorned her head. Over her arm hung a generous and sightly handbag, and about her shoulders was draped a black lace shawl of delicate weave. Nor did the lady's figure, which might be described as the Follies type, detract from the general ensemble, while her face, if anything, added something to it.

Just what the emotions of our city's two law officers were at the moment is unknown, and it would be indelicate to ask them. But—perhaps touching their fingers to their badges for reassurance—they stopped the young woman of the yellow felt hat and the Follies figure, announced they were from headquarters, and wanted to know if she wasn't Miss Lora Sonderson, who, the day before, had escaped from Nevada, Missouri, and the State institution for those whose minds were not all they should be. The young woman immediately told the detectives that she was that person, and added: "I'm not any more crazy than you are."

So they took her to police headquarters and wrote her down: "Lora Sonderson, single, 26 years old, Kansas City, Missouri, an actress. Hold for Nevada hospital authorities."

And presently she was transferred to the city hospital, her pretty things were taken away from her, they dressed her in one of those impersonal habits, half-gown and half-trousers, that our city hospital patients are fitted in, and wheeled her away to the observation ward and put her to bed.

But in her gorgeous handbag, which the attendants dipped into in the official way, they found certain informative newspaper clippings.

For these clippings stated that Miss Lora Sonderson had been committed to the State institution at Nevada after a disturbance in the lobby of Hotel Muehlebach, Kansas City, on February 16. That Miss Sonderson had declared she was the wife of Mr. William Boyd, who was playing one of the leads in "What Price Glory," at that time showing in Kansas City; that Miss Sonderson had not only declared it, but had attempted to demonstrate it by throwing her arms about Mr. Boyd while in the lobby of the aforementioned hotel; that Mr. Boyd had denied he was Miss Sonderson's husband, but that he knew her and had known her when she was playing in a revue in New York.

And the clippings further stated that Miss Sonderson had some years ago sung in a Kansas City church choir, where she had been celebrated for her excellent voice; that as a high school girl her picture was sent to some magazine having a beauty contest, and she won it; that she later had gone on the musical comedy stage, where, in New York, she had been acclaimed as a worthy addition to that form of theatrical enterprise.

But after the Hotel Muehlebach drama, said these clippings, which later were backed up by dispatches from Kansas City, the balance of Miss Sonderson's mind became doubtful to Kansas City officials; she was then examined by the gentleman in Kansas City who attends to such things, and was straightway committed to the Nevada institution.

NOW, WHEN Miss Sonderson declared in the Muehlebach lobby, as she is related to have done, that William Boyd was her husband, William Boyd was surprised, and on being asked by police if it was true, he said not to his knowledge. But he went with her to the police station, and then they told him they would take care of her. And that was all Boyd could very well do about it.

Then they took Lora Sonderson to Nevada, and she was there four weeks. Undoubtedly the town of Nevada has something to recommend it, and undoubtedly to an inhabitant of Nevada it has much to recommend it, but not even the most confirmed Nevada citizen would contend that the thoroughfares of that town in any way resembled Broadway and Forty-second street.

(Broadway and Forty-second street. One hundred taxicabs of different colors, so close together that their mudguards scrape. Italian newsboy shrieking you to buy that home-town paper from Erie, or Los Angeles, or Bismarck. WILLIAM BOYD, actor in "What Price Glory." He was chief participant in the Kansas City skirmishing which landed Lora Sonderson in the State institution at Nevada, Missouri.

NO, Nevada is not quite like Broadway and Forty-second street, and Miss Sonderson didn't think so, either. Nor was Miss Sonderson especially impressed by the life at Missouri's institution for the mentally affected. So, one day, after about a month's residence, Miss Sonderson dressed herself in her pretty clothes, and while no one was looking in her direction, walked out of the hospital and out of the city limits of Nevada. She then proceeded to Joplin, where she boarded a train for St. Louis. Only to be apprehended as she stepped off the train here by the two detectives before mentioned. For the hospital people at Nevada, conjecturing that she would strike out for New York, and that her easiest approach to the metropolis would be through St. Louis, had telegraphed the police here to be on watch for the lady and to get hold of her when she arrived.

So the local constabulary having duly obeyed the institutional authorities of Nevada, and Miss Lora Sonderson having been duly incarcerated at the observation ward of the city hospital of St. Louis, the writer proceeded to that institution and that ward for to ask Miss Sonderson what she thought about it. He found her sitting in the bed, with her shapely arms hugging her knees. She was wearing a dismal face that was not at all in keeping with the merry blondness of her hair.

As the intruder entered the lady's room, if room it may be called, what with its wired window and the barrenness of it, the extremely good-looking girl hunched in her bed, pulled in her cheek and cast a hard eye at him, for she sensed who he was.

And after airing her opinion of the newspaper profession in general and her interviewer's motive in particular, she asked if it would be possible to negotiate the loan of a cigarette. So she was given her cigarette, it was lighted for her, she took a long inhale and she said "Ummmm." Then she pointed a derisive finger at her hospital apparel and wanted to know if it wasn't beautiful. "And if you are going to write anything about me," said she, "would you mind telling the truth?"

"Oh," she began, "I wish I'd never left New York. One of my friends told me not to go. She said: 'Don't go out there, stay here. You know how it is out there.' I am not crazy. Please understand that. The only reason I'm here, the only reason I was at Nevada, is because of my sweet old-maid sister. And my affectionate aunt. They're so good to me. Now, listen, and I'll tell you all about it.

"The first place I sang was at a church in Kansas City. Before that I'd gone to the University of Kansas for a while. Well, while I was singing in Kansas City I won a beauty contest. They said I was the prettiest girl in Missouri." (Miss Sonderson accompanied this statement by an arm held high in the air, the fingers of the hand fanned, and a deep cynical curtsy. It was probably one of the most excellent curtsies ever made by a person in bed.)

"Then some friends of mine in Kansas City talked to some friends of theirs and these friends talked to Morrie Gest and he gave me a job. I went to New York."

* * * *

(The first sight of New York. Fifth avenue and shops and shops. French cafes run by Norwegians and Danish pastry served by Frenchmen. The best restaurants serving you orange juice and gin without even the asking.)

"I WAS very successful in New York," said Miss Sonderson. "I have a very fine voice. I also had a lot of fun. I once threw a party that had it all over the champagne bathtub party Earl Carroll threw a few weeks ago. But that hasn't got anything to do with the shows I was in.

"I was in the 'Follies' for two weeks. Then I got married. I married a man named Harry Hamilton Meyer. He's a picture actor. And three months later I went up to Providence, Rhode Island, and got a divorce. That's the reason I quit the 'Follies.' Not the divorce, the marriage. He wanted me to get off the stage. And the reason I got the divorce was because I found it was too much for me to support us both. I understand he is now in California with a broken heart." (Miss Sonderson clasped her own heart and cast her eyes toward the ceiling in a manner that can only be described as satirical.)

"Well, I was in the 'Gingham Girl' and 'Afgar' and a couple of other shows, and then, in 1924 and 1925, I was in the 'Music Box Revue.' I sang and I got some perfectly wonderful notices.

"And now I'll tell you how my trouble started. I had Lucy, my sister, pay me a visit in New York. I paid all of her expenses. She saw I had a couple of cars and a chauffeur and that now and then I took a drink, and she didn't approve.

"One night I had a party at my apartment. I had two cases of champagne. And when we all began to drink it, still my sister didn't approve. And a few days later she looked at my checkbook and saw the amount of a check to a bootlegger for liquor. She almost had to go to bed for the rest of the day.

"Nothing I did was the right thing to do. I'm engaged to a man in New York named William Hoberg. Oh, he's a lovely fellow. You ought to see him. He and his mother are in the restaurant business. And he is going to open a cabaret in the fifties, just off the avenue, and I'm to be the headliner at $1000 a week and 5 per cent of the cover charge. I ought to be there now. Billie's going to call the place 'La Sonderson.'

"Well, my sister met Billie and she didn't want me to marry him. They have a fellow in Kansas City they want me to marry. I got angry with her when she was in New York and one night I left my apartment. So my sister thought I'd run away with Billie and she had a warrant out against me. It was terrible. Every time anybody called me up after that, the first thing they'd say was: 'Lora, I hear you've been kidnaped.'

"And my sister left and went back to Kansas City. Then she sent me a letter saying I must come home. So I went to Kansas City. They said I ought to get away from New York and marry this man in Kansas City. It was terrible."

(Kansas City is 36 hours from New York. More than a thousand miles. There aren't upwards of 60 theaters in Kansas City and there very few persons dress for dinner.)

* * * *

"OH, I HAD an awful time," she said. "And then I heard 'What Price Glory' was in town and that Billie Boyd was playing in it. I'd known Billie for years. So I called him up, and one night after the show Billie and two other fellows and myself had supper. The party broke up about 3 o'clock. I decided I'd go back to New York the next day, so they put me in a room at the Muehlebach. The next morning one of them called me up and told me to get up and have breakfast with them, and just as I was dressing the police came to my room and took me to the police station and said I was crazy. Then somebody in Kansas City looked at me—he didn't examine me at all—and he said I was crazy. So they sent me to Nevada. I was there a month. Everybody was awfully nice to me and all that. And then I bribed some of them (I won't tell you who) and got out and went to Joplin and caught the train for St. Louis. And here, in this place, I am."

Miss Sonderson looked out the window. It was a lovely day and a warm breeze was blowing in through the wires.

"My," said she, "how I'd love to be out today. And I wanted to get a haircut and a manicure, too."

"What sort of a bob is that?" she was asked, for it was hardly a bob at all; it was very much like a real haircut.

"On Broadway," she replied, "it is called a Sonderson."

The word Broadway encouraged thoughts of Broadway, it seems, for she sighed: "Oh, I wish I was in New York. Do you think I'll get out of this place? I wish they'd let me. I've been very nice to them. I've been yessing them all day."

And as her interviewer was about to leave she said: "I'm studying for grand opera. I'm studying 'Carmen,' 'Tosca' and 'Samson and Delilah.' Stress the grand opera stuff."

* * * *

(The Metropolitan. Or the Music Box. Or the New Amsterdam. Or the Century. Or any of them. Applause and laughter and admiration. And most anyone quite willing and not a little glad to meet the lady of the spotlight.)

* * * *

IN New York it is said Miss Sonderson did once throw a party that at least rivaled Earl Carroll's and might have had it all over his, as she attested. It happened when she was with the "Music Box" and just after she announced her engagement to a "Senor de Forazo, a millionaire sugar planter from Cuba." Miss Sonderson, declaring she was going to bury her past, hired an undertaker's chapel on Broadway, where the party was held and where a funeral service to inter her history was enacted. There is alive in New York a rumor that the "Music Box's" press agent had much to do with that party.

Last December, shortly before Miss Sonderson left New York, she was one of a party at the Casa Lopez, the cabaret run by Vincent Lopez, the jazz band leader. On her finger Miss Sonderson had a pearl ring, which she said was worth $6000, but on which a New York newspaper later placed a valuation of $7.55. Miss Sonderson declares she gave the ring to Lopez after he had asked her if he couldn't keep it for her for the evening. Then, she says, he never returned it. The business was brought to court, and Lopez testified Miss Sonderson kept dropping the ring, that he picked it up so often he got a crick in his back, and that he finally gave it to her escort to keep for her. Nothing came of the court case.

Mr. William Hoberg, to whom Miss Sonderson says she is engaged, has this to say:

"Miss Sonderson and I are not engaged. But don't get the impression that I wouldn't like to be. Maybe we would be by now if she'd have stayed in New York. She's remarkable. I think she's wonderful. Got a lovely voice. And she's beautiful, too.

"The only trouble with her is that she smokes too many cigarettes and drinks more than she should. She used to smoke eighty to a hundred cigarettes a day, one right after another. She's not crazy at all. I think her folks put her in the asylum to make her take a rest and to keep her from ruining her health by dissipating. And I think they're afraid she'll marry me."

IN THE best residence district of Kansas City, in a house with a big porch, and a long rear yard with a swing in it, live Miss Sonderson's mother and sister and aunt. And this sister, Miss Lucy, who is a teacher of the piano, told me this when I came to interview her: "We don't want Lora to go back to New York for a while. The doctors say she must not. For a year and a half ago she had a nervous breakdown, and she came home. And we let her go back to New York too soon. And as far as her getting married is concerned, or our wanting her to marry someone here, we don't care if she never gets married."

And Miss Sonderson's mother says: "Some of Lora's friends in New York wrote us in December and told us she ought to come home. So Lucy went for her. And she found that my poor girl was trying to cash checks for money she didn't have, and that she was buying automobiles and charging things at shops that she knew she couldn't pay for. And after the trouble at the Muehlebach with Mr. Boyd—and Mr. Boyd wasn't at all to blame for it—they told us the best place for the poor child would be at Nevada. For she wouldn't listen to us at home. She always had four trunks at the station ready to be shipped to New York. So we sent her to Nevada. There was nothing else we could do. She never did any of those silly things before she became ill."

And the city official who recommended Lora Sonderson be sent to the State institution says: "That girl has a fine mind. But she's got to be quiet for a while." While the neurologist who examined her declares: "This girl needs a rest. Then she'll get well."

* * * *

ON THE evening of the day Miss Sonderson arrived in St. Louis there came here an official from the State hospital. And they returned to her the pretty green suit and her yellow felt hat, her sightly handbag and her black silk shawl, and they took her back to Nevada.

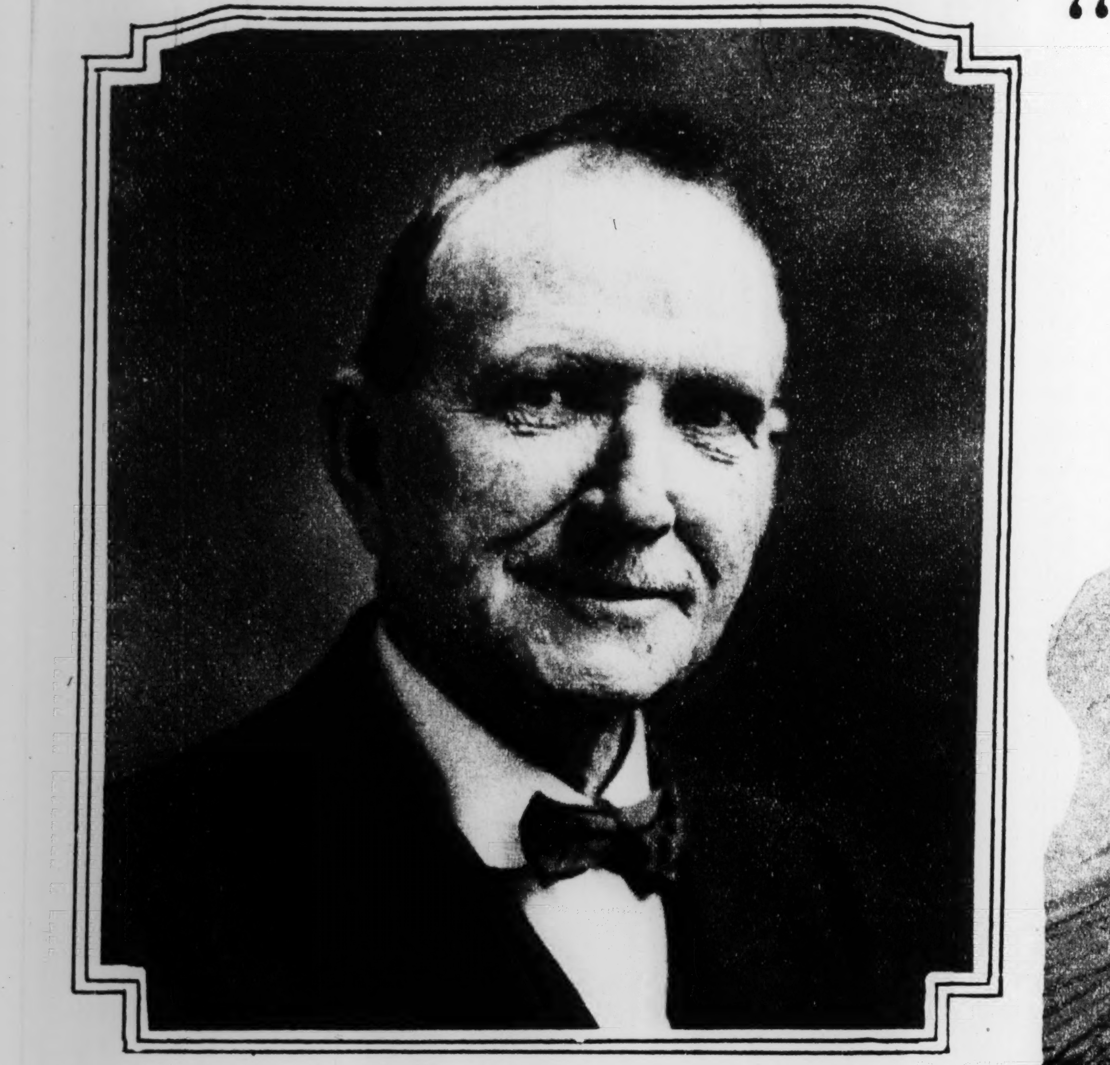
"THE FIGHTING PEACEMAKER"

MIKE HEALY, Deputy United States Marshal for 44 Years, Would Rather Make Friends Than Enemies. But When It Comes Right Down to It There Are Few Better Fighting Men. He Has Run Many Close Races With Death.



MIKE HEALY, Deputy Marshal.

By HARRY R. BURKE
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa. — The attorney for the Government fixed the witness with flashing eye, and his voice boomed through the Federal courtroom here, as he said: "Now, isn't it true that your hand is always against the Government? That whenever there is trouble on the Tama Reservation you are at the bottom of it? That there isn't a riot, an insurrection, a revolt, a rebellion, that doesn't show the evidence of your fine Italian hand?"

"No," answered Jim Peters, and the Indian's face resumed its grim and stolid look. He might have been a bronze image.

"I want you to answer me again," said the attorney, and he pointed a finger under the Indian's nose. "Isn't it a fact that if there is any deviltry on the reservation you are mixed up in it? Isn't it true that whenever there is any trouble you have a large part in the trouble? Isn't it a fact, I repeat, that your hand is always against the Government?"

"No," said Jim Peters, "Mike Healy and me good friends."

And so Jim Peters introduces Mike Healy, aged 71, who for 44 years has been Deputy United States Marshal in Northeastern Iowa. Ever since the United States established its court for the Northern District of Iowa, Mike Healy has been the visible evidence of Uncle Sam's law. Before that, for three years, he had worn a star as policeman and later as Chief of Police of Cedar Rapids.

Forty-seven years a copper! Healy hasn't learned to think like a policeman yet. He is mentally a philosopher. He is physically a fighting peacemaker.

Out on the Tama Indian reservation, where the Musquakie Indians—"the Red Earth Men"—are, Mike's word is law. Recently, John Doe (which is not his name) tried to monopolize the wife of Richard Roe (and that name is fictitious also). Richard threw a can of lye in John's face and marred his beauty. Both men were violators of the law. Both were indicted. "You can kill an Indian by sending him to the penitentiary," says Mike, "but you can't change his nature. He's not likely to be better when he comes out."

SO MIKE persuaded the Court to continue the cases against both men. So long as they behaved no further action would be taken. Thus was a feud between their friends avoided. Thus both were kept on their good behavior. They knew Mike meant it when he said they would go to the penitentiary if they didn't treat each other as friends—if they didn't smoke the pipe of peace.

Mike Healy won his right to make peace among the Tama Indians by being a first-rate fighter. "An Indian," he said, "must fear you or he must respect you. It doesn't make much difference which."

Physically, Mike Healy is a little man. Short of stature, slight of build, with a broad oval face that habitually broadens itself in a smile. There are lines and wrinkles that tell of braving all sorts of weather in pursuit of his man. His blue eyes lie deep beneath cavernous brows. Mostly they twinkle with good humor. Sometimes they glitter with determination. You never mistake their meaning. His nose is long, large and blunted at the down-turning tip—the nose of a conqueror. His hair is thinning on his head, but it is not gray.

Of only one thing is Mike Healy afraid. That thing is a dog. He would walk straight into the barrel of a pistol—as he has again and again. He wouldn't think of that. But let a dog snarl, or sniff, or bark, and Mike gets ready to defend himself. That is what he did when he went up to the Tama reservation back in the early 80's after an Indian named Cameo.

Cameo was a Carlisle Indian, educated, well dressed—in the word of those days, a "dude." He had been sent to Tama as a civilizing influence. He had gone back to the blanket and to ancient ways. And he was in trouble.

Mike Healy had a description of the man. That was all. When he reached the reservation Cameo could not be found. It was Mike's first visit there. He didn't know, as he knows now, every brave and squaw, every papoose, by name.

So, with the agent as his guide, he started his search. The braves were holding a council. The agent led the way to the council tent. Mike picked up a stout green club. There were too many feisty dogs snarling around to suit him.

PICTURE the council tent—a great big wigwam, with a hundred braves in the darkness inside. No window, only a door closed by a blanket. In the center a big council fire, its flames furnishing the light by which the Indians smoked and talked, discussing their tribal problems. At the door a brave standing as sentry.

The agent halted in front of the wigwam. He parted the blanket and stepped inside. It was a moment before he could accustom his eyes to the gloom. In that moment Lone Wolf, the sentinel, had seized him by the arm and shoved him outside into the brilliant winter sunshine.

"Come on," said the agent. But Mike wouldn't retreat.

He in his turn swept aside the blanket and stepped within. He, also, was blinded by the gloom. And to him, also, the brawny arm of Lone Wolf reached out, seizing his coat. Mike Healy wrenched himself free. His right arm raised the hickory club he carried and brought it down across the skull of the Indian sentinel. Lone Wolf fell like a rock.

By that time Healy's narrow eyes were accustomed to the gloom. He walked around the circle of astonished braves, bending to peer into the face of each, slowly, from man to man, clear around the circle of the wigwam. Not an Indian moved. Not a word was said.

Cameo was not there. Mike Healy was sure of it now, and he reached the blanket door, before which lay Lone Wolf, prostrate. With his foot the intrepid Irishman pushed the brave, as though to shove him out of the way. Lone Wolf suddenly sat up.

"Wait," said the Indian, and got to his feet. Then he picked up the pipe he had been smoking up to the moment he had attempted to thrust the marshal out. He took a puff and wiped the mouthpiece on his blanket, polishing it carefully. Then, with dignity, he handed it bit foremost to Mike Healy. And Mike took the pipe and smoked. From that time they were friends. Healy got his man before he left the reservation. And since that time the fighting peacemaker has been getting them, regularly, with the Indians' aid.

Mike Healy has lived more stories than a dozen writers could invent. Scores of offenders against the law he has sent to prison. Most of them have liked him for it. Bank robbers, train robbers, murderers, outlaws of every sort have paid the penalty of the law because of his determination. He has been shot at. He has been hit. Most men learn the lesson of fear from such experiences. One bad man, many years ago, fired point blank in Mike Healy's face. The bullet carried away four teeth, battered his tongue to a pulp, and lodged in his throat. "You haven't one chance in 1000 to live," the doctors told him. Mike took a piece of paper and scribbled: "It takes more than this to kill me." It did. While the surgeons were planning to cut in and dislodge the bullet, Mike, seemingly choking to death, worked it free with his fingers and with one burst of energy turned over in bed, got on his hands and knees and shook it out of his mouth.

But of all the captures of his long career none Mike Healy has made was so dramatic as that in which he unwittingly played a ghost.

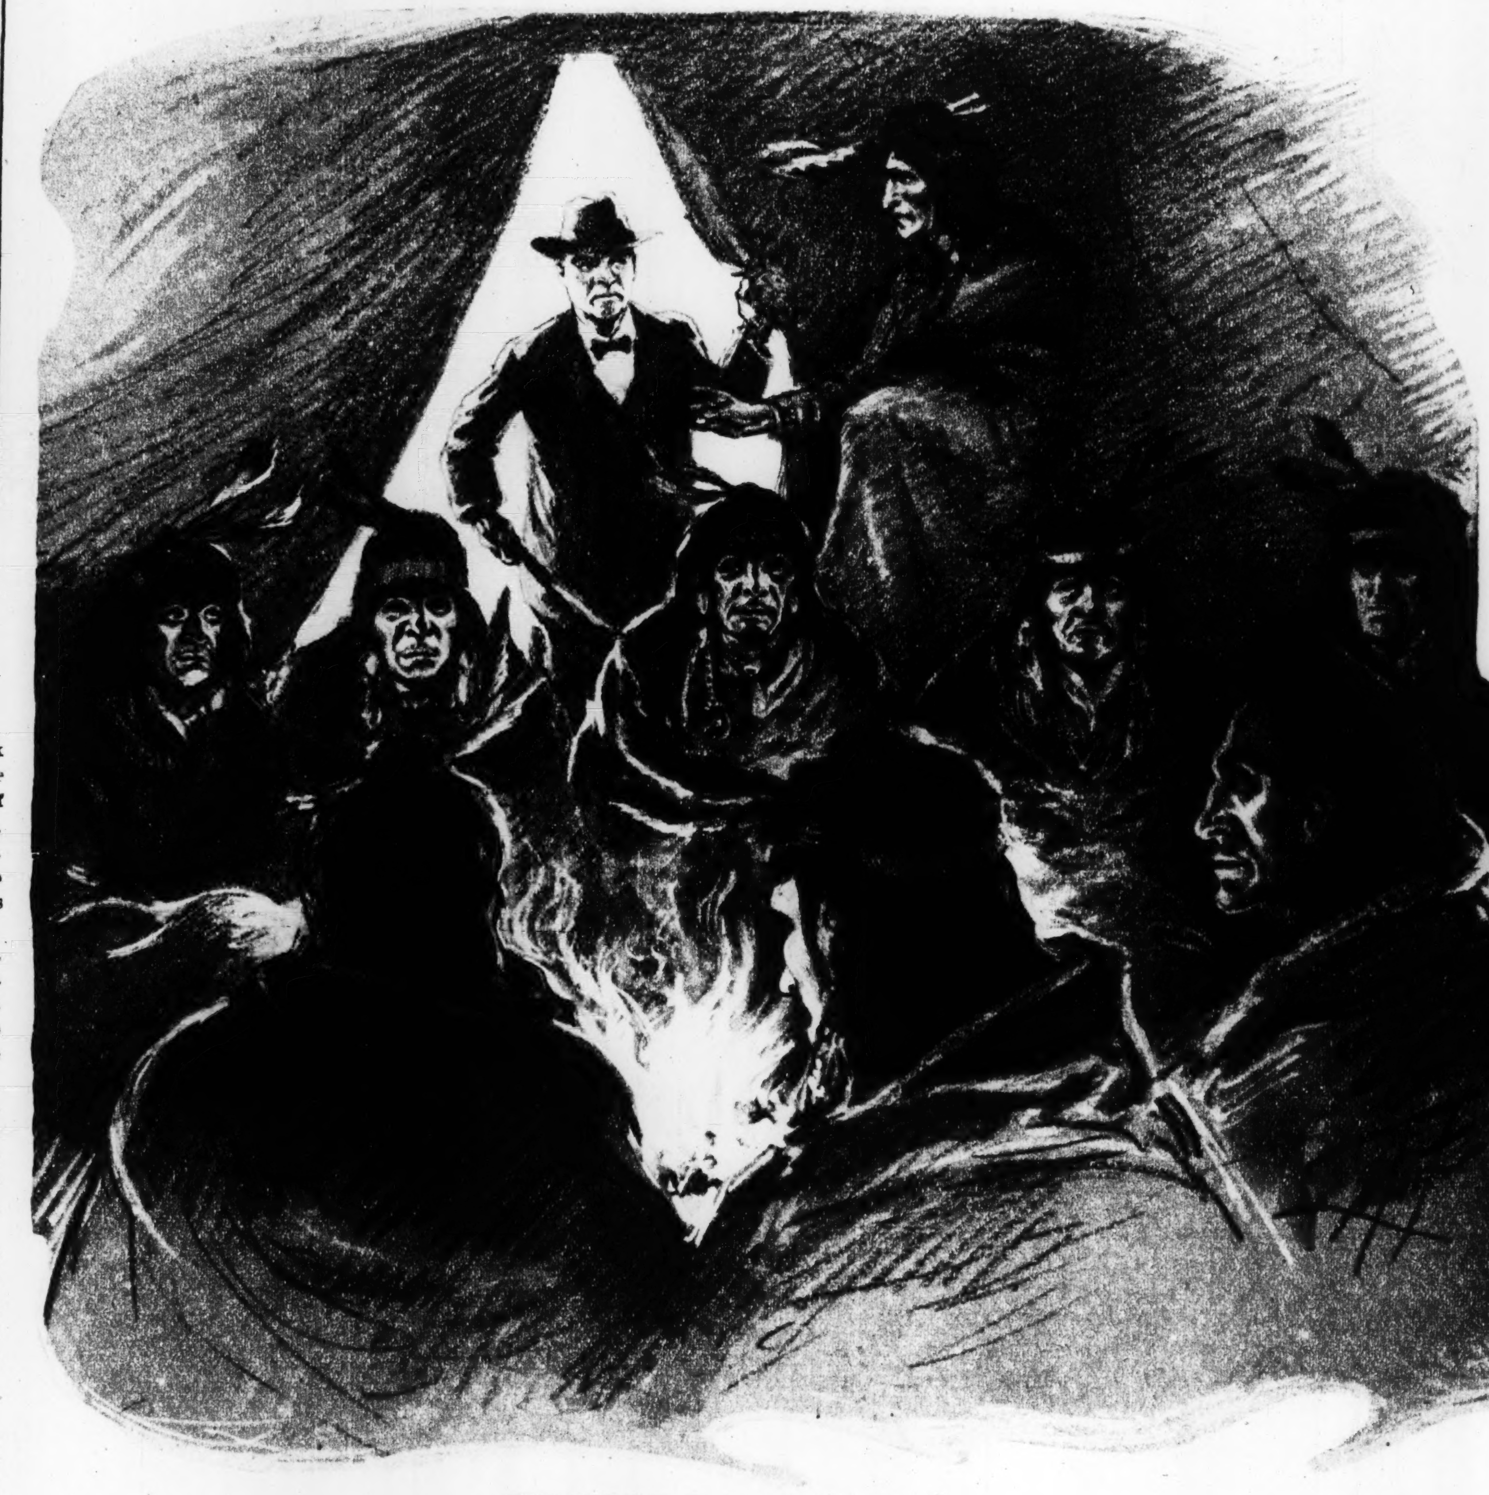
DOWN in Packingtown in Cedar Rapids, January 6, 1885, there had been a card party. Those were prohibition days in Iowa and Max Chick, John Mundbroud, Billy Hinkelman and Pete Froelich had shipped in a keg of whisky, and started to celebrate in a little three-room shack, unpainted, clapped together anyhow. As they drank they played cards and an argument arose. In the melee John Mundbroud was killed, his jugular vein pierced by a three-cornered file. Chick, in whose home the men had met, was stabbed 26 times. The Froelich brothers disappeared. Hinkelman came, bloody and scared, to the police station with the story of the tragedy. The fire alarm was rung—as was the custom in those days—and search was made for the brothers.

Healy and Chief of Police McDonald started out for the slayers, after a first look at the shack, which was a shamble. In a dark street near the railroad they encountered Max Froelich, badly frightened. He pointed south along the Rock Island track when they asked him where his brother was.

So Healy locked up Max and with Captain McDonald started south on a "wild freight" to overtake the slayer.

"We had all kinds of theories," says Mike Healy, humorously, "you always have. Until you face the facts."

From the rear end of the caboose they watched the track. No sign of the man as far as Ely. There would have been no trouble seeing him. Crusted snow was on the ground. The moon was at full. They started on to Solon, the next town south.



CLUB IN HAND, Healy pushed into the teepee.

And between Ely and Solon, after the train had passed they saw a man step out from behind a tree and resume his plodding over the ice and snow along the right of way. A big brawny ox-like fellow.

"Our man," said Captain McDonald, above the rattle of the train.

On to Solon they went, and then doubled back on foot. They hoped to reach a crossroads a little over two miles north of town—near where the road crossed the right-of-way, and where, according to their theories, Froelich would leave the railroad and skirt the town to avoid being seen.

On they plodded, Mike Healy ahead, back of him the big bulk of his superior. It was bitterly cold following a thaw, and the snow crunched beneath their feet with a rasping sound as they broke through.

By now it was well past midnight. They swung their arms to beat out the cold. The frost formed in little icicles from their drooping moustaches. Now they came to a bridge across a little unnamed creek. Perhaps it was a hundred feet across. Just beyond, 100 yards away, was a sharp curve in the railroad.

Healy was half across the bridge when suddenly in front of them loomed the headlight of the Cannon Ball Express. No time to reach safety.

"JUMP, Cap, jump!" cried Mike, and at that instant took a flying leap toward the bed of the creek below. And the backward rush of air as the express split the atmosphere carried his form probably 30 feet onward and landed him in a big snow drift on the edge of the stream.

And even as he landed he was conscious of the big form of his superior hurtling through the air, and heard the crack of splitting ice where the winter harvesters had been working, and a splash as McDonald sank beneath the waters.

"Quicker than it takes to tell," says Mike, "I had struggled free from the snow drift. I knew his only chance was for me to reach him."

Mike rushed out on heavier ice and jumped in and found McDonald. The water was only chest deep.

McDonald had come up to the surface. In his forehead was a great gaping wound. He had been hit by the train and his skull was crushed. He tried to say something. What it was Healy could not understand.

The little man struggled to hold the other up and get him to the creek bank. The thin ice would not hold their weight. It had to be broken before them. Healy, still holding McDonald, got around behind him and started to push the heavier man toward shore. His feet slipped. Both went under. Mike Healy was beneath the ice, but he could see the opening and swam to it. Again he got to his feet. McDonald had sunk as he fell and lay at the bottom beneath the opening. Again Healy got him to his feet.

"It seemed ages," says Mike. "But it couldn't have been long. That train was going 60 miles an hour. Maybe more. But Jim Simpson, the engineer, had seen me in the headlight's glare. 'My God, I've killed Mike Healy,' he said. He didn't know they had hit McDonald. So they came back. It seemed like there were 50 men piled off that train to help get us out. Finally, with a rope, they did. But it was like hours."

AND then they ran the train on in to Solon, where the fire bell had given an alarm, and where the doctor waited. In the little station they laid the stretcher with Chief McDonald.

"No need to bother about that man," said the doctor. "We've got to look after this one. He'll die of pneumonia."

And with that he filled a cup with a half a pint of whisky and handed it to Healy, who stood, shivering, like a half-drowned dog.

"But I don't drink," said Mike, waving the tin-cup away.

"Makes no difference," said the other.

"And I drank it down," says Healy, "like it was so much fire. But it had no more effect than water. I never felt it."

They tore his clothes from him. Two husky men were each given a big rough towel.

"Don't be careful of him," said the doctor. "Let it hurt. You rub. Rub like hell. Get up a circulation."

And as he stood there by the red-hot cannon stove the two men rubbed with a vengeance. From his living quarters, upstairs, the agent brought out a suit of underwear. It was too small for Mike. It hit him somewhere between ankles and elbows, but he put it on.

And now he turned with his back to the stove and looked out the window, and down the track, and there, a hundred yards away, he saw the unmistakeable form of Pete Froelich, who hadn't followed the proper theories at all, and who, all unaware of the fatal pursuit, was plodding on, down the track through town, like a tired ox coming in from a day's work.

"There's Froelich now," said Healy. But in the babel of voices his was unheard. The occupants of the depot were too busy discussing their respective roles in the tragedy to notice the man it was all about.

MIKE HEALY reached for the overcoat of the dead police chief and took a revolver from the pocket. Without a word, dressed as he was in that skimpy suit of underwear and bare of foot, he darted out the door and down the track after the fugitive.

Pete Froelich heard him coming, heard the bare feet crunching in the snow, and darted a quick glance over his shoulder. Then he, too, started to run.

Down the track in the moonlight they raced for it, but Mike, younger, lighter, more active, had all the best of the racing. Slowly he overtook the other. He reached out and nabbed Pete's collar.

"Now," he said, and he thrust a gun near the fugitive's backbone, "up with your hands.

"Right about face," said Mike. "We'll have a race. You run for it."

And back along the railroad track they ran, back to the depot, where Pete Froelich fell exhausted on the platform, amid the crowd that had followed through the open doorway to see Mike Healy's sprint.

"I thought it was a ghost was after me," said Pete when he recovered enough to talk.

He pleaded guilty—to a manslaughter charge. A few weeks before he had completed his sentence in the penitentiary Froelich sent word to Mike that he wanted to see him. They met when the prisoner got out.

"Here," said Pete, "is something I want you to remember me by."

It was a jewel casket in carved stone, carefully inlaid with a mosaic of many colored bits of stone. It had been years in the making. And Pete, who afterward established himself in business as a stone cutter and was successful, wanted Mike to have it.

There is another good story, of a soldier. He was a Norwegian boy, aged 17, when America entered the World War. He had been employed by a woman near Cedar Rapids, who, after his dismissal, received threatening letters. She must put certain money under a culvert by a certain time, or—the burning of her home and sudden death were among the threats. Mike caught the boy at the culvert and the youngster confessed.

"If you go to the penitentiary," Healy told the youngster, "your life is ruined. If a charge is brought against you you can't enlist in the army. But you can take your choice. If you will enlist I will not bring a charge."

"But if I go to war they'll kill me," said the boy.

"You'd better be dead than in prison, son," said Healy.

AND so it was agreed. The woman who received the letters was as convinced as was Mike Healy that they were really only a prank. So the old Marshal told the facts to the recruiting agency and the recruiting officer accepted the boy. Mike heard no more from him until 1919.

And then, late in the year, and nearing Christmas time, a handsome young officer entered Mike's office, wearing on his shoulder the insignia of an overseas army outfit. It was the boy Mike Healy had saved from the penitentiary. He had risen rapidly from private to First Sergeant of his outfit. And over there he had also won his shoulder-straps.

Mike Healy's eyes sparkle as he tells that story. It would have been so easy to send that boy to prison. But the fighting peacemaker looks at it in another way.

"I helped to make a man of him," he says, "and I sent Uncle Sam a good soldier in my place when I was too old to go."

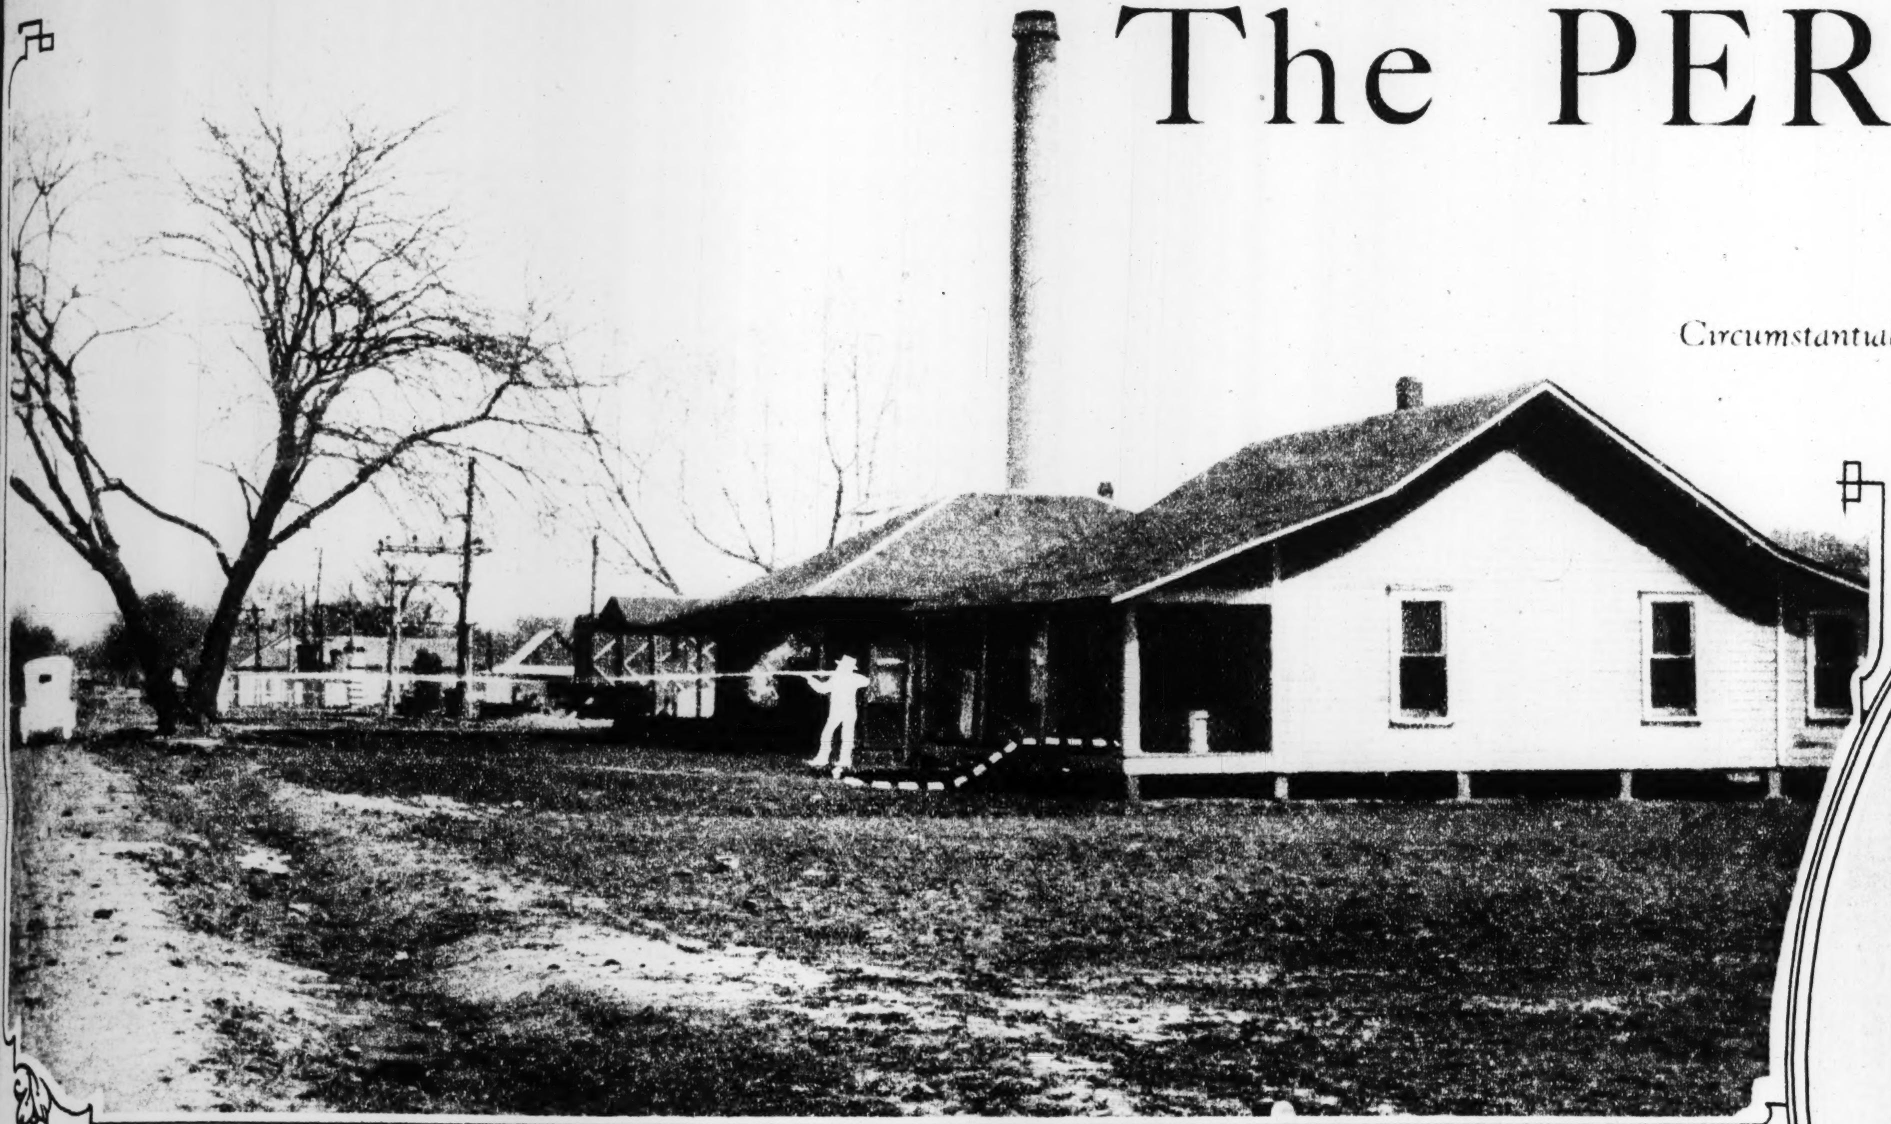
The PERFECT Case

Circumstantial Evidence Was Complete——Apparently There Was No Loophole. And Yet——



THE SCENE OF THE CRIME. The Christie house in foreground. The killer shown sending the fatal shots into the automobile. Next door lives L. F. Wheelis. He saw Christie re-enter his home, but did NOT see the actual shooting

By F. A. BEHYMER

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

WALNUT RIDGE, Arkansas. It was a perfect circumstantial case if ever there was one. The shot that killed Tom Scott came from the cartridge shells that were found close by Seymour Christie's porch. The shells fitted Seymour Christie's gun. The indentation on the primers, as shown by tests, was identical with the indentation made by the hammer of Christie's gun. And Christie was seen entering his door immediately after the shots were fired. So what could the jury do but find him guilty? It might have sent him to the gallows, but it was content to fix his punishment at 10 years in prison. Ten years on an Arkansas prison farm! The gallows couldn't be much worse than that.

This Seymour Christie was not at all the sort who would be expected to step out on his porch and kill a man. He had always been rated a good citizen, ever since he came here several years ago from Illinois and established himself as a carpenter contractor. He was an amiable and inoffensive man of good habits, circumspect, not given to unseemliness of any sort. The idea of Seymour Christie wantonly killing was absurd—BUT—there was the circumstantial evidence.

Seymour Christie lived in a modest home on a modest street in the south end of town, near the big cotton compress. With him lived his wife and children and his son-in-law, Tom Atkins, ex-service man, who had married Lou Christie. When his day's work was done he went home to well-earned rest against the coming of another day's duties. He was 45 years old and had no inclination to be running around, and so was at home the night that Tom Scott was killed. For once it would have been better if he had been away from home. His presence there was part of the proof against him.

IT WAS a most mysterious motiveless crime, the killing of Tom Scott. Tom was 36 years old and lived in Pocahontas, 18 miles from here, but was in charge of construction work on the new highway south of town and was making his headquarters here. There had been no trouble between him and Seymour Christie that anybody knew about. In fact, they were scarcely acquainted.

The night of October 23, 1925, Scott and Keith Wike and two other men were driving in an automobile from Hoxie to Walnut Ridge and at the cotton compress they turned into the street that led by the Christie home. Wike was driving. Scott was sitting beside him. The other two were in the back seat.

The car was a little way past the Christie home, opposite a large tree whose branches extended over the roadway, and approaching a small wooden bridge, when in the darkness at the corner of the Christie porch there came the blast of a shotgun, a spurt of flame and a shower of shot that rattled against the side of the car. Almost immediately there was another report and flash and another shower of shot. Some of the shot from each discharge struck Wike and a few struck Scott. At that distance the shot scattered and the wounds inflicted would ordinarily not have been fatal, as they were not in the case of Wike, who was hit by the greater number; but at the sound of the first discharge Scott looked backward and one of the pellets of lead struck him in the corner of the eye and penetrated his brain, inflicting a fatal wound.

Wike, involuntarily stopped the car, but a moment later two more shots were fired and he quickly started again and sped toward the center of town. Scott had collapsed beside him and did not regain consciousness and died shortly afterward. Wike, although many shot had entered his body, soon recovered.

Officers late that night came to Seymour Christie's door to see if he could throw any light on the shooting that had occurred almost in front of his house. Yes, he had heard the shots, and he had gone to the door and had seen the car being driven rapidly away, but he had seen nobody who might have fired the shots. They thanked him and went away.

NEXT morning, with a dead man and a wounded man to account for, the officers made a more thorough investigation. Looking over the ground they found four cartridge shells at the north end of the porch of Christie's house. L. F. Wheelis, living next door, told of having heard the shots, which seemed to have been fired from near Christie's porch, and of going out to see what the shooting was about and of seeing Seymour Christie going into the house and closing the door behind him. It was Christie; there was no doubt about that. Wheelis had seen him plainly in the lamplight that streamed from the open door.

The officers were reluctant to entertain suspicion against a man like Seymour Christie, who had never been in any trouble and was not the sort of a man who would be likely to get into that kind of trouble, but the cartridge shells and the statement of Wheelis called for certain other definite inquiries. Did Christie have a gun? Yes. And he brought it from its corner in the room occupied by his daughter and son-in-law, back of the living room. The officers "broke" it and tried the shells. They fitted. Of course, there were other shotguns of that make and caliber that the shells would fit, but it was queer that the shells, which fitted Christie's gun, had been found at the end of Christie's porch. Queer, too, that Christie had entered his front door right after the shooting.

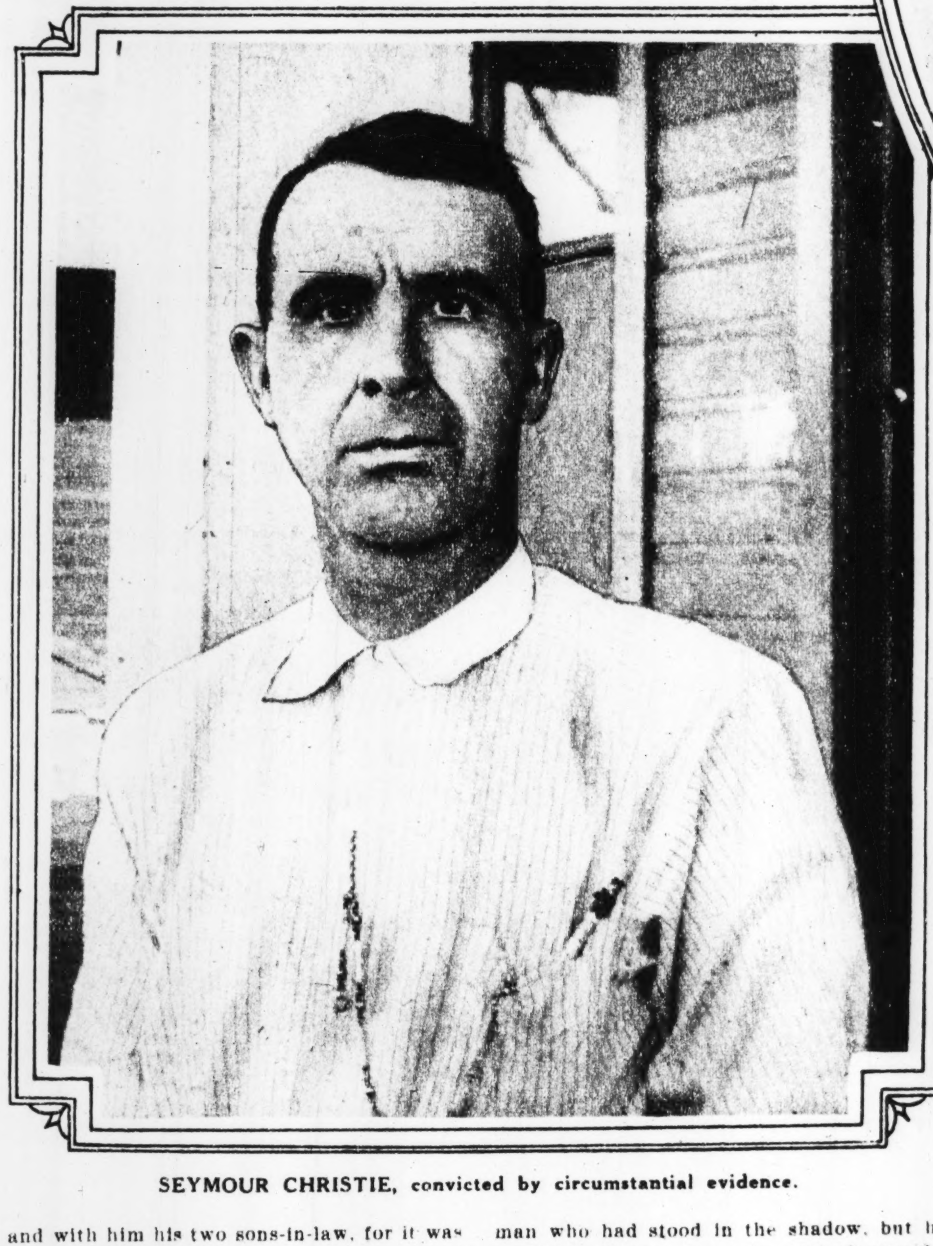
They questioned him about the gun. It had been standing there in the back room a long time. He didn't remember when it had last been used. His daughter and son-in-law were in that room last night. The door between the living room, where he had been sitting when he heard the shots, and the bedroom was not locked, he presumed, but he had not entered the room and had not touched the gun. Surely they didn't think——

No, they didn't want to think it, but it looked bad for Seymour Christie. It looked worse when firing tests were made and it was found that the hammer of Christie's gun made the same slightly peculiar indentation on the primers of the shells as appeared on the discharged shells that had been found.

So, although no motive could be conjectured, Christie was arrested, and, on the assumption that if he was guilty members of his family knew more than they were willing to tell, indictments were procured against Christie, his wife, and his two daughters and sons-in-law, Tom Atkins and Shirey Farmer.

There was nothing against Christie except the circumstantial proof, but this pointed so strongly to him as the man who had fired the shots that he was indicted for murder, and with him his two sons-in-law, for it was believed that, whatever the motive, they had planned with him the killing and probably were present when the shots were fired. It might well be that the women had only a certain guilty knowledge of what was going on, so they were merely indicted for assault to kill. The women were released on bond, but the men were held without bond and for six months they were in jail, Christie at Jonesboro, Farmer at Newport and Atkins here at Walnut Ridge.

When the case was first called for trial, a continuance was asked by Prosecuting Attorney Williamson on account of the absence of a material witness, and it was granted, and for that reason Judge Coleman allowed bail for the men and they were released.



SEYMOUR CHRISTIE, convicted by circumstantial evidence.

WHEN, at last, both sides were ready for trial, there was a severance and Seymour Christie, against whom rested the perfect circumstantial case, was tried alone. The State's proof was simple but damningly direct. Keith Wike told how he drove past the Christie home and how he and the others had been startled by the blast of a shotgun and the shower of shot, followed almost immediately by another blast and another shower of shot. Involuntarily he had stopped the car and looked back. He had seen the figure of a man in the shadow of the Christie house. Then there had been two more shots and he had driven rapidly away. No, he could not identify the man who had stood in the shadow.

Neither could Wheelis identify the man who had stood in the shadow, but he could identify the man who, just afterwards, went into the Christie house and shut the door, and that man was Seymour Christie.

And there was Christie's shotgun, State's exhibit A, and the four empty shells, exhibits B, C, D and E, and the gun and shells were shown to the jury and the gun was "broken" before them and the shells inserted and the peculiar indentations on the primers were called to their attention, and other shells, which had been used in tests, were introduced, and shown to the jurors. It was about as certain as anything could be that the shots that took Tom Scott's life were fired from Seymour Christie's gun.

AGAINST such a circumstantial case the simple statement of Christie, including a straightforward admission that he had entered the house and closed the door, as told by Wheelis, had little weight.

In the absence of a tangible motive, it was suggested that it might have been a case of mistaken identity. Perhaps there was some other man against whom such a grudge might have been held as would have occasioned a family conspiracy to kill and the firing of the shots which did kill, but killed the wrong man.

Probably the jury took that view of it, with the mitigation that it carried. Christie was found guilty of second-degree murder and his punishment was fixed at 10 years in prison.

Tom Atkins, out on bond, awaiting trial, sat in the crowded courtroom and heard the jury's verdict read. His face hardened. "That old man ain't going to prison," he said. Persons sitting near him heard him and looked at him curiously, wondering what he meant.

TOM ATKINS ? ? ?

The lawyers for the defense, H. L. Ponder and W. P. Smith, filed the usual motion for a new trial, and when court sat the next day they were there to argue the motion. Tom Atkins' strange remark in court at the time of the conviction had been talked about and an expectation had grown, stimulated by the predictions of wiseacres, who wagged their heads and professed mysterious foreknowledge that something was going to happen, so the courtroom was again filled.

Tom Atkins was there, sitting back among the spectators, the stamp of seriousness on his face. The lawyers had set out in their motion that they had newly discovered evidence to produce. Maybe Tom would take the stand and tell something that had not been told. The lawyers were droning through the preliminaries.

Tom Atkins arose in his place. "Your Honor," he said, "I have something to say. May I speak?"

Judge Coleman asked him what it was that he wanted to speak about. Atkins said it was about the case against Seymour Christie.

"You may speak," said Judge Coleman.

Tom Atkins stepped briskly forward to the rail and stopped and brought his heels together and stood there very straight, as a soldier stands when his commander's eye is upon him. There was a tense stillness in the courtroom.

"I shot and killed Tom Scott," he said. "Seymour Christie is innocent."

HE PAUSED an instant for the stir caused by his words to subside, and then went on:

"It was a case of mistaken identity. I fired to frighten another man. Whatever guilt there is belongs to me. I tell this that an innocent man, who has been good to me, may not suffer in my stead."

There was a man who had been annoying Tom Atkins' wife with unwelcome attentions and she had told her husband about it and he had spoken to the man and warned him.

That night he was on his way home and this man had come along in his car and had almost run him down and had sped away with a backward-thrown taunt. It enraged him and his rage grew when he reached home and saw this man's car, as he supposed it to be, passing and repassing, with quite unnecessary honking of horn.

He slipped into the house and closed the door between his bedroom and the family living room and caught up Christie's shotgun and loaded it, dropping additional shells into his pocket, and stepped out through the bedroom window to the lawn.

A car had just passed, going toward the cotton compress, and down at the corner there had been a great horn honking, and now a machine was coming from that direction. He inferred that it was the car that had nearly run him down and that the driver had turned at the compress and was coming back to continue his taunts.

He waited until the car was partially past and then he fired both barrels, thinking to frighten the man and cause him to cease his annoyance. The car stopped and Atkins, conjecturing that the occupants might be coming back, reloaded the shotgun and fired two more shots, these into the ground. The car then started and disappeared up the street.

Atkins tossed the empty shells aside and returned to the house, climbing again through the window, and restored the weapon to its place and went to bed. The next morning he learned that he had killed Scott and wounded Wike.

If his victim had been the man who had annoyed his wife, he said, he would have admitted at once that he fired the shots, relying upon the provocation for justification, but the slaying of a man who had committed no offense, even though unintended, was a complication that filled him with panic and he feared to tell the truth about it. He would have continued to hold his peace if his father-in-law had not been convicted, but he could not stand by and see another man suffer for his mistake, and, if the Court pleased, he would like to enter a plea of guilty and take whatever punishment the Judge, in his mercy, might mete. It might even be that the Judge could see his way clear to take into account that the suppliant had been a soldier, serving in the Argonne and on the St. Mihiel fronts, blinded eight weeks by gas.

Judge Coleman was kind. He talked earnestly to the young man, commending his action, regretting that thereby it became his duty to inflict punishment for the mischance that had cost another innocent man his life.

Atkins' plea was formally entered, and Judge Coleman fixed his punishment at five years in prison and the next day Atkins was taken away to the prison farm at Tucker to begin his sentence.

Christie was granted a rehearing and the indictment against him was then nolle-prossed and he went forth free. All the other pending cases, against Atkins and Farmer and the women, were dismissed.

So now is known the ordeal through which Tom Atkins passed while his father-in-law and brother-in-law were lying in jail, awaiting trial for a crime they had not committed, and his wife and sister-in-law and mother-in-law were under bond to answer for the same offense. Often, he says, when he thought of Christie in jail, he wanted to tell the truth, but always he decided that it was best to wait. Perhaps Christie would be acquitted and the other cases would then certainly be dismissed, and he would not have to tell that he had mistaken Tom Scott for another man and killed him.

His mind was made up, though, that if Christie were convicted he would confess the thing that he had carried unshared. Until then it would be his own secret, withheld even from his wife. If fate was kind and Christie came clear he would keep his secret to the end, and nobody would ever know who killed Tom Scott.

So, when Tom Atkins stood up in court and claimed the guilt that had been imputed to Seymour Christie, his announcement was as complete a surprise to his wife and her father and the others as it was to the public.

NOW that the sky is clear again, Seymour Christie, under the shadow of accusation for 17 months and facing prison for a day, goes about his work, happy in his release, holding no score against Tom Atkins for all the suffering and anxiety of the 17 months, conceding that the boy did what he thought was best.

The young wife of Atkins, sheltered in her father's home, is sad over the separation but glad that her husband has cleared her father. She will be waiting for Tom when he comes back.

Noted Author and Historian.

BEFORE we go on to tell of the Turks and the Crusaders, the great wars that began between Christendom and Islam, and which have left a quite insane intolerance between these great systems right down to the present time, it is necessary to give a little more attention to the intellectual life of the Arabic-speaking world which was now spreading more and more widely over the regions which Hellenism had once dominated.

For some generations before Muhammad, the Arab mind had been, as it were, smouldering, it had been producing poetry and much religious discussion; under the stimulus of the national and racial successes it presently blazed out with a brilliance second only to that of the Greeks during their best period. It revived the human pursuit of science. If the Greek was the father, then the Arab was the foster-father of the scientific method. Through the Arabs it was and not by the Latin route that the modern world received that gift of light and power.

But when we write Arab here, we must write it with a certain reservation. The Arabic culture of Islam has something of the same relation to the original Arab as the Hellenic culture after the days of Alexander had to the original European Greek. It was no longer racially pure. It had incorporated with it a group of pre-existing cultures, the Persian of the Arsacid dynasty, and the Coptic of Hellenized Egypt. Persia and Egypt learnt to talk Arabic with great promptitude, but they remained in quality Persia and Egypt.

The early conquests of the Arabs had brought the Arabic culture into close contact with the Greek literary tradition, not, it is true, in the original Greek, but through the Syrian translations of the Greek writers. The Nestorian Christians, the Christians to the east of orthodoxy, seem to have been much more intelligent and active-minded than the court theologians of Byzantium, and at a much higher level of general education than the Latin-speaking Christians of the west.

THEY had been tolerated in the latter days of the Sassanids, and they were tolerated by Islam until the ascendancy of the Turks in the eleventh century. They were the intellectual backbone of the Persian world. They had preserved much of the Hellenic medical science, and had even added to it. In the Omayyad times most of the physicians in the Caliph's dominion were Nestorians, and no doubt many learned Nestorians professed Islam without any serious compunction or any great change in their work and thoughts.

They had preserved much of Aristotle both in Greek and in Syrian translations. They had a considerable mathematical literature. Their equipment makes the contemporary resources of Saint Benedict or Cassiodorus seem very pitiful. To these Nestorian teachers came the fresh Arab mind out of the desert, keen and curious, and learned much and improved upon its teaching. It learned much and acquired much. Persia had been for many centuries a country of intense and subtle theological and speculative activity. These activities now clothed themselves in Arabic phrases and became a process of heresy and schism in the Moslem church. The Shute schism was essentially Persian.

But the Persians with the Hellenic learning were not the only teachers available for the Arabs. Throughout all the rich cities of the East the kindred Jews were scattered with their own distinctive literature and tradition, and the Arab and the Jewish mind reacted upon one another to a common benefit. The Arab was informed and the Jew sharpened to a keener edge.

The Jews have never been pedants in the matter of their language; we have already noted that a thousand years before Islam they spoke Greek in Hellenized Alexandria, and now all over this new Moslem world they were speaking and writing Arabic. Some of the greatest of Jewish literature was written in Arabic, the religious writings of Maimonides, for example. Indeed, it is difficult to say in the case of this Arabic culture where the Jew ends and the Arab begins, so important and essential were its Jewish factors.

Moreover, there was a third source of inspiration, more particularly in mathematical science, to which at present it is difficult to do justice—India. There can be little doubt that the Arab mind during its period of splendor was in close and effective contact with Sanskrit literature and with Indo-Persian physical science.

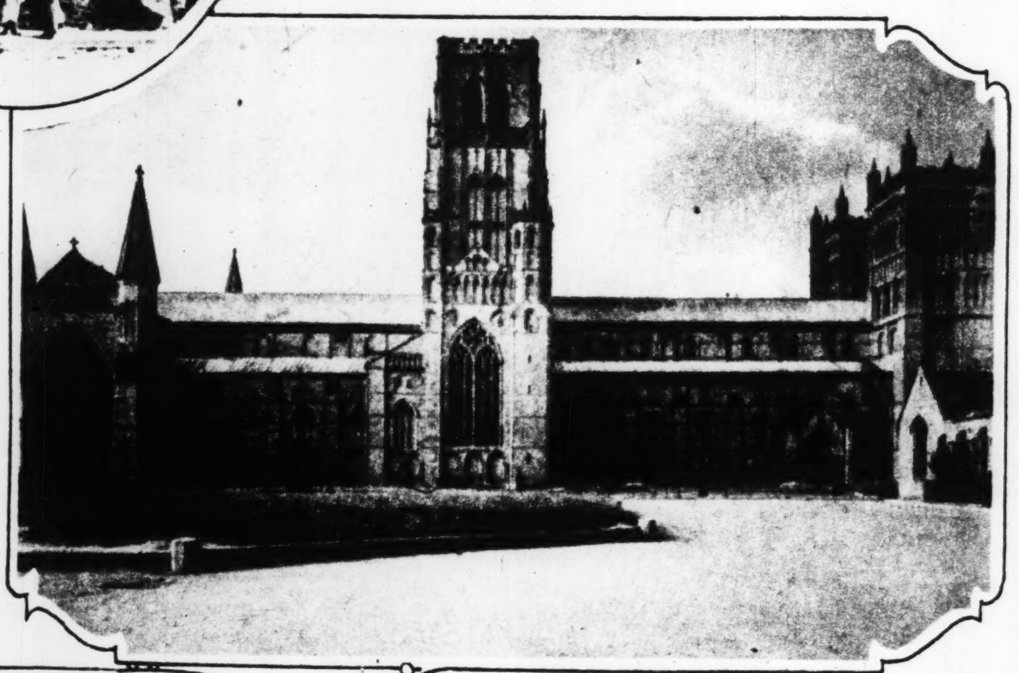
THE distinctive activities of the Arab mind were already manifest under the Omayyads, though it was during the Abbassid time that it made its best display. History is the beginning and core of all sound philosophy and all great literature, and the first Arab writers of distinction were historians, biographers and quasi-historical poets. Romantic fiction and the short story followed as a reading public developed, willing to be amused.

And as reading ceased to be a special accomplishment, and became necessary to every man of affairs and to every youth of breeding, came the systematic growth of an educational system and an educational literature. By the ninth and tenth centuries there are not only grammars but great lexicons, and a mass of philological learning in Islam.

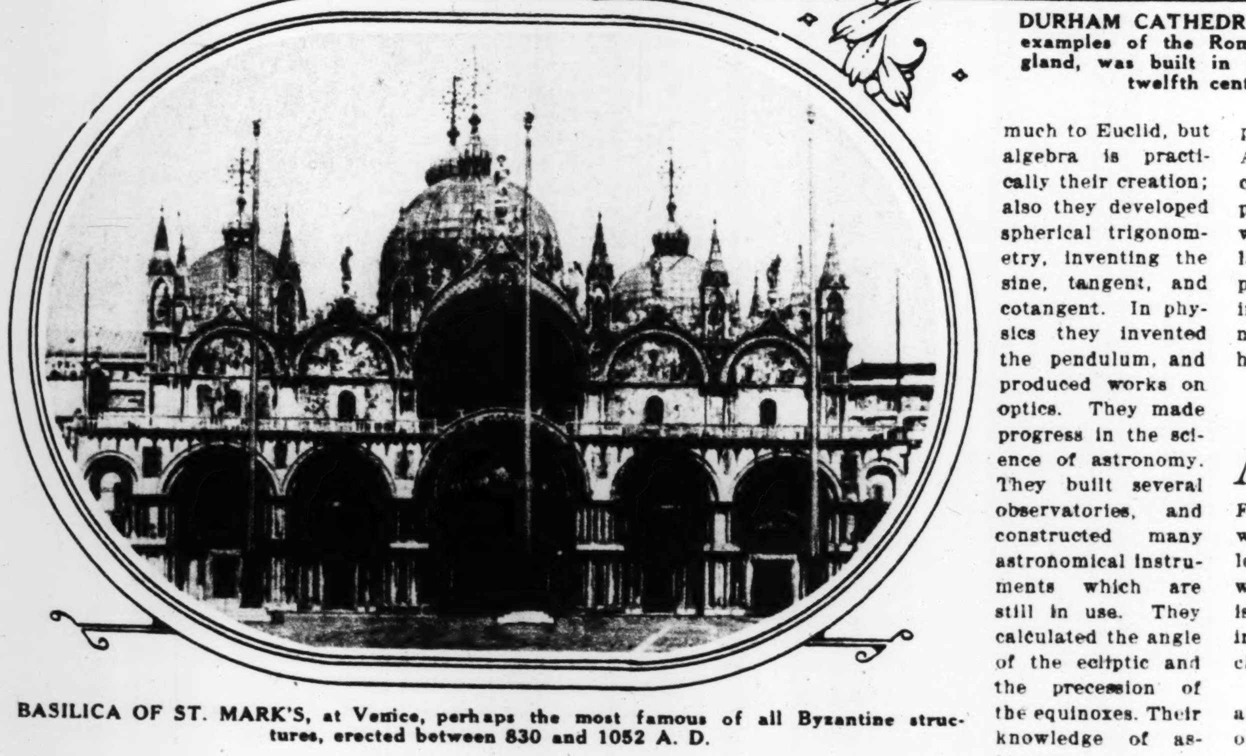
And a century or so in advance of the West, there grew up in the Moslem world at a number of centers at Basra, at Kufa, at Bagdad and Cairo, and at Cordoba, out of what were at first religious schools, religious schools dependent upon mosques, a series of great universities. The light of these universities shone far beyond the Moslem world, and drew students to them from east and west. At Cordoba in particular there were great numbers of Christian students, and the influence of Arab philosophy coming by way of Spain upon the universities of Paris, Oxford and North Italy, and upon Western European thought generally, was very considerable indeed.

The name of Averroes (Ibnrusbd) of Cordoba (1126-1198) stands out as that of the culminating influence of Arab philosophy upon European thought. He developed the teachings of Aristotle upon lines that made a sharp division between religious and scientific truth, and so prepared the way for the liberation of scientific research from the theological dogmatism that restrained it both under Christianity and under Islam. Another great name is that of Avicenna (Ibnsina), the Prince of Physicians (980-1037), who was born at the other end of the Arabic world at Bokhara, and who traveled in Khorasan. . . .

The book-copying industry flourished at Alexandria, Damascus, Cairo, and Bagdad, and about the year 970 there were twenty-seven free schools open in Cordoba for the education of the poor.



DURHAM CATHEDRAL, one of the finest examples of the Romanesque style in England, was built in the first half of the twelfth century, A. D.



BASILICA OF ST. MARK'S, at Venice, perhaps the most famous of all Byzantine structures, erected between 830 and 1052 A. D.

"In mathematics," say Thatcher and Schwill (in A General History of Europe), "the Arabs built on the foundations of the Greek mathematicians. The origin of the so-called Arabic numerals is obscure. Under Theodoric the Great, Boethius made use of certain signs which were in part very like the nine digits which we now use." One of the pupils of Gerbert also used signs which were still more like ours, but the zero, it is stated, was unknown till the twelfth century, when it was invented by an Arab mathematician named Muhammad-Ibn-Musa, who also was the first to use the decimal notation, and who gave the digits the value of position. This, however, is disputed by many Indians, who claim the zero and the decimal system as a distinctly Indian contribution.

"In geometry the Arabs did not add much to Euclid, but algebra is practically their creation; also they developed spherical trigonometry, inventing the sine, tangent, and cotangent. In physics they invented the pendulum, and produced works on optics. They made progress in the science of astronomy. They built several observatories, and constructed many astronomical instruments which are still in use. They calculated the angle of the ecliptic and the precession of the equinoxes. Their knowledge of astronomy was undoubtedly considerable.

"In medicine they made great advances over the work of the Greeks. They studied physiology and hygiene, and their materia medica was practically the same as ours today. Many of their methods of treatment are still in use among us. Their surgeons understood the use of anaesthetics, and performed some of the most difficult operations known. At the time when in Europe the practice of medicine was forbidden by the Church, which expected cures to be effected by religious rites performed by the clergy, the Arabs had a real science of medicine.

"In chemistry they made a good beginning. They discovered many new substances, such as potash, nitrate of silver, corrosive sublimate, and nitric and sulphuric acid."

The word "alcohol" is Arabic, though the substance was known under the name of "spirits of wine" to Pliny (A. D. 100).

"IN MANUFACTURES they outdid the world in variety and beauty of design and perfection of workmanship. They worked in all the metals—gold, silver, copper, bronze, iron and steel. In textile fabrics they have never been surpassed. They made glass and pottery of the finest quality. They knew the secrets of dyeing, and they manufactured paper. They had many processes of dressing leather, and their work was famous throughout Europe. They made tinctures, essences and syrups. They made sugar from the cane, and grew many fine kinds of wine. They practiced farming in a scientific way, and had good systems of irrigation. They knew the value of fertilizers, and adapted their crops to the quality of the ground. They excelled in horticulture, knowing how to graft and how to produce new varieties of fruit and flowers. They introduced into the West many trees and plants from the East, and wrote scientific treatises on farming."

One item in this account must be underlined here because of its importance in the intellectual life of mankind, the manufacture of paper. This the Arabs seem to have learned from the Chinese by way of Central Asia. The Europeans acquired it from the Arabs. Until that time books had to be written upon parchment or papyrus, and after the Arab conquest of Egypt, Europe was cut off from the papyrus supply. Until paper became abundant, the art of printing was of little use, and newspapers and popular education by means of books was impossible. This was probably a much more important factor in the relative backwardness of Europe during the dark ages than historians seem disposed to admit. . . .

II.

ALL this mental life went on in the Moslem world in spite of a very considerable amount of political disorder. From first to last the Arabs never grappled with the problem, the still unsolved problem, of the stable progressive state; everywhere their form of government was absolutist and subject to the convulsions, changes, intrigues and murders that have always characterized extremer forms of monarchy.

But for some centuries, beneath the crimes and rivalries of courts and camps, the spirit of Islam did preserve a certain general decency and restraint in life; the Byzantine Empire was impotent to shatter this civilization, and the Turkish danger in the northeast gathered strength only very slowly. Until the Turk fell upon it the intellectual life of Islam continued. Perhaps it secretly flattered itself that it would always be able to go on in spite of the thread of violence and unreason in its political direction. Hitherto in all countries that has been the characteristic attitude of science and literature. The intellectual man has been loath to come to grips with the forceable man. He has generally been something of a courtier and time server. Possibly he has never yet been quite sure of himself.

The Moslem conquests are associated with new types of architecture, called variously Saracenic, Mohammedan and Arabic. But the true Arab, says Gayet, was never an artist. He built because he had to build, mosques, palaces, tombs, cities, but he found his workmen and architects among the Egyptians, Syrians and Persians he had conquered. Arabic art in Persia was a mere continuation of Persian art, but in Egypt and Syria there was a real adaptation to new conditions and a new type and character of building and decoration appeared. This was "Arab" art, strictly speaking.

TO THE west in North Africa and Spain was developed a special variation characterized by the horseshoe arch. Syria and Egypt long before the coming of the Arabs had divorced from Byzantine forms by replacing the round arch by the pointed arch, and had gone far beyond Byzantine art in the disuse of modeled forms. For Hellenic realism they were substituting patterning, and the Arab temperament, contemplative and ecstatic, was all for enhancing this process. "Not to obey a religious precept," says Gayet—for there are many early Arab representative paintings—"but through an instinct."

In the common matters of life and apart from any culture the Arab displays an extreme disinclination to strip his body or look upon a body. Gradually in the evolution of Arab art the decoration passes from conventionalized animal and vegetable forms to geometrical interlacings, "arabesques."

Roofs and vaults become more and more deeply encrusted, pierced screens multiply, and even the outward form becomes polyhedral. The vaults are covered with circular and polygonal studs which descend at last like stalactites.

A new mysterious beauty is produced by these suppressions and sublimations, like the beauty of crystals and ripples and the subtle and obscure rhythms of inanimate things, a beauty diametrically opposed to the unrestricted freedoms, the glorious vulgarities, the vitality, of Hellenic art.

Associated in our minds with these structural developments as characteristically Arabic are the minaret and the bulbous cupola, and a brilliant use of glazed and often richly ornamented tiles. An enormous use is made in decoration of the texts and phrases from the Koran in the beautiful sweeping Arabic writing.

While in the East under Christian influence, the floridly balanced and stereotyped architecture of the Roman Empire, the architecture of Palmyra and Baalbek, was being modified rapidly and profoundly into the stiff unfleshly richness of the Byzantine style, in the West it was undergoing similar but not exactly parallel developments.

THE name "Romanesque" has been spread over a great variety of buildings which show a common quality because they derived from the Roman tradition, attenuated and restrained by the general impoverishment of the world, but which everywhere testify also to new racial influences and new social necessities. There were no more amphitheaters, no great aqueducts, no triumphal arches, no temples to the Gods. There were fortresses and castles, round or square and massive, churches and towers.

The tower now for the first time becomes important in Europe. Architecture ascends. Hitherto we have had to note towers only in Mesopotamia. Buildings in the Egyptian and Hellenic and Roman world did not attempt to scale the heavens. In Roman and Hellenic fortifications and in the great wall of China there are towers, parts of the defenses, but that is almost all there is to tell of until the Christian era. Then in a world raided by Huns, Arabs, sea pirates of all sorts—we shall tell of the Northmen, Saracens and Hungarians in another section—the tower becomes a necessity. The church for the new congregational religion is another, and the two come naturally together.

WE DIDN'T take it out anywhere until it was a month old! We didn't tell anybody of its existence! We didn't want anybody to know that he was raising it until it was old enough to do him credit. Artie's mustache, I mean.

Artie, like other men, has taken to mustache raising this spring, just as women do to planting gardens and window boxes. And mustache raising is just like gardening. No matter how much they prune and fertilize and worry over the things, there's no way of being sure just what may come up.

The first intimation I had that Artie was raising a mustache was when I asked him to go to the Symphony concert with me. He blushed, passed his finger guiltily over his upper lip and sighed: "I can't go; I'm raising a mustache."

"What does that have to do with it?" inquired of him. "Won't your mustache grow to music or do you have to take it of to a quiet place?"

"Do you realize that by Friday night won't be fit to be seen?" he asked indig nantly. "A five-day-old mustache is more fit to be taken to the Symphony tha a five-day-old baby is!"

And he flatly refused to shave the be ginnings of the silly little thing off, thoug I felt sure he would have sacrificed it to musical comedy or vaudeville.

"It would be better anyway to kill it be fore it's had time to grow up into an ug deformed irresponsible thing," I suggeste

But as it happened he didn't look so ve bad the night of the Symphony; only a litt moth-eaten, and so we went and sat in back seat, which meant, of course, that m new evening coat was wasted.

The Beethoven number was lovely! Ev Artie seemed to be impressed. He w strangely quiet and sat gazing upward w a rapt expression in his eyes and his ha held emotionally over his mouth.

"IT'S beautiful, Artie, beautiful!" whispered.

"Yea," he answered dreamily, " I don't think it's long enough."

"What!" I exclaimed—for I really w amazed. Artie always fidgets before a really worth-while musical selection is ov

And then I saw that he was running finger tenderly over his upper lip!

That trick became a habit with him the days that followed, but when I saw h much it meant to him I, too, became vita interested in watching to see what the l sprout on his lip would grow up into.

"It's fascinating, Artie," I told him. " you think you'll look like a Spanish Don a Russian Count? Of course, just now, look sort of like an Airedale, but I'm s it'll change as it grows older."

"Don't worry about that," he said gr ly. "Wait until I get it shaped. Afte week or two it'll take on form."

By the end of the first week, thoug was beginning to be a little discoura about the outcome. The thing under Ar nose looked like a worn-out toothbrush. I remained loyal to him, introducing everywhere as my husband, and trying keep fresh in my mind the memory of way he looked before he caught the m tache mania.

He went about with a sort of abstrac pression on his face, as though he had so thing on his mind instead of on his lip. the habit of running his finger over tender new growth grew on him so th was afraid I was going to have to tie fingers up as they do babies' thumbs.

By Carol Brown

WE DIDN'T take it out anywhere until it was a month old! We didn't tell anybody of its existence! We didn't want anybody to know that he was raising it until it was old enough to do him credit. Artie's mustache, I mean.

Artie, like other men, has taken to mustache raising this spring, just as women do to planting gardens and window boxes. And mustache raising is just like gardening. No matter how much they prune and fertilize and worry over the things, there's no way of being sure just what may come up.

The first intimation I had that Artie was raising a mustache was when I asked him to go to the Symphony concert with me. He blushed, passed his finger guiltily over his upper lip and sighed: "I can't go; I'm raising a mustache."

"What does that have to do with it?" I inquired of him. "Won't your mustache grow to music or do you have to take it off to a quiet place?"

"Do you realize that by Friday night I won't be fit to be seen?" he asked indignantly. "A five-day-old mustache is no more fit to be taken to the Symphony than a five-day-old baby is!"

And he flatly refused to shave the beginnings of the silly little thing off, though I felt sure he would have sacrificed it to a musical comedy or vaudeville.

"It would be better anyway to kill it before it's had time to grow up into an ugly deformed irresponsible thing," I suggested.

But as it happened he didn't look so very bad the night of the Symphony; only a little moth-eaten, and so we went and sat in a back seat, which meant, of course, that my new evening coat was wasted.

The Beethoven number was lovely! Even Artie seemed to be impressed. He was strangely quiet and sat gazing upward with a rapt expression in his eyes and his hand held emotionally over his mouth.

"IT'S beautiful, Artie, beautiful!" I whispered.

"Yea," he answered dreamily, "but I don't think it's long enough."

"What!" I exclaimed—for I really was amazed. Artie always fidgets before any really worth-while musical selection is over.

And then I saw that he was running his finger tenderly over his upper lip!

That trick became a habit with him in the days that followed, but when I saw how much it meant to him I, too, became vitally interested in watching to see what the little sprout on his lip would grew up into.

"It's fascinating, Artie," I told him. "Do you think you'll look like a Spanish Don or a Russian Count? Of course, just now, you look sort of like an Airedale, but I'm sure it'll change as it grows older."

"Don't worry about that," he said grandly. "Wait until I get it shaped. After a week or two it'll take on form."

By the end of the first week, though, I was beginning to be a little discouraged about the outcome. The thing under Artie's nose looked like a worn-out toothbrush. But I remained loyal to him, introducing him everywhere as my husband, and trying to keep fresh in my mind the memory of the way he looked before he caught the mustache mania.

He went about with a sort of abstract expression on his face, as though he had something on his mind instead of on his lip, and the habit of running his finger over the tender new growth grew on him so that I was afraid I was going to have to tie his fingers up as they do babies' thumbs.

He became bashful and self-conscious and I learned more about the back alleys and side streets than I had known in all my life before, for he simply wouldn't take his mustache on any of the principal thoroughfares. And when we went out to the Grand Splurch Hotel for Sunday night dinner we had to sit behind a screen of palms—though Artie took care to be near a looking-glass.

That's one of the symptoms of the mustache mania. A man wants to be near a mirror constantly, though he's never as frank about it as a woman is. Now, I take my mirror out openly and without shame wherever I happen to be. But Artie! Why, even when we passed a mirror in a drug store window near the apartment he would look at the public library across the street, and then let his gaze streak past the mirror and on to the hardware on the other side. But as his eyes rested on that glass for a fleeting second I saw a gleam of satisfaction in them.

He almost wore my hand mirror out staring into it! It was one day when he was standing with it in front of the window, counting the hairs above his mouth, that I noticed something new about them.

"Artie!" I exclaimed. "Oh, Artie, it sparkles in the sun. Look, look! I do believe it's blonde!"

That's what I meant when I said you never know when you begin to cultivate a mustache just what's going to come up. Now, Artie's hair is dark, but his mustache is—well, I told him frankly by the end of the second week that it was salmon colored.

"But never mind, dear," I consoled him. "It's a darling shape! It looks like two little commas with their backs to each other! And as for the color, I think that bit of flame on your lip lights up your face and gives variety. My book on decorating says it's better to have a direct contrast than an imperfect match. Now, for instance, it says taupe is good with lacquer red. With your mouse-colored hair and the sand tones of your complexion, that bit of vivid mustache forms a pleasant contrast and lends a note of interest. Now, if your mustache had turned out to be cinnamon brown it would have been tiresome and un-

Once Weekly

By Ring Lardner

ARMED with letters of introduction from what I have dubbed the Big Town, we swept down on Hollywood one March morning and was recd. by most of the screen celebrities with well concealed enthusiasm. At the Famous Players studio we run acrost old acquaintances in the person of Alan Dwan, Charlie Furthmann and Marshall Neilan. The pictures in the making were "The Rainmaker," "Beau Geste," "Naughty Cinderella," and Rex Beach's "Padlocked." This was my first visit to a big studio during the filming of heart gripping romance.

I had read and heard that these giants of the film world could not even begin to start to act unlest a orchestra was playing "Humoresque" or "Barcarolle;" but always thought it was just a gag till I seen it with my own eyes. I asked one budding star if the music really did have any effect on her and she said she couldn't do anything without it. Afterwards I watched her in a scene with full orchestral accompaniment and it seemed to me like she must be almost stone deaf.

The thing that impressed me the most in this and the other big studios was that everybody that is getting more than a beginner's salary, say $6,000.00 per wk., has their own chair to set in with their name painted on it and though the chairs is all exactly alike, no real artist can feel they's a load off his ft. unlest he is setting in his own chair. As picture actors does more setting than anybody except ball players it is no more than natural that they should want and have chairs, but it come to me like a bolt from the blue that a chair with your name on it would be any more settable than a anonymous chair.

MY FIRST act when I get back home will be to have my name in full on the chair I generally always set in and if I catch one of the kiddies setting in that chair I will have one of the hired help give him a kind of a hint that he is de trop. I gleaned that this is proper procedure from a episode that took place wile we was watching Buster Collier and Georgia Hale do a love scene in "The Rainmaker." The young lady with me was setting in a chair inscribed with the name of Ernest Torrence, who was also playing in the picture but not in that scene. A polite attendant come over and asked her would she mind changing chairs and he give her Buster Collier's chair so Mr. Torrence wouldn't half to spend his recess in a strange environment.

Buster Collier come to Hollywood three yrs. ago to stay 8 wks. and ain't never been home since though his home is only 3 miles from Great Neck. He is a likable boy and didn't make no squawk when he seen that the young lady with me was setting in his chair. We disgust his old man Willie and we talked about this in that and I happened to mention that Grantland Rice was in our party and he said, "Oh, another of my admirers," which I will modestly half to exclaim that what he meant to say was "Oh, I read his stuff, too."

There was no music at Charlie Chaplin's studio, but the promising young comic made up for it by treating us like our visit had rendered it a perfect day. We set in nameless chairs and watched him make several scenes in his new picture, "The Circus," which comes out next fall and will be a wow from what we seen of it. Wile the different lights and etc. was being got in readiness, Charlie entertained us with imitations of various nuts and finely overwhelmed us with a invitation to dine at his house on the following Saturday night.

So we dined their en famille with Mr. and Mrs. Charlie and the mother-in-law and Harry Crocker, a genial friend of Charlie's who doubles as his secretary and also gives

NOTHING EVER HAPPENS IN TOWN

BY

Edward Hope

Jerry Was Invited to His First Dinner at the Home of Sweet Phyllis, and the Calamities Started While He Was Dressing. He Did Want to Be Punctual.

Even for an Athletic Young Man It Was Almost Too Much—That Combination of Traffic Cops, a Burglar and an Irate Husband.

JERRY TINKER balanced himself skillfully on one glistening foot, slid the other into the appropriate leg of his flawless evening trousers and pulled up. He felt the heel catch, and a sickening sound as of broadcloth ripping smote his ears.

With trembling hands he spread the suspected pantaloons out on the bed and surveyed the damage. It was worse than he had feared. Back of the knee there was a rectangular tear—a hole he could have put his fist through.

Jerry Tinker sank weakly to the bed beside the trousers. He gulped three times in rapid succession. He stated aloud that he would be something he could not possibly have been.

He got up and rolled the trousers into a ball and flung them to the floor with all his might. He yanked the telephone from the table and howled a number at the blandly nasal operator.

The tailor did not answer. Jerry found another in the telephone book and called him, but with the same lack of success. He slapped the receiver back and lighted a cigarette. He paced up and down the room through the clouds of smoke that came from his mouth and nose. He went into the bedroom, untangled the trousers and examined the hole again.

It was just as big as ever. He hurled the garment from him and stalked back to the telephone.

This time he got results.

"Chick," he said in a voice hoarse with emotion, "I've ripped my dress trousers."

"Who is this?" inquired the voice at the other end.

"Jerry. Chick, can you let me have your trousers?"

"What do you mean? Haven't you got two pairs of 'em?" Chick was unsympathetic.

"Dress trousers, Chick. The only decent ones I had. Will you lend me yours?"

"I will not. I've got 'em on."

"Oh, come on. Be a good egg!" Jerry's voice cracked with the strain.

"Where do you get that stuff? Do you suppose I put 'em on for exercise? I'm stepping out."

"But this is important. I'm going to dinner at the Gordons'. I'm getting looked over by the parents. This is the big test. . . . Be a good egg! Let me have 'em. Just for tonight."

"Let you have 'em? Do you think I'd look any better than you at dinner in my undies? I tell you mine are occupied."

"But you can get out of it. This dinner I'm going to is the most important in the world!" Harsh laughter came over the wire.

"Run into the dining-room quick and pull the tablecloth around you. Nobody'll ever notice. Good-by." Chick was gone.

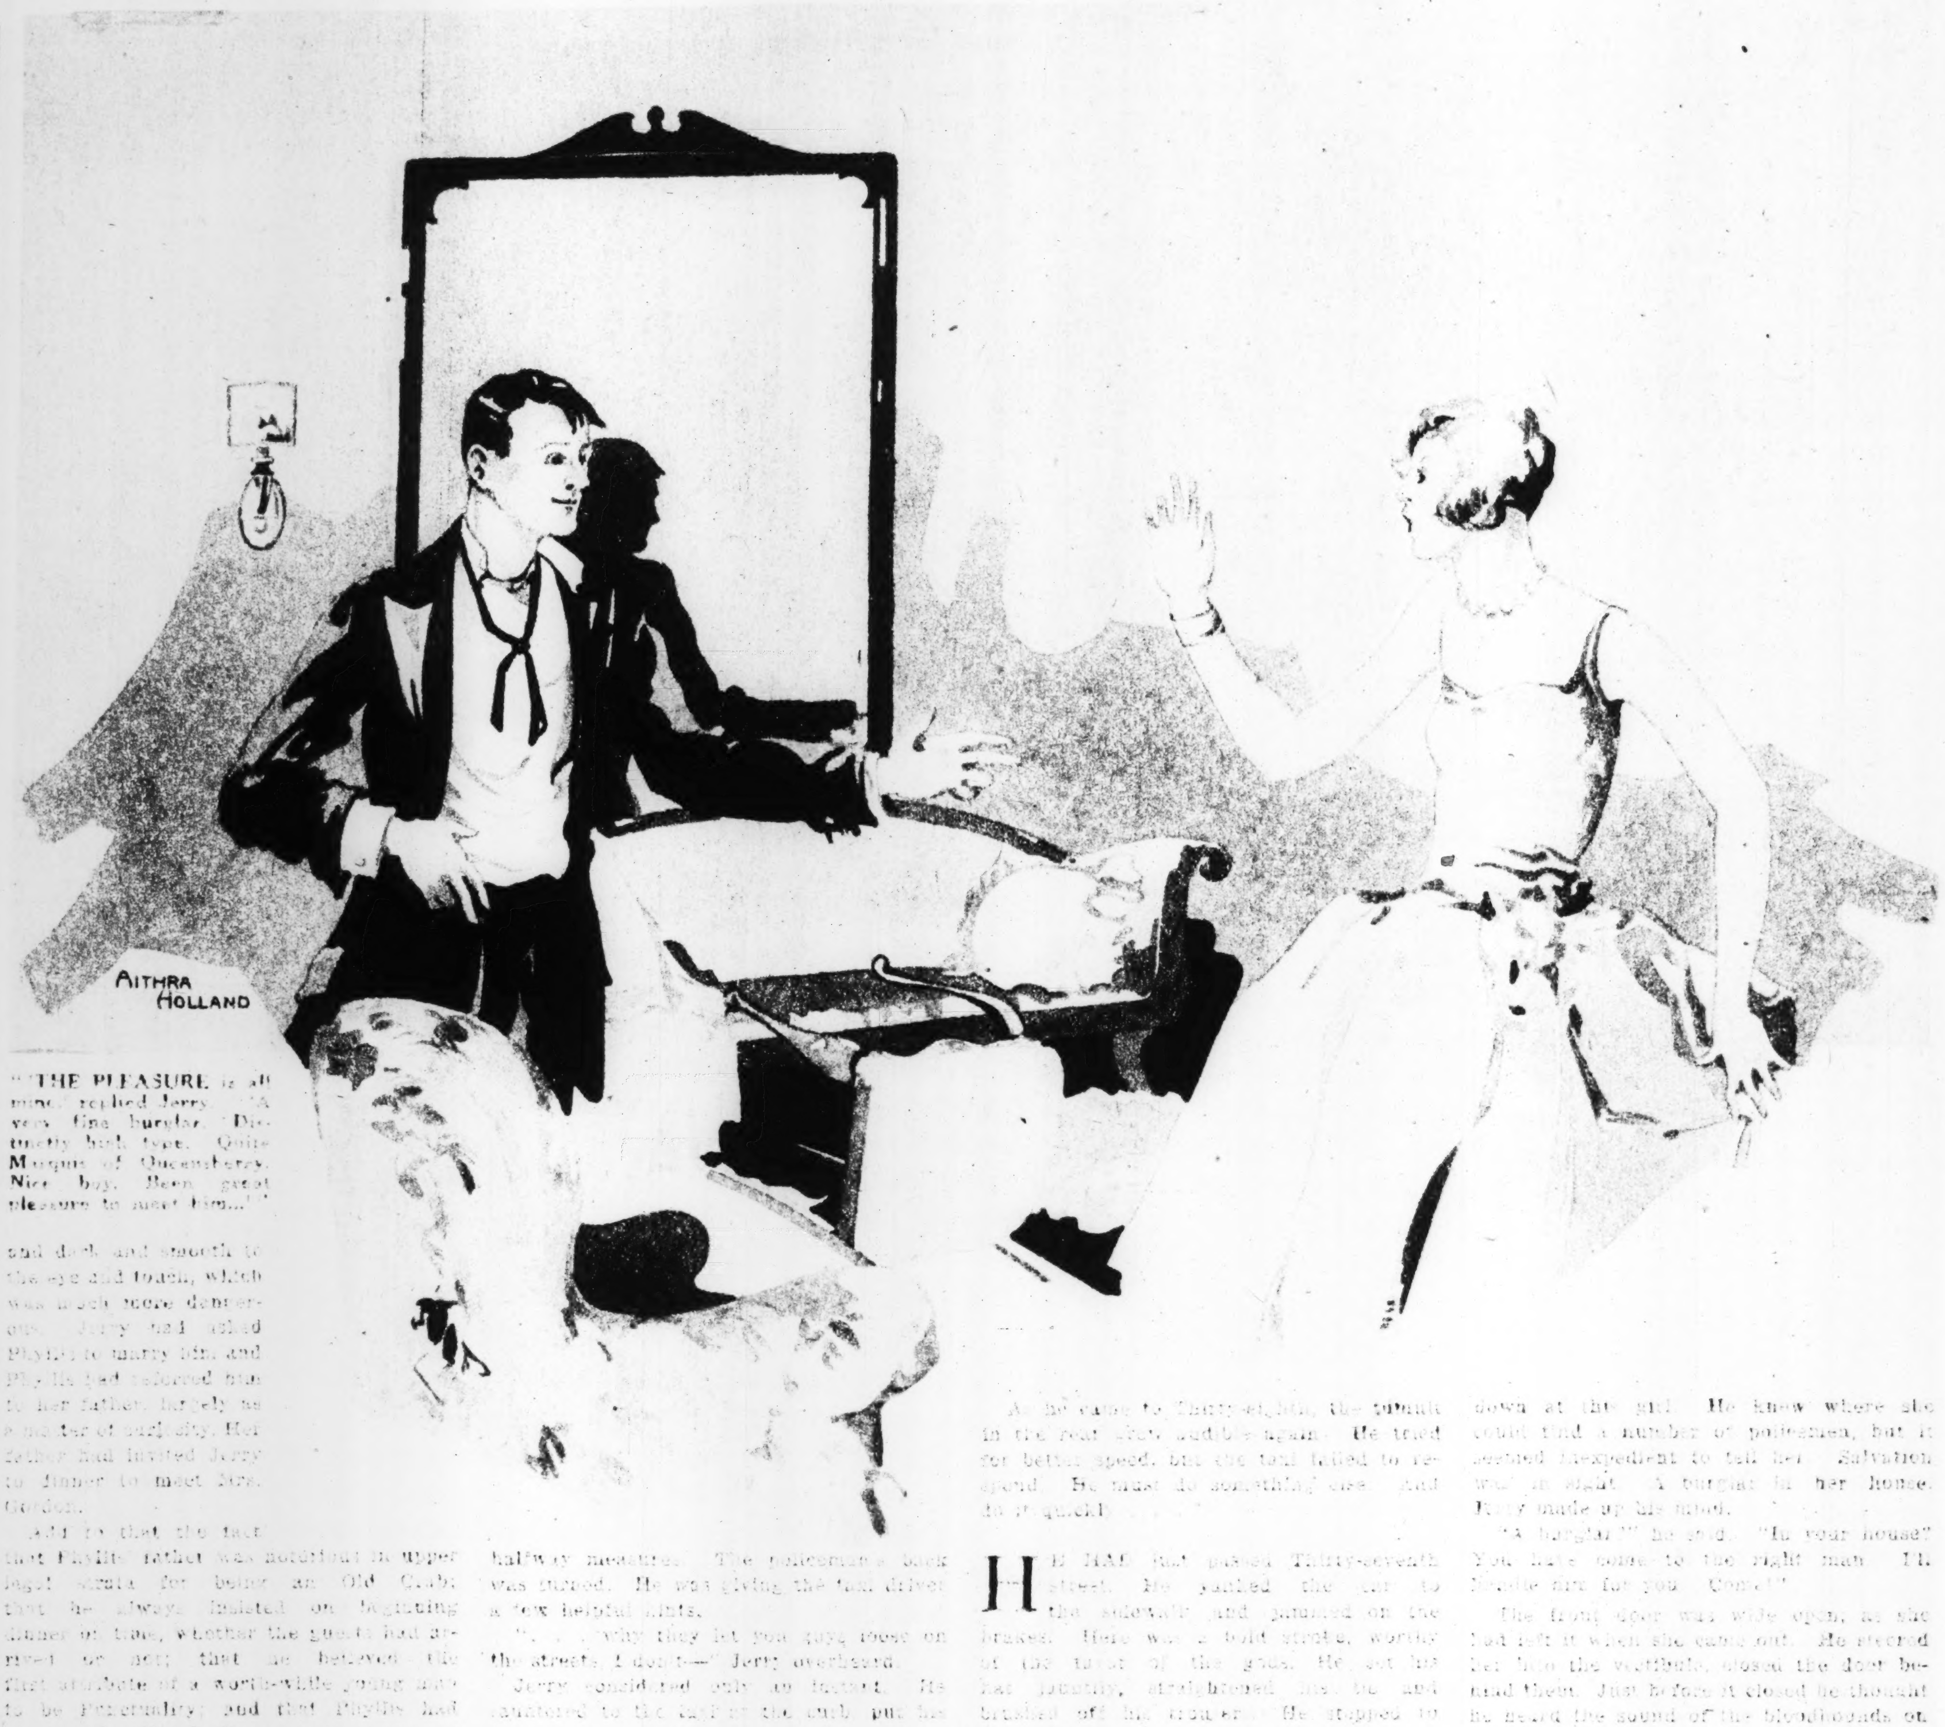
JERRY worked the hook up and down and called another number, then another and another. Bill Blair suggested that Jerry had an exceptionally fine pair of legs and that to wear trousers would be to hide his light under a bushel. Harry Fulton was of the opinion that a man's family-in-law-to-be would be put at ease by a little well-chosen informality. Martin Trask and Vincent Higgins had fanciful remarks for him, but no trousers.

Finally persistence was rewarded. Dud Perry was laid up with a twisted knee and would part with his dress trousers for the evening. Dud Perry was three or four inches shorter than Jerry and considerably bigger about the middle, but this was no time for choosiness. It was 6:59 and dinner was to be at 7:15 in Eleventh street. Jerry would have accepted the trousers of a circus midget.

It took perhaps two minutes to get his street clothes on over his dress shirt. Another two to find a taxi. Seven more to get to the hotel in Forty-fifth street, in which his friend lay hors de combat. It was 7:01 when Jerry Tinker burst into Dud Perry's room and 7:07 when he left wearing Dud Perry's evening clothes—in as much haste as their fit permitted. It was 7:11 when he caught a taxi at the corner of Fifth avenue and got in, urging the driver to go with all possible speed.

Between Forty-fifth street and the Public Library permit me to explain about Jerry's two engagements, one for dinner that June evening and the other to be married at some later time.

Jerry had known Phyllis Gordon through late March, April and May, which in itself was dangerous. Phyllis was small and dark and smooth to the eye and touch, which was much more dangerous. Jerry had asked Phyllis to marry him and Phyllis had referred him to her father, largely as a matter of curiosity. Her father had invited Jerry to dinner to meet Mrs. Gordon.



"THE PLEASURE is all mine," replied Jerry. "A very fine burglar. Distinctly high type. Quite Marquis of Queensberry. Nice boy. Been great pleasure to meet him..."

Add to that the fact that Phyllis' father was notorious in upper legal strata for being an Old Crab; that he always insisted on beginning dinner on time, whether the guests had arrived or not; that he believed the first attribute of a worth-while young man to be Punctuality; and that Phyllis had mentioned all of these facts more or less pointedly to Jerry—and you have all the background you need. Now go on with the story.

As the taxi crossed Forty-second street Jerry observed that the traffic tower clock showed 7:13. He opened the little front window and howled for more speed. He mentioned double fares and enormous tips as bonuses for celerity. He was eloquent in his plea.

AND effective. The driver was so intrigued that he forgot everything but the necessity of covering blocks per minute. The policeman at Forty-first street held up his hand, and Jerry's taxi passed him by without so much as a bow of recognition.

The policeman blew a series of short, sharp notes on his whistle. The taxi driver looked back over his shoulder with terror-stricken eyes. The policeman waved a penal hand toward the curb and moved his lips in fortunately inaudible words.

Jerry Tinker swore fervently. He called the driver every name that came to his tongue and then sat back, grieved at the inadequacy of the language. From mid-avenue the officer surveyed the taxi with utter scorn while the lights changed from red to green and the north-and-south traffic started again. Then he swaggered over in a leisurely fashion and addressed the driver.

"Who told you you could drive a taxi?" he inquired by way of opening the discussion. The taxi man pulled his head in like a turtle and said nothing. "Come on," said the cop. "Let's see your license." The taxi man cringed slowly from his seat to the sidewalk and began fumbling in his pockets.

Jerry Tinker got out and approached the policeman.

"It was my fault, Officer," he began soothingly.

"I didn't ask for no remarks from you," said the policeman.

"But—but—I'm in a terrible hurry"— —

The policeman deigned to turn to him.

"Lay off," he said simply.

He turned back to the driver. "Where's your license?" The taxi man continued to fumble from pocket to pocket. The policeman produced a small tablet of legal forms and began making notes with the stub of a pencil. Jerry pictured the Gordons bending to work on their soup in Eleventh street.

It became 7:21 by Jerry Tinker's watch. The soup plates were being tipped by this time, if the Gordons went in for that sort of thing. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon were undoubtedly directing dirty looks at Phyllis. They would soon be making comments about unpunctuality. This was no time for halfway measures. The policeman's back was turned. He was giving the taxi driver a few helpful hints.

". . . why they let you guys loose on the streets, I don't—" Jerry overheard.

Jerry considered only an instant. He sauntered to the taxi at the curb, put his foot on the running board and leaned in, as if making a casual inspection of the equipment on the dash. He glanced over his shoulder and found the officer still engaged in talk. Very quietly he slipped into the driver's seat.

He stepped on the right things and threw the gear-shift lever the right way. With a jerk and a rush and a roar, the taxi was off, hurtling down the avenue. In three screams and a jump it was at Fortieth street.

And something had to be done. The north-and-south traffic was held up again. The policeman in front of the library had recovered his senses and was blowing his whistle into a howl of outraged authority. His colleague at Fortieth was trying to discover what all the row was about. He was still unable to understand when Jerry's cab turned east into Fortieth street on one front wheel.

At the corner of Park avenue he turned south and sped on by the mysterious mercy of Providence. He groped for a plan of action, but none came. All his mind would tell him was: "You fool! You fool! Why did you do it?"

As he came to Thirty-eighth street the pursuit in the rear was [illegible] again. He tried for better speed, [illegible] He must do something and do it quickly.

HE HAD just passed Thirty-seventh street. He yanked the car to the sidewalk and jammed on the brakes. Here was a bold stroke, worthy of the favor of the gods. He set his hat jauntily, straightened his tie and brushed off his trousers. He stepped to the sidewalk and walked uptown. His gait was that of a young gentleman on his way to dinner in the neighborhood—an athletic young man who scorned the use of motor vehicles. He turned his head and looked back, indicating mild interest in the taxi which had drawn up at the curb so suddenly.

The pursuit was half a block north, coming like the fire department, only more so. Jerry swung left into Thirty-seventh street. His manner was still jaunty, leisurely.

A young woman burst from the front door of a house not fifty feet ahead of him. She reached the middle of the sidewalk, stopped there, wrung her hands. Suddenly she spotted Jerry.

She ran to him. At the risk of seeming rude, he continued to walk, turning his head to her as she plucked at his sleeve and came along beside him.

"Help!" she said faintly. Jerry raised his eyebrows.

"Help?" he asked. She caught his arm in both her hands.

"There is a burglar in my house!" she burst out. "You must help me. I don't know where to find a policeman." Jerry Tinker stopped in his tracks and looked down at the girl. He knew where she could find a number of policemen, but it seemed inexpedient to tell her. Salvation [illegible]. A burglar in her home. Jerry made up his mind.

"A burglar!" he said. "In your house? You have come to the right man. I'll handle him for you. Come!"

The front door was wide open, as she had left it when she came out. He steered her into the vestibule, closed the door behind them. Just before it closed he thought he heard the sound of the bloodhounds on the scent. . . .

"Merely indicate where the burglar is," he said. "Just show me. . . ."

HE CLOSED the blessedly curtained inside door behind him and wilted against it. His voice gave way. He produced a monogrammed silk handkerchief and patted his forehead. He treated himself to several good deep breaths.

The girl was standing against the wall staring at him. Her lips were trembling. Her hands were knotted into little fists with frightened white knuckles. Jerry noted that her hair was blond and curly. He would have preferred it dark, but he admitted it was attractive as it was. Her nose might have been just a shade smaller, he thought, but there, again, he was willing to yield a point. She was pretty . . . She took a step toward him. Her hands opened in suppliance. At last she became articulate.

"The—the—burglar . . ." she suggested. Jerry Tinker jumped. He nearly dropped his hat. He caught his under lip between his thumb and forefinger in an attitude of thought.

"Oh, yes," he said. "The burglar. There is a burglar, isn't there?" The girl came a step closer.

"You—you said that you'd handle him . . ."

"Yes. Yes, so I did. . . . Well, well—burglar." Jerry scratched the back of his neck with one finger. "You—ah—you didn't happen to notice—ah—you didn't notice his size? I mean, that is, is he a large burglar? Say——" Jerry held out a hand about seven feet from the floor. "Say—that high? Or perhaps a little smaller?"

"I didn't see him," she said. "I only heard him. He rattled the silver in my boudoir. . . ." Jerry rubbed his hands.

"I see," he said like a doctor listening to symptoms. "In your boudoir, eh? No place for him. In your boudoir! The devil!" He looked indignant. But the girl was not to be put off.

"Hadn't you better—handle him?" she inquired. Her voice was soft and trusting. Jerry felt taller and better-looking.

"Of course," he said.

"I was thinking he might get away," said the girl.

"So was I," said Jerry. "I mean—that is—it would be rotten to let him get away, wouldn't it? After his rattling the silver in your boudoir, I mean, and everything." He gave her what he considered a strong, comforting smile.

"It's up two flights." The girl clung to her idea. Jerry took his hat and laid it carefully on a chair. He removed his light outer coat and dusted his hands.

"Would you care to come with me?" he asked.

"Up—up to the boudoir?" She seemed to lack enthusiasm.

"I mean," said Jerry, "it would be a shame for me to—ah—blunder into the wrong room and miss him." He tapped the tips of his fingers together. The girl contracted her fists again.

"I'll go—up to the drawing-room with you," she said. "The boudoir is at the top of the stairs on the third floor. We'd better go quietly." She led the way up the first flight, tiptoeing. Jerry walked close behind her, not tiptoeing at all. He kicked the backs of the stairs. He coughed convulsively.

Perhaps the burglar was deaf. . . .

They reached the top and the girl walked noiselessly along the hall, Jerry following. She reached the door of the drawing-room, turned and pointed up the stairs to a door at the top.

"That's it," she whispered. She stepped into the drawing-room and closed the door behind her.

Alone in the hall, Jerry looked at the blank white panels of the door and thought. There were the stairs he had just come up. The street was at the bottom of them. Not two miles south was the residence of the Gordons—who must have arrived at the meat by this time. His bride-to-be was waiting for him. His prospective parents-in-law were waiting for him. That way lay peace and health and all that sort of thing. A little snooting, perhaps, but perfectly safe. This way was the route to a hospital or to a mortuary parlor. In Dud Perry's evening clothes.

He wished the girl would come out and look at him that way again—with those trusting blue eyes above that trembling mouth.

The door behind him opened softly. He turned to meet the eyes of the girl he must champion. They were trusting eyes.

"Which door?" he whispered, loudly enough, he hoped, to reach comfortably to the roof. She pointed again at the door at the top of the stairs.

He marched up.

"WHO'S there?" Jerry said, at least an octave lower than he had ever heard himself before. There was not a sound. The burglar had heard his warnings, he supposed, and gone. Still, he wished the hall light had been a little brighter.

"Who's there?" he asked again, although he did not really expect the burglar, if any, to make his presence known.

The silence was thick and throbbing.

Jerry Tinker stepped into an almost pitch-black room. He saw his shadow moving enormously before him. He caught sight of looming, shapeless masses in the gloom about him. He took two more steps forward and tried to locate a light of some sort . . .

The burglar landed on his back with a mighty grunt.

Jerry just missed dropping dead and fooling the burglar completely. His nerves tingled with the shock. But that lasted only a fraction of a second.

The burglar had made a tactical error. He had given up the advantage he had held when he was lurking mysteriously in the shadows. Had he groaned dismally and rattled a chain or two, the victory would have been his without a conflict. As it was, he became reassuringly definite: warm and heavy. He traded a thousand dollars' worth of eeriness for a nickel's worth of temporary physical advantage. He had no proper understanding of the psychological side of his business.

Jerry found himself in a perfectly plain fight with a man who grunted. He went at it with rather considerable relief.

He swung himself round sharply to fling the load from his back. The burglar clung. Jerry lost his balance and the two crashed into something which had been covered with a good many glass things up to that time.

That was the first minute of the battle, which ended in a draw when they rolled into a chaise longue and Jerry hit his head and stunned himself momentarily. The burglar scrambled to his feet, paused only for a parting kick, and fled to the back of the house and down some uncarpeted stairs which resounded with his unhesitating footsteps.

JERRY lay there for a minute with his eyes closed. He was tired. It had been a tough burglar. He heard his hostess open the door of the drawing room on the floor below. He pulled himself up on his shaky legs and sat down unexpectedly on the chaise longue which had played him the nasty trick. His head was swimming a little, but he bethought him of the damsel on whose behalf he had ridden forth to battle.

"He's gone," he called to her in a hollow voice. He heard no more sounds from below.

"He's gone," he said again. Then he noticed that the girl was standing in the doorway. She came into the room and switched on the lights. She looked at him and at the room and her mouth dropped open.

"Oh!" she gasped. He organized a smile and flashed it at her.

"A little mussed?" he asked.

"Are—are you all right?"

He stretched out his arms and bent his legs. "I guess so." But her fears continued. She walked to his side and stood staring at him. He got to his feet and found himself stronger.

"Perfectly all right," he said. Then he caught sight of himself in a cheval glass opposite and sat down again. "I am rather a mess."

"You're quite sure . . . ?" She was solicitous.

"Oh, quite. Quite. I saw myself in the glass."

"I mean that you're all right?"

"Oh, yes. Much better than I look."

"I'm so sorry!"

"NOT at all. The pleasure is all mine. A very fine burglar. Distinctly high type. Quite Marquis of Queensberry. Nice boy. Been a great pleasure to meet him . . ."

"Would you like some whisky?" she interrupted.

A peaceful, natural smile spread itself over Jerry's face. He licked his lips. She went into the next room and returned with a bottle and a glass.

"Only one glass?" he asked.

"You did the fighting."

"But you were under just as great a strain."

"My husband wouldn't like——"

"Your husband!"

"Yes. Why?"

"This husband of yours," he inquired. "Where is he? Why wasn't he here to take this matter up with the burglar?" She bit her lip.

"He's—he's angry with me," she said. "I had a man in for tea yesterday, and he came home and found out. He was very angry. He is dreadfully jealous."

"And rightly. Very properly," said Jerry.

"But he's so unreasonable. The man was a friend of my brother's. I've known him for years."

"One's beautiful wife does not entertain her brother's friends at tea," Jerry remarked sagely. "It isn't done. There have been plays about that sort of thing." She pouted, and he admired her for being able to pout so charmingly.

"He's probably sitting in some club drinking," she said. "When he's

"One's beautiful wife does not entertain her brother's friends at tea," Jerry remarked sagely. "It isn't done. There have been plays about that sort of thing." She pouted, and he admired her for being able to pout so charmingly.

"He's probably sitting in some club drinking," she said. "When he's horrid he drinks and when he drinks he's more horrid than ever."

Jerry was facing the glass again. He had discovered that his silk waistcoat—which was his own—was uninjured. He was thinking of the Gordons at their salad course. He was wondering how he could get to Eleventh street for dessert. Here he stood in the remains of what had been the last respectable evening clothes in the city.

"How big a man is your husband?" he asked.

The girl inhaled sharply and made a little noise in her throat.

"Oh!" she gasped. "Oh, you wouldn't think of fighting with him? He's all right, really. Oh, you wouldn't!"

Jerry's eyebrows jumped up an inch.

"Fighting with him? Good heavens, no! I was just wondering about your husband's evening clothes."

"Why—but, of course, that's it. You take Harry's clothes. If he had been home on time, he would have had to fight the burglar, anyway. It's only right. Of course!" She rose and trotted into the next room. He could hear her rummaging about.

He took out his watch, brushed away particles of the broken crystal, and observed that it was ten minutes before eight. He despaired of the dessert, but held out high hopes for a demi-tasse. He began trying out a lie about having been called suddenly to the bedside of a dying relative. An impoverished aunt, he thought, would do very nicely. In Yonkers or Tenafly or some such place. Aunt Emily . . . Local color about time-tables came to his fertile mind. He saw the lie taking form . . .

The girl burst in with her arms full of clothes.

"HE'S just about your size," she panted. "Isn't it lucky? It served him right, too. I'm just glad you're going to take his things. The idea of leaving me here alone with only the maids! And they locked themselves right up in the kitchen as soon as I mentioned the burglar." She threw the precious clothes on the chaise longue.

"The bath is through that door there," she said. "You'll find towels and things." She went out and closed the door behind her.

Jerry Tinker burst into feverish activity. In not more than a minute and a half he had yanked himself out of Dud Perry's erstwhile clothing. He dashed to the bathroom, ran a basin full of cold water and plunged his whole head into it, came up spluttering, groping for a towel. He dried his face and found it fortunately unharmed. He straightened his hair. In the absence of a brush he wrapped a towel about his hand and flattened his locks into something resembling their earlier smoothness. He slithered his hands in soapsuds, ran cold water on them, dried them. In another instant he was back in the boudoir, transferring studs from one shirt to another with lightning fingers. Progress was splendid. He felt that he might miss the demi tasse, but he was reasonably sure of arriving in time to join the ladies. . . .

HE HAD the shirt on and fastened and the tie smoothed into a neat bow; he was just getting into the trousers, when a sound from below came to his ears. It was not a pleasant sound, not a sound that made for nervous quiet or peace of mind.

It was the sound of the husband of the house, engaged, from the suggestions that filtered through the door, in a correct imitation of a sea lion.

With a leap and a yank Jerry Tinker had the trousers on.

A jealous husband, with a way of being nastier than ever when he had been drinking! A husband about a size and a half larger than Jerry, if his clothes were properly cut! A husband who was now engaged in giving a few preliminary howls of wrath before mounting the stairs to attend to his wife's clandestine visitor. . . . Jerry's finger fumbled at the suspenders. . . .

The door flew open.

On the threshold, outlined against the soft light of the hall, stood the master of the house. He was built much like Jerry Tinker, but a little larger in all directions. He must have been a few years older, for his hair was graying over the ears. His face was the red of Kipling's works in limp leather. It was contorted with emotions. He was swaying just noticeably.

Jerry Tinker bowed civilly.

The husband did not seem to be mollified by the gesture. He took a stride forward as a political speaker does when he arrives at his peroration. He folded his arms across his chest. Jerry wondered just how many clubs he had been drinking in—and what his wife had told him.

"So!" shouted the husband. Saliva appeared disconcertingly at the corners of his mouth. "So! I have caught you!"

"Not yet," said Jerry, stretching out a hand accurately and capturing his accuser's nicely tailored dress coat from the chaise longue.

"What do you propose to do?" the husband said, lowering his voice for emphasis.

"I propose to—ah—leave," said Jerry. "Almost immediately."

"Heh!" said the man violently, with a world of sarcasm for so brief a remark. He licked his lips. "You propose to leave!" Jerry took advantage of the dramatic pause to get his arms into the waistcoat.

"Oh, yes," said Jerry. "Must go, you know. Late for dinner as it is. Must positively be hurrying along. Well" . . . Jerry's voice suggested nothing but the fondest of partings. The other was licking his lips again.

"I HAVE a good mind to shoot you," he said bitterly. "I have a good mind to shoot you in your tracks like a dog." He took three or four steps to a table and pulled out the drawer. Jerry remembered the route the burglar had taken.

"Not in my tracks!" he said. He turned and ducked into the bathroom, skidded across the tiled floor to the door at the other end. Fortunately, the back stairs were there. They were pitch black. Jerry fell down the first few, then caught his balance and ran down the others, making better time. . . .

A door presented itself, and Jerry flung himself through it into a pantry. Without altering his stride he slammed the door behind him. He crashed into a china closet and bounded from it to a swing door that gave before him. In the rear—on the dark stairs, he thought—he heard an indescribably loud explosion.

"Stop!" The husband's shout came, somewhat muffled, from the pantry.

Jerry found himself at the top of the stairs to the front door. He saw no sense in stopping. In perhaps a fifth of a second he was at the bottom of the stairs. He saw his hat and coat where he had left them, scooped them up as he passed. He got into the vestibule, through it. He was on the cool sidewalk once more. Somewhere inside he heard another shot. . . .

Jerry Tinker looked about him. A few feet away he saw a taxi, the driver just climbing into it. His desire for speed impelled him toward it. His instinct told him that it was a cab of ill omen. There was something familiar about it. . . . There could be no doubt of it; it was his borrowed taxi. . . . Jerry turned and ran toward Madison avenue. . .

I am glad to say that the taxi driver had been through a good deal that evening and that he was not as alert as he might have been. He was conscious of the fact that a man was running down the sidewalk. He noted that the man was carrying some of his clothes, that he wore no coat and that his waistcoat was flying in the wind behind him. But he did not connect the fleeing figure with his brush with the law. His oaths, as he stepped on the starter, were leisurely oaths.

Jerry located another cab on Madison avenue, and it swerved over at his wave. He shouted the number on Eleventh street. The driver nodded, and Jerry got in. The cab started. Jerry pulled the window aside and spoke to the driver.

"Take your time," he said. "Drive slowly."

"I am so sorry about dinner," Mrs. Gordon began. "We were planning" . . . Jerry bowed for the fourth time.

"It is I who am sorry," he said, in his softest voice. "You see, I was called"——

"WE WERE afraid," Mr. Gordon rasped, "that you wouldn't get the message."

Jerry started, but repressed his desire to ask what message.

"Poor Aunt Emily," he murmured.

"Rosalie," said Phyllis, who had slithered into the room behind her mother.

"Rosalie?" . .

"Yes," said Mrs. Gordon. "My Aunt Rosalie, you know; Phyllis' great aunt. . . . I suppose it's really better for her, poor soul."

"Oh, yes," Jerry agreed. "It is better—if you can look at it that way."

"I know you will forgive us for not having you to dinner tonight. . . . It didn't seem respectful. And I thought we could all sit at home instead of going to the theater." . . . She seated herself.

"You are punctual, Mr. Tinker." Jerry had turned away from Mr. Gordon for the moment, and the voice cut into the side of his head. For perhaps the fifteenth time that evening he was ready to faint. He turned. "I said in my message for you to come about 8:20; and—by Jove!—it was exactly 8:20 when you rang the bell."

"I always try to be on time, sir."

There was another pause, and Mrs. Gordon rose to the occasion with a topic of conversation.

"I must say," she said, "I'm glad we are going to the country next week. There isn't a soul in town. . . . Nothing ever happens in New York after the first of June. Don't you find it so, Mr. Tinker?"

"Precisely, Mrs. Gordon."

Well, anyway he introduced us to Valentino and Vilma Banky and Syd Chaplin and "Chuck" Reisner, who is directing Syd in "The Better 'Ole," and finely, in the Famous Players studio, he asked me if I wanted to meet Pola Negri and I said yes and Miss Negri was resting between scenes of "Naughty Cinderella," which they are going to call "Good and Naughty" for no reason, and she was reading a magazine and I will hardly forget the self-control she exhibited when the introduction was made.

"Miss Negri," said Teddy, "this is Mr. Lardner, the writer."

"Oh," said Miss Negri, and never raised her eyes from the magazine.

At the Universal City we had our photograph taken with Norman Kerry who was busy with a picture called "The Love Thief." I asked him what the story was about and he said he didn't know as he had only been working on it 2 months. While he was there a lady come up and asked for his autograph and he wrote it for her. It is no novelty for screen stars to be asked for their autograph by mail, but the practice of movie fans coming right up to you and asking for it in person is libel to cause a upheaval in the lives of Hollywood's artists, many of who will half to take a course in penmanship and spelling.

FOR BRIDGE PLAYERS

By Wynne Ferguson

THE bidding at auction is so generally regarded as more important than the play that players, especially the inexperienced, are apt to overlook the importance of good play. Many a game and rubber that is lost could have been won if a little more care and thought had been used in playing the hand. Suppose you have won the contract at four spades, B having bid four hearts. A opens the nine of hearts and the dummy's cards and your own are as follows:

h—Q 7 4
c—K Q 10
d—A 7
s—J 10 7 4 2

Y
A B Z

declarer
h—K 6 2
c—8 4 3 d—5
s—A K 9 8 5 3

You play the four of hearts from dummy, B plays the 10 and you win the trick with the king. Here is where the average player usually falls down. The proper thing to do is to count your losing tricks and figure out if you have game. If you have, everything is all right, but if you haven't then try to plan a way to turn one or more of your losing tricks into winners. In looking at the hand given, it is apparent that Y Z must lose the ace of clubs, two heart tricks and possibly another club trick, unless a way can be found to so play the hand that there will be only three losers. Z's first play is to play the ace of spades and if the spades don't drop, he should then lead the king. After taking the spades out, Z should lead the diamond from his own hand, play the ace in Y's hand and return the diamond, trumping in his own hand. Z should now lead a low club from his hand. If A has the ace of clubs and plays it, Z can only lose two more heart tricks. If B has the ace of clubs and wins the trick, he must either lead back clubs or hearts. In either event, Z can only lose two more tricks. If he leads a diamond, Z can trump in his own hand and discard in the other. If B has the ace of clubs and doesn't play it, Z should play a low heart from Y's hand, forcing B in the lead. After making his two heart tricks, he must lead the clubs or give Z a ruff in one hand and a discard in the other. It is a pretty hand and shows the value of sizing up your own and dummy's hands before you start to play. The cards held by A and B in the example hand are as follows:

A		B
h—9 3 c—9 7 6 2 d—J 10 9 6 4 3 s—6	Y A B Z	h—A J 10 8 5 c—A J 5 d—K Q 8 2 s—Q

Place these cards of all four players on the table and play out hand as suggested. It will be good practice.

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid three hearts, A and Y passed and B bid three spades. Z and A passed. Y bid four hearts and B bid four spades. Z bid five hearts, A and Y passed and B doubled. All passed and A opened a low spade, which Z won in Y's hand with the ace. Z now led the queen of hearts from Y's hand, which B won with the ace. Z played the deuce of hearts and A failed to follow suit. B then led the king of spades, which Z trumped with the trey of hearts. How should Z now play the hand? Z should lead a club and win the trick in Y's hand with the ace. The point of this play is that Z cannot afford to finesse the club. If he does and B has the singleton king Z will be unable to make his contract. By playing his ace, Y is in the lead and should return the heart. Z should take two heart tricks, dropping B's jack and lead two more rounds. He should then lead a low club. If he can force the king of clubs on this trick, he can make his contract, as he can discard his diamond on a winning club. It is a clever little example and should be carefully noted.

Problem No. 2 and Solution.

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win seven of the eight tricks against any defense? Z plays Ace and King of spades. The subsequent play depends upon whether A or B will take the third trick in spades.

1. If B has retained the nine or eight, Z plays another spade at trick 3. B must then lead another diamond or a heart. If he leads a diamond, Z and Y win and take a second round of diamonds. They then win the remaining tricks with the ace of hearts in Z's hand and the ace of clubs and the last diamond in Y's. If B leads a hear , Z makes two tricks in hearts. A is put to a discard. He cannot throw a club, for this would make all Y's clubs good, so he discards a diamond. Z then gets into Y's hand with the ace of clubs, and leads the ten of diamonds through B.

2. If B plays the eight and nine of spades on tricks 1 and 2, so that A will take the third trick in spades with the seven, Z must play the knave of clubs and the ace of hearts at tricks 3 and 4 before putting A in with the spade at trick 5. If A now leads diamonds, Z-Y make the remaining tricks. If he leads a club, Y will win the trick with the ace and B is forced to discard. If he discards a heart, Z will discard a diamond. If B discards a diamond, Z will discard a heart. In either event, Y-Z will win the balance of the tricks. It is a very clever problem in discarding, so should be carefully studied.

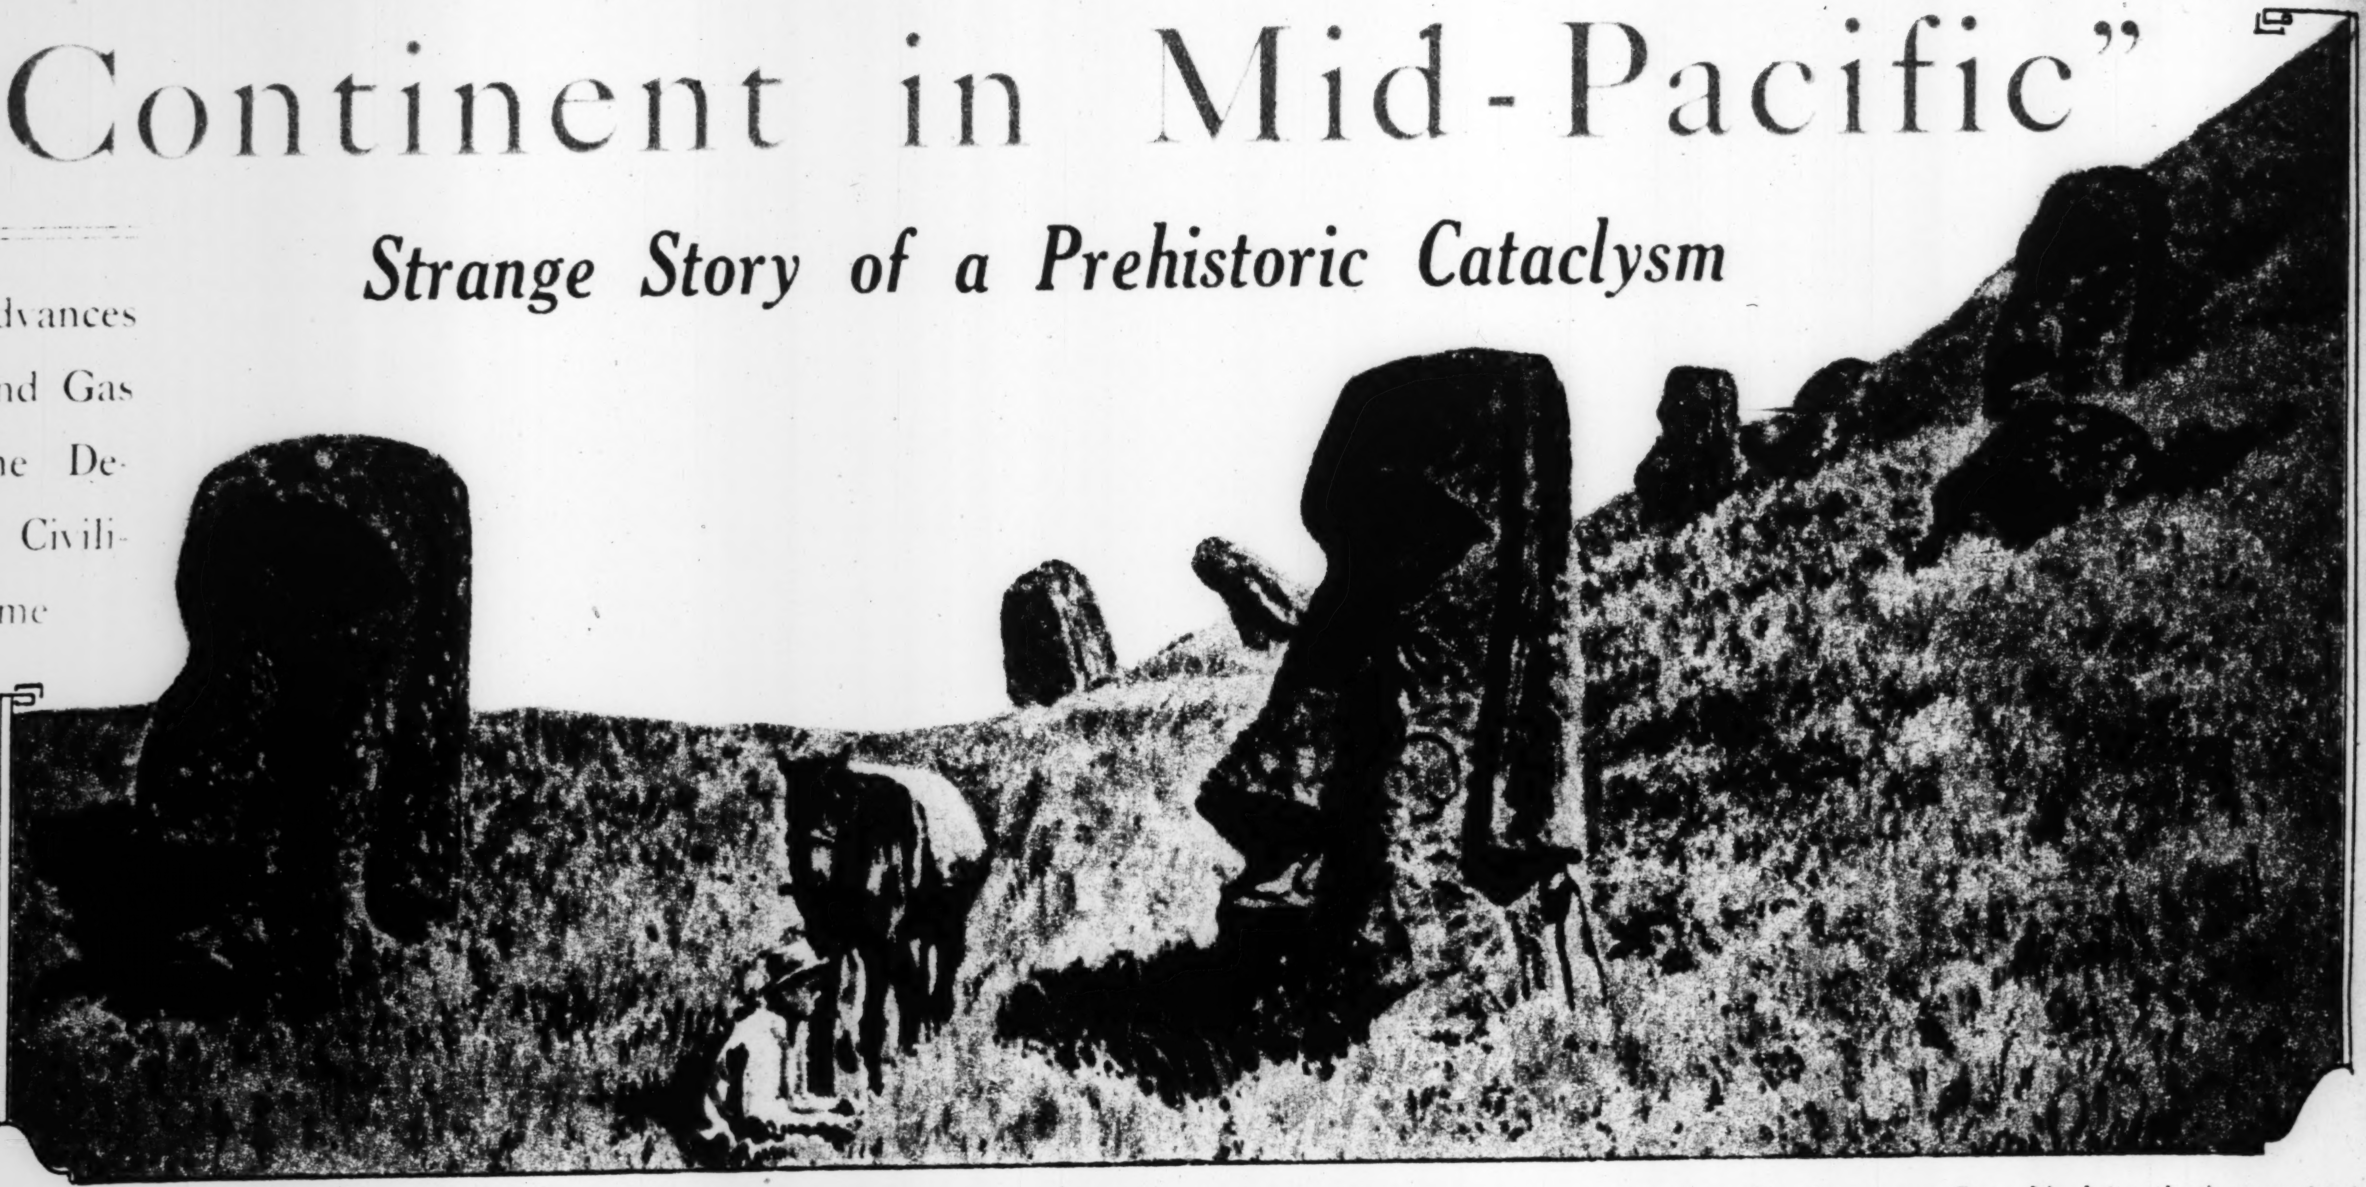
"The Continent in Mid-Pacific"

Strange Story of a Prehistoric Cataclysm

A Noted Archeologist Advances the Theory of Underground Gas Chambers to Explain the Destruction of Our Earliest Civilization's Supposed Home



Mysterious prehistoric statues on Easter Island (see chart), supposed to be a high peak on the sunken Continent of Mu.

Col. James Churchward of Mount Vernon, New York, is a widely known archeologist, geologist and metallurgical chemist. Formerly an officer in the British Colonial Army, he has devoted many years to research and exploration in the ancient cities of India, where he was instructed in sacred and legendary lore by a native scholar-priest whom he describes as "the greatest archeologist the world has ever known."

By COL. JAMES CHURCHWARD

THE recent reports from France that the land in the Atlantic Ocean seems to be rising to the surface, and may be the lost continent of Atlantis reappearing, bring to mind the terrible cataclysms which swallowed not only Atlantis but the vast continent of Mu in the Pacific Ocean and several smaller stretches of land. Far down in the darkness and cold of the ocean floor, these lost lands now rest. They were destroyed by gigantic upheavals of the earth's crust, which may have been due to the formation of long gas belts under ground.

The legendary story of the destruction of these lands, especially of Mu, the Motherland of Man, is a strange one indeed. From it we learn how the mystery of the white races in the South Sea Islands may be solved, and how one of the world's greatest civilizations flourished in mid-Pacific and then was completely obliterated in a single night.

A few decades ago scientists would have been very doubtful about the possibility of the former existence in the Pacific Ocean of a continent such as Mu. But since then records have come to light and comparisons have been made which prove that such a land did at one time exist. The proofs are of several types.

First, there are the sacred tablets found in an Indian college temple and deciphered with the aid of a learned priest. They had been written by the Naacals in Burma, and they told how the Naacals had originally come from Mu, the land in the center of the Pacific. They also told of the story of creation, which had originated in this land, and finally, they related the destruction of Mu.

Second, there is confirmation of these accounts in other ancient manuscripts, including such a classic as the Hindu epic, Ramayana, written by the great sage and historian Vlamiki. In one place, for instance, he mentions the Naacals as coming to Burma from the land of their birth in the east—that is, the direction of the Pacific Ocean. Another document confirming the story of the sacred tablets is the Troano MS., now in the British Museum. This is an ancient Maya book written in Yucatan. It speaks of "the Lands of the West," using the same symbols for Mu that we find in Burma and Egypt, and it describes the destruction of the continent. Still other written references to Mu can be found in the Codex Cortesianus, a Maya book of about the same date as the Troano MS.

THIRD, there are existing ruins which by their location and the symbols with which they are decorated, tell of the lost continent of Mu, the Motherland of Man. On some of the South Sea Islands, notably the Easter Island, Rarotonga, Mangaia Island, the Cook group and the Caroline group, there stand today remains of old stone temples which take us back to the time of Mu. At Uxmal in Yucatan, Central America, a ruined temple bears inscriptions commemorative of the "Lands to the West, whence we came." And the mysterious Mexican Pyramid southwest of Mexico City was, according to its inscriptions, raised as a monument to commemorate the destruction of these same "Lands to the West." Also, we must consider the presence today, on those South Sea Islands, of the "white" natives mentioned by Frederick O'Brien.

Fourth, there is the universality of certain old symbols and customs, as in Central America and other seats of ancient civilizations. These symbols and customs are so nearly identical as to make it certain they came from a common source, Mu.

Chart of Pacific Ocean before the Continent of Mu was submerged. (1) Great central gas belt. (2) the Pacific cross-belt system.

It is not possible here to give more than the bare outline of the scientific basis upon which the story of Mu rests, but I shall be glad to furnish such additional details as may be called for by students interested in the matter.

With this background, then, we can follow the tale of the destruction of Mu and, by analogy, of Atlantis, if we imagine ourselves back 12,000, or perhaps 15,000, years.

WE FIND that the continent of Mu was then a vast stretch of rolling country extending from north of Hawaii to Easter Island on the south. It was from five to six thousand miles in length and some three or four thousand miles broad. We do not know whether it was an undivided area of land or whether it was split up by straits into two or three parts. From the many inscriptions which speak of "the Lands of the West," however, it seems that Mu was composed of three areas of land separated from each other by narrow channels.

In this pleasant land lived sixty millions of human beings, at a high stage of development. In many ways their civilization compared favorably with ours. They were for the greater part a white-skinned people, exceedingly handsome, if we are to believe the records, with their dark eyes and black hair. These white-skinned ones dominated a lesser number of yellow, black and brown inhabitants. Many generations before, they had adopted a system of monarchical government. There was but one religion. It was the worship of the deity through symbols, and its creed included a belief in an immortal soul which eventually returned to "the Great Source" from which it had come. Their high priest was called "Ra Mu," and became the representative of the deity.

Great carved stone temples without roofs served as places of worship. They were sometimes called "transparent temples," as the absence of a roof allowed the rays of the sun to stream into the interior and fall on the heads of the faithful who were praying to Ra, as the sun itself was known. It was considered to be the symbol of the collective attributes of the deity.

These temples were magnificent examples of construction, for the inhabitants of the land had mastered many of the principles of architecture. Great palaces of stone, huge statues and monoliths were erected throughout the country.

The people of Mu were remarkable navigators. Even in this far-off time, before the "historical era," human beings were sailing all over the world from the Motherland of Mu, planting colonies in the lands which we know today as Central America, Egypt, Mesopotamia and Burma. In fact the whole world of mankind at this time owed allegiance to the great Pacific continent. Mu was the center of the earth's civilization, learning, trade and commerce.

How long Mu had been in existence we do not know for a certainty, but the time can be estimated at 40,000 years at least. While this civilization had been developing its culture on the surface of the land, nature had been working busily underground, hidden and unnoticed. The way for the great catastrophe was being prepared. Gas pockets played the leading role.

THESE pockets underneath the earth's crust, filled only with hot gases, undermined the surface of the land. There were different systems of pockets. First came a series of isolated chambers lying from one to seven miles beneath the surface. These were connected with one another but isolated from the next series a mile or so below, which was in turn followed by still another series, vast in extent, which stretched along at a depth of ten to twenty miles or more below the cities of Mu.

While Mu was flourishing, gas belts were being developed underneath the floor of the Pacific Ocean. They stretched in long, irregular lines for thousands of miles, and some of them passed beneath Mu. Their gases penetrated to the lower level of chambers, which then became overcompressed. As a result fissures opened in the rock, the gases escaped to the next series of chambers above, and were forced from there through the rock again into the upper level.

Still the enormous pressure kept increasing. The gases had only one means of expanding—to tear through the earth's topmost crest and rush out into the open air.

So one day, in a year which we can guess to have been about 10,000 B. C., Mu was shaken by fearful rumblings. The southern part of the country was torn by volcanic upheavals and along the sandy shores great tidal waves rolled in and destroyed many a city. The volcanoes belched out their fire and smoke on a flat country, so the lava did not run for any distance. Instead, it piled up around the craters and cooled in the form of immense cones, some of which may still be seen today.

This first escape of the compressed gases from underground was not enough to wreck the entire land. The volcanic workings gradually ceased, the population resumed their former pursuits and in a few generations this ominous warning had been relegated to history.

Then the second eruption came, and this time it was a decisive calamity. Gases from the chambers underneath rushed out into the atmosphere through volcanic spouts, with deafening roars of huge tongues of flame. The chambers, now empty, had nothing to sustain their roofs, which collapsed and fell. This occurred throughout the entire extent of Mu. The whole surface of the continent collapsed and dropped into the empty chambers below. The waters of the ocean rushed into the vast hole thus formed and in a short time nothing was left of this home of civilization except a few ridges of land still rising above the water level. These were the places that had had the good fortune not to rest on subterranean gas pockets, so the emptying of the chambers had not undermined them.

ON THESE islands in the midst of a turbulent sea the remnants of Mu's population huddled, waiting for the terrific quakes to abate. They had seen their temples and palaces, their ships and their roads go crashing down, to be swallowed by the ocean. Almost all their fellow humans had been engulfed by this catastrophe. The few now left, all that remained of the Motherland of Man, the ruler of the world, were now destitute. They had nothing—no tools, no clothing, no shelter, barely a foothold of land, and no food. Around them hissed and steamed the boiling waters that had rushed into the fiery pit when the continent sank.

Only the small islands were left. Some of them we know today as the South Sea Islands and some of their inhabitants can claim, as ancestors, the people of Mu.

The destruction of Mu affected a wide area. Such an immense amount of water rushed in to fill up the hole left by the disappearing continent that the shore line of the countries bordering on the Pacific was lowered to a considerable extent. Much new land appeared along the coasts when the waters of the ocean swept away to fill the gap left by the continent of Mu.

THE Land of Mu was not the only part of the earth's surface that collapsed during the period of upheavals. The land bridge over the Bering Sea between Alaska and Asia suffered a similar fate. A narrow strip running from what is now California down to the northwest corner of Colombia, South America, also sank. The overland route to Europe in the North Atlantic Ocean, extending from America to Norway, via Greenland, went down, as did a small area of land off the east coast of Central America.

Then there was the celebrated disappearance of Atlantis, the mid-Atlantic continent, which, at the time of its destruction, had apparently succeeded the submerged Mu as the center of the world's civilization. Like Mu, it sank beneath the waves when volcanoes erupted and the land collapsed into the gas chambers beneath.

Whether your years number twenty, forty, or sixty—whether you like best to glide dreamily over a dance floor, tramp briskly through the country with your dogs, or just take it easy in your favorite chair—you'll be constantly comfortable wearing a Self-Flex Belt.

Because the Self-Flex Belt expands and contracts with every breath, and flexes with even the slightest movement of the body muscles; it is comfortable to all men at all times.

It does away entirely with body welts caused by the tightness and muscle-resistance of the ordinary belt. Another reason why it's so comfortable.

The Self-Flex Belt in appearance is like any other high quality belt, but it has the "plus" features which only Self-Flex can give you. There is no rubber or elastic to rot or smell when dampened with perspiration.

The Self-Flex concealed spring is guaranteed to outwear the strap.

In short, the Self-Flex Belt is a comfortable, flexible belt, made of highest quality materials—a belt that flexes with even the slightest movement of your body muscles, and always keeps your shirt down and your trousers up.

Self-Flex Belts are made in a wide range of smart colors, widths, and grades of leather, and sold either with or without buckles. Any type of buckle fits the Self-Flex strap. If your haberdasher does not carry the Self-Flex Belt, send us his name and we will arrange to supply you.

"Oh, but they're hard on shoes!"

But millions of mothers are grateful in having found these "Better shoes for less money"

LIVING costs are high. Household allowances are generally limited. And dollars don't stretch.

But boys and girls go racing and tearing along just the same. It's such a wonderful world—so new to them!—they never think of easing the strain on the family purse by being careful with their shoes. "How can the budget for children's shoes be reduced?" you ask.

We have the answer. We have had thirty-five years of shoemaking experience. We make more than twelve million pairs of boys' and girls' shoes every year. Our facilities for tanning leather, making rubber soles and heels, and manufacturing shoes are among the largest in the world. All these advantages are reflected in shoes for boys and girls

Never before have you seen a line of shoes having so much quality for so little money.

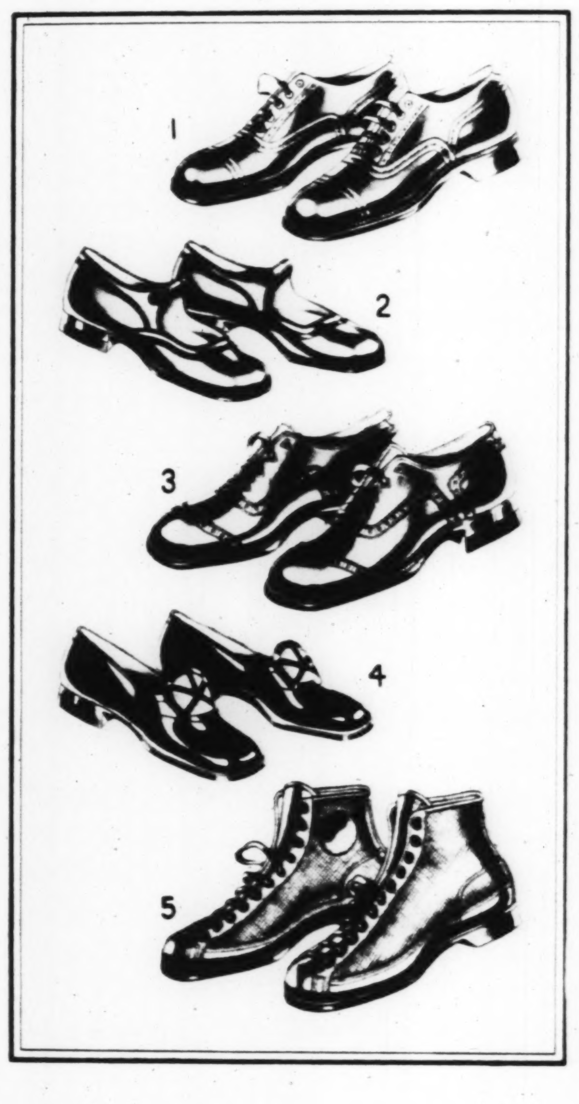
Never have you bought shoes made under working conditions such as exist in this "Industrial Democracy"—an organization whose principles and plan of operation are unique in the shoe industry. . . . Where 17,000 trained E-J Workers are given special incentives for putting their best workmanship into every pair of shoes they make.

Endicott-Johnson shoes are based on actual wearing tests. We put shoes on real, active youngsters. We try them out. Watch them wear. See that designs are right. Lasts correct. Soles, heels, toes and uppers proportionately strong.

Every step in the manufacture of Endicott-Johnson shoes is considered from the viewpoint of those who buy them.

Fifty thousand stores

We urge every mother of growing boys or girls to examine a pair of Endicott-Johnson shoes. Note the leather—tanned by ourselves, by special processes. The sturdy construction. The solid foundations. See how nicely these shoes are finished. The comfortable shapes. Up-to-date patterns. Finally, consider the reasonable prices*—made possible by our huge production.



Watch these shoes wear

Put Endicott-Johnson shoes on each of your children and see if your quest for "Better shoes for less money" has not, at last, been rewarded. If you don't know where there's a nearby store selling Endicott-Johnson shoes, we'll tell you—gladly. Write to

LOT MACHINE RAIDS RENEWED ON COURT ORDER

ALHOUN ALTERS ITTNER'S ORDER

rmits Seizures if Police Consider Mint Venders Patronized by Children to Be Gambling Devices.

Released from a temporary re-training order which for 19 days as protected mint-vending slot achines from seizure, police today wept down on soft drink bars, res-aurants and small stores, gather-g in machines which had been put operation since March 31.

The raids began within half an our after Circuit Judge Calhoun modified the restraining order ued by Judge Ittner, March 31, to give the police the right to ize the machines if they believed em to be gambling devices. Chief Police Gerk immediately issued structions to raid, and within a w hours six machines had been ized near police headquarters members of the gambling squad.

The squad went first to a restau-t at 1417 Market street, seizing machine, then to the candy re at 1735 Market street, where ook possession of two machines. each instance, the clerk in arge was arrested, accused of intaining a gambling device.

Patronized by Children.

Most of the machines now in e are of a new model bearing the name "St. Louis Mint Vending Co." They have been widely pat-ronized by children as well as grown persons, and police have consistently maintained that they re gambling devices.

Change of Venue Obtained.

The original restraining order ainst the police was issued on plaint of Walter R. Mueller, ing business as the St. Louis int Co. Today, Police Commis-ner Kortjohn and Freund filed motion with Judge Ittner asking change of venue on the general egation that he was prejudiced, d when the case was transferred Judge Calhoun's division, made plication for modification of the der.

With the teeth of the order awn and the police free to seize machines, Mueller and John lden, another slot machine sales-n, who has been allowed to in-vene in his suit, will have a nce next Monday to show that ir machines are not gambling vices. Argument on the issu-e of a permanent injunction ll be heard that day.

The new slot machines have n widely distributed to soft nk parlors, restaurants and all stores. As a typical instance, a confectionery at McCausland d Oakland avenues, 20 small ildren were gathered around the achine yesterday afternoon risk-g their nickels on chance of re-ceiving two or more 5-cent trading checks.
